Little Hope For Peace In Europe, Says Friend of President Wilson on His Return

NEW YORK, June 16.—Colonel E. M. House, of Texas and New York, President Wilson's close friend, returned to the United States after four and a half months in Europe, where he was constantly in touch with the chancelleries of the belligerent nations. When he left New York on January 30 Colonel House was described as an unofficial envoy of the President, but the White House denied he had been sent abroad by the President.

Nevertheless, when he returned he was met outside Sandy Hook by the United States coast guard cutter Manhattan, in charge of the Collector of the Port, Mr. Dudley Field Malone, and taken off the St. Paul, of the American line. He left Mrs. House to continue the trip with the St. Paul to the American line pier at Twenty-Third Street.

Colonel House will go to Washington at once to confer with President Wilson. After leaving the St. Paul he was taken to the New York Yacht Club, and later to the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Gordon Auchincloss, in Roslyn, L. I.

"I may go to Washington," he said. "I have not heard from President Wilson since I landed, and have not communicated with him."

The Colonel brings back a pessimistic of the war situation in Europe. He stated unequivocally that he had not gone abroad as an emissary for the President.

"It was said in the cable messages from Paris that your peace overtures had met with a rebuff," it was suggested to him.

"That was the biggest bit of nonsense printed about my trip," he commented.

While in Europe Colonel House conferred frequently with the Premier, Mr. Asquith, David Lloyd George, Sir Edward Grey and Lord Kitchener in England; Herr von Jagow and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, in Berlin, and with President Poincaire and the Foreign Minister, Mr. Delcasse in Paris. He passed most of his time in London, [illegible] in Paris for a week and in Berlin for three weeks, where he stopped with the American Ambassador, Mr. Gerrard.

"What is your opinion of the probable duration of the war?" was asked of Colonel House.

"Your opinion is as good as mine," he responded. "As good as Grey's or Delcasse's or von Jagow's," he added.

"What was your impression on the desire for peace? Is hopefulness for peace being manifested?"

"No, I couldn't find it so. Rather a hopelessness, I would call it,' said Colonel House.

"Is your impression a reflection of the views of the foreign statesmen with whom you talked?"

"That's a leading question," was the reply. "I know all of those gentlemen. I go abroad every year and see them on my trips."

The Colonel denied he had been called back to the United States by President Wilson. He would not say what reports he had made to the President from Europe, and when asked specifically if he had been in communication with the President, said:

"Any friend of the President would keep him informed of anything he might observe," and he smiled without replying when he asked if he had observed anything.

In a discussion of European conditions Colonel House said that the war fever seems as strong as ever with the great mass of the people as well as with the officials responsible for its conduct.

"Everybody is tired of the war," he said, "but I saw no diminution of popular support of the struggle."

Colonel House was in London when the Lusitania was sunk and was there when the first American note on the subject was despatched. He said the feeling in London was intense, but when he was asked if there was a desire that the United States enter the conflict he said opinion among the Allies was divided on that question.

The Colonel said that while his associations in Germany had been altogether with men in official life, he saw nothing of offence to Americans. He said he was treated courteously but had not come in contact with the masses. Mr. Gerard is highly esteemed in Berlin, he said, as is Mr. Sharp in Paris.

"Germany seems to have solved the food supply. There is no lack of food there," said Colonel House. "As for ammunition they seem to have plenty of it."

The Colonel was told it has been suggested that the United States lost its prestige as the probable peacemaker because of the resignation of Secretary Bryan.

"I didn't know we had that distinction," he commented.

Lacrosse Practice

Players Will Be Out at Central Park To-night

There will be a practice of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club at Central Park to-night at 6.30 o'clock, and every player is expected to be out, as this will likely be the last practice before Friday's game at Hastings. The Petes will journey to Hastings on the 1.30 train Friday afternoon. They will not lack for supporters as there will be a big crowd in Hastings on Friday with the Woodmen of the World excursion from Peterborough, via boat. The next home game will be on July 1st, with Campbellford.

LAWN BOWLING

The opening games on the green was largely attended, the players entering into the competition like old veterans, anxious for the fray. Greens being in good shape, the playing was very good, some finishes being very close. The following is the scores for the Fitzgerald prize:

Preliminary Round—

Jno. W. Mayneord vs.	W. H. Dayman
Skip 8	Skip 10
R. M. Waddell	T. C. Elliot

1st Round—

R. M. Waddell 11, W. H. Dayman 5.
T. Brightman 8; T. Ed. Pratt 10.
D. H. Moore 6, G. F. Cairns 12.
G. F. Cairns. 5; R. G. Cottrell, 10.
Skips Waddell, Pratt and Cottrell will play on Thursday evening at 7.15.

TRIGGER

The monthly shoot of the Trent Valley League will be held in Peterborough to-morrow at the grounds of the local Gun Club, and all the district teams are expected here. The local trap shooters are asked to be on hand, on time. The shoot will commence at 1 o'clock.

King George Hotel Remodelled

New Lessee Accomplishes Numerous Changes for the Betterment of This House

Few business enterprises will make any progress unless guided by men of experience. This applies to the change of management in the King George Hotel, Simcoe street.

Mr. W. H. Hamilton, who is the new proprietor, has had a long training in the hotel business, and comes from the city of Guelph. The improvements which he has accomplished in the short time he took possession is a credit to his practical knowledge of the needs of the modern public house of entertainment.

The King George, when it was first planned, was somewhat deficient in interior conveniences and comfort, and its sanitary arrangements did not quite accord with an up-to-date house. The new plans, however, have overcome these defects, and so complete and satisfactory has the work of remodelling the interior been, that an inspection will reveal nothing that would not rank in the equipment of a first class hotel.

The dining room leading directly off the office, is much improved; off which is a reading and writing room with marble tables and writing desks. In the rotunda is situated the new business office and registry desk, adjoining which is a new silent salesman stocked with choice brands of cigars and tobaccos. The bedrooms are neatly and modernly finished and kept in the clean and inviting condition which is appreciated by people who make their homes in hotels. The well-stocked bar has been entirely changed, and is now so conducted that good order and proper methods are adopted in its management. Important attention has been given to the sanitary condition of the house and baths and toiled rooms are installed in a first-class manner. The firm of Adamson & Dobbin had charge of the new plumbing system, while the new electric light system was installed by Messrs. F. R. J. Macpherson & Co. Fine large plate glass windows have been reconstructed in the front, and each floor has been completely renovated, decorated with new ingrain wall paper, painted and grained throughout, the work having been under the superintendence of Ex-Alderman George Duncan's skilled craftsmanship.

CARDINAL MERCIER, of Belgium, who is again having trouble with the inhuman occupants of Belgium—those German huns who spare not church or state, unless on their own oppressive oath. The Cardinal is said to be a prisoner in a fortress.

A VERDICT OF $300 FOR PLAINTIFF

a screen surrounding Harding. The jury would not really know what was behind it, but would be led to believe that something bad was there. In other words, the defence by this plan attempted to bluff or to "work the jury" into being influenced against Harding, whereas defendant should not have gone beyond the particular slander alleged to have been spoken by Batten.

WORSE THAN BEFORE.

Mr. Kerr asked the jury to remember this. It should not be that the plaintiff would be sent home, his character blackened by insinuations worse than when he came. "Who steals my purse steals trash," counsel quoted. Mr. Gordon had remarked that one witness said that Harding wanted to "stick Batten for damages," that he was merely looking for easy money. Money can be restored, but the city's treasury could not restore a man's good name once it was stained. Harding would suffer most in his everyday relations with his neighbours. His wife would not escape, neither would their children, who would be branded as the children of a thief. Mere theft of money touched only the pocket. The theft of a man's reputation scorched his soul.

SHOULD BE EXEMPLARY.

And Mr. Kerr told the jury that they should award damages, which would impress the community with the necessity of doing away with that form of slander, that it was a grave danger to the community. They should not allow a small sum which would indicate that slander could be practical almost with impunity, nor too large an amount, which would concentrate attention mostly on the feature of damages.

Mr. Kerr referred to Swarts, against whom he wished to raise no imputations. The German Government tried a man from his oath of allegiance taken in a foreign country and said he was forgiven. Mr. Kerr said he would have had a right to point out that the evidence of any German should be taken with a grain of salt. But Swarts was born in England, and had lived in Canada, and there was no imputation against him.

In another passage Mr. Kerr likened Batten to a phonograph. He lauded Joe Crowe who, he said, with a pin prick, flattened the gas back J. J. and Batten had filled. Joe had said that up to a year ago he had never heard anything bad about Harding's reputation. And witness was produced by Batten.

Judge's Suggestion Refused.

Upon court being resumed after dinner yesterday Frank Swarts was called by Mr. Gordon.

Before the witness was examined His Honour called Mr. Gordon and Mr. Kerr to the bench and afterwards addressed the plaintiff and defendant. He remarked that until yesterday a.m. he was not aware that the two men were related. It had been intimated to him that a settlemen had been proposed and he purposely delayed going to the bench after the noon hour to allow time for some arrangement to be made. He directed them to go with their respective counsels into a private room and see what they could do. He pointed out how much better it would be if they could agree without proceeding further with the case. However, if they could not arrange things satisfactorily they were to return and he would have the case go on. His Honour believed it would add to the peace of the township if a settlement was made in some manner.

Loud talking from the Barristers' room to which the parties adjourned elicited the remark from the bench: "What do the gentlemen of the jury think of the chance for a settlement now?"

Quietness reigned for a few moments, steadier heads probably getting in a little advice, but another issue of sounds of voices emphasized by thumps upon the barristers' table made the jurors resign themselves to hearing the case resumed. Their hopes were several times raised for an "afternoon off," only to be ruthlessly dashed down again by another outburst from the direction of the barristers' room.

After 25 minutes the parties returned without any settlement being made.

How long have you lived in the township of Dummer?

About a year.

Objection from Mr. Kerr.

The witness was only 17 years of age. Mr. Gordon was allowed to ask what qualifications the witness had for knowing the general reputation of Mr. Harding.

When another question about the general reputation of Harding up to August last was asked, Mr. Kerr objected again. Mr. Gordon remarked that he was having a difficult time to get any answers. He was not allowed to bring out the points he was after.

Mr. Kerr asked the witness for his full name.

"Frank Victor Peter Swarts," was the answer.

Were you in Germany last summer?

Excuse me. I am not a German. I am a British subject.

Here the witness produced a certificate that he was born in England.

Mr. Kerr was checked at this point from the bench who did not think it fair to question him in that line on account of his name.

Mr. Sidney Manning was the next witness.

Do you know the general reputation of Harding up to last summer?

Objection from Mr. Kerr.

Mr. Gordon remarked that he did not believe he had asked a question in this case which was not objected to by Mr. Kerr. He had been thwarted in every way.

"You two gentlemen will soon be as bad as your clients were in the other room," said His Worship.

The answer of the witness was allowed. He did not think the general reputation of Harding was very good last summer.

Witness heard a conversation in the Lakefield hotel when Mr. Joseph Crowe, Mr. Batten and Mr. Payne were there. Mr. Payne there denied that he had told Batten that Harding had anything to do with the wood.

To Mr. Kerr witness said he did not want to be in this case. He thought his reputation qualified him to judge another man's reputation.

Mr. Batten has on more than one occasion told you that Harding stole the wood?

No, he did not.

Other witnesses were Jos. Crowe, Bruce Reid and Melville Freeburn.

CONTRACTOR IS SUED FOR $220

The County Court resumed this morning. The first case called was that of Frederick T. Mahood, who is suing John Hayes for $220.04, said to be the balance due for concrete work. The sum of $25 is also claimed for costs.

Personnel of the Jury.

The Jury wa smade up as follows: Wm. Cavanagh, Asphodel; W. A. Robertson, Otonabee; Nelson Beavis, Asphodel; Wm. Roberts, 335 Sherbrooke Street; Thomas O'Reilly, Ennismore; G. R. Browning, William Shearer, Otonabee; Andrew McIntosh City; George Rutherford, Douro; H. Mowry, 296 Rubidge Street; Joseph Reynolds, 593 Patterson Street; John Sadler, 466 Gilmour Street.

Of the jurymen, Mr. O'Connell challenged four, and Mr. Ruddy, two. The remaining members of the petit jurors was discharged, as the above case is the last of a long list.

In summarizing the case for the benefit of the jury, Mr. Ruddy said that the action was one in which the plaintiff, Mahood, is the owner of a concrete mixer. The defendant is one of the largest contractors. There are four items in the plaintiff's statement of claims:

A balance of $41.50, which he claims is still due for the concrete mixer, and his own labour in connection with a contract for laying sidewalk in the Township of South Monaghan. The amount is based on a rate of seven dollars a day. There ws no dispute as to the amount, but there was a difference as to the number of days.

The next item is an item of wages est on the account as rendered. The third item is in regard to another contract in which the use of the concrete mixer figured. The last named claim concerns a contract in connection with the construction of a foundation for a sub-station for the Canadian General Electric Company.

The next item is an ite mof wages amounting to $4.05. It is a small item and is admitted by the defendant, said Mr. Ruddy.

Frederick Mahood was the first witness called. He contracted to work for the defendant for seven dollars a day. The bargain was made on Simcoe Street, outside of the Montgomery House.

Asked why he did not measure up the work at the C. G. E., witness said that Mr. Hayes would would not produce the plans. It wos impossible to measure up the work without the plans, as a considerable portion of the work was underground. The contract price for this job was four cents a cubic foot. He received ninety dollars on account and the remainder according to the witness, is outstanding.

Thirty dollars of this was received in cash, and a cheque for sixty dollars was offered witness, but refused.

J. Miller, architect of the firm of G. W. Miller of Toronto, was put into the box at this stage. He produced a set of plans showing the foundation of the C.G.E. sub-station.

The case is proceeding.

Annual Ennismore Picnic on June 22

There is a special list of attractions for the annual Ennismore picnic to be held at Tara Grove on Tuesday, June 22nd. The annual Ennismore picnic always has its interest for hundreds of people in the townships surrounding, as well as to a large number who always attend from Peterborough. There is always a splendid picnic in Enniamore and judging by the announcements this season will be even better than usual.

There is a long list of sports, with generous prizes for the winners of the events. The Ennismore orchestra will supply music during the afternoon, when there will also be dancing and addresses by leading public men. Dinner will be between the hours of 12 and 2 p.m. and supper from 5 to 7 p.m.

BILL CROWLEY LINES UP FOR THE EMPIRE

Well Known Peterboro Athlete Whose Name is Still A Household One Has Enlisted in Calgary For Active Service.

GOING WITH ENGINEERS

The article published below from the Calgary Herald of June 11, tells of the going forth to serve the Empire of another of Peterborough's native born sons in the person of "Bill" Crowley. To all except the new comers among Peterborough's citizens, the name is very familiar, for Mr. Crowley was one of the city's most celebrated athletes, and his fame is still bright and untarnished among local lovers of sport, in spite of the fact that for a number of years he has lived in the West. No one played a more prominent part in bringing honours to Peterborough than Bill Crowley. He was a member of the Peterborough Hockey Club on the last occasion when they won the O. H. A. championship, and on the line-up of the Peterborough Rugby Club when the Ontario and Dominion championships were captured.

At lacrosse and baseball he was not to be dispised; in fact he was in every sense an all-round athlete and his name is still a household one. The Herald says:

Among the many members of Calgary's popular citizens who have enlisted and gone forth to uphold the honour and integrity of the British Empire, go two of the best known men in the province Bill Crowley and Billy Bruce of the Government Telephone Department. They have worked in the department for the last seven years and are now leaving for France to fight side by side for their country's sake. They enlisted with the Engineers Corps and left for Ottawa at an early hour this morning where they will train for probably a month before their final departure from their native land.

Born in Ontario.

Bill Crowley was born in Peterborough Ont. where his mother still resides, and came west nine years ago, when he settled in Edmonton prior to his coming to this city. He played hockey for Edmonton and captained the Rugby team some eight years ago, when they first landed the provincial championship. He was a splendid athlete and a clean sport, as all men are aware who have ever participated in any games with him. He came to Calgary seven years ago and entered the employment of the Telephone Department, in the employ of which he remained up to the time of his departure. He was a highly respected and trustworthy employee. He refereed many of the hockey and Rugby games in the past five years, but has not participated in any of them owing to the fact that he sustained injuries which necessitated his withdrawal.

Billy Bruce, his companion, is another old timer in this city, having lived here for the past nine years, at 1016 Eighth avenue east. He acted in the capacity of traffic chief and was popular among all his fellow workers. He was born in that old Irish county in Ontario which bears his name, in the town of Tara, and was a trustworthy employee of highest repute.

Yesterday afternoon the staff collected in the main office and presented Mr. Crowley and Mr. Bruce with beautiful wrist watches and twenty dollar gold pieces.

PTE. POWELL IN HOSPITAL

Peterboro' Boy Stricken With Pneumonia Soon After Arrival in France

Mrs. Geo. Powell, Brownton, has received a letter from her son, Pte. Chas. Powell, who went to the front with pneumonia immediately after ar Battalion. Pte. Powell was taken ill wit pneumonia immediately after arriving in France, and has been in hospital in England ever since. Following the suggestion in last night's Examiner, Mrs. Powell gives her son's address so that his friends and acquaintances may write to him. It is as follows:

Pte. A. Powell,
A Company, 2nd Battalion,
British Red Cross Hospital,
Hawkhurst, Kent, England.

In a recent letter to his mother, Pte. Powell says: "I am still in the hospital, and am getting sick of it now. It will be four months on the sixteenth. I guess I will be here for the duration of the war if I don't hurry up. I am going for a motor ride this afternoon, about fifty miles to the seaside, and back. You should be here. It is better than Canada in the summer. We are in the prettiest part of England.

Voice of The People

Dear Sir,—One is sometimes amused and oftentimes disgusted, when reading some of the startling announcements of what Uncle Sam could do.

As long as this earth "rolls on" there will always be these 'arm chair' warriors, men possessing such keen insights, but unfortunately lacking in nerve and moral courage, who with their extraordinary powers are able to explain to bored listeners what Kitchener should have done and how the British navy could use her power.

By some reason or another the citizens of the States have a distinct peculiarity this way. Their 'bumps' of causality and comparativeness are greatly in evidence, thereby giving them reasoning powers far beyond any other people. That, coupled with their wonderful social laws (?) and untold wealth (?) places them ahead of all other nations.

Their latest venture, which is flaunted in our face, is "How Uncle Sam could smash the German submarine peril." Of course our thoughts wander back to the numerous "notes" that pass between those two Powers, and we imagine that 'Sam,' aided by some of his big penned, big brained warriors, has by some masterful diplomacy, worthy only of an American, caused the piratical submarine to be shut up in those restful waters of Kiel Canal, or possibly invented a new gun to fire across the Panama canal, capable of using these 'subs' as shells.

No, we are disappointed for even he has caught the disease and suggests a more warlike method, viz., by means of a 'mosquito fleet.' The words have the usual Yankee sensational attractiveness. The author of this wonderful scheme suggests that Uncle, by means of serving notes' on all peace loving Yanks who possess motor boats forty feet long or more, could within two months of commandeering these crafts, providing they were manned by gentlemen and fishermen, smash in the "tin" or in other words, tissue paper sides of Von Turpentin's 'subs' and with some peculiar contrivance of Yankee origin, rake, riddle or sink at the wish of the gentlemen or fishermen in charge.

Living by the North Sea as I did for a number of years and during that time seen many rough seas and weather known only to the east coast, I can imagine how impracticable such a thing is.

Those that believe in such hair-brained ideas let them get together their forty foot launch and spend two or three nights out by the Dogger Bank patrolling for the pirates. I am thinking that some of the gentlemen would be longing for their summer cottages in Florida or elsewhere.

There is not a nation on God's earth that can deal more effectively with such a peril than Old Britain. Remember centuries of experience of seamanship and skill, coupled with Bull dog tenacity, which only the British race knows, is meeting Germany's mushroom power to-day.

A prayer worth while remembering:
For what we are about to eat,
Thank God—for the British fleet.

Yours truly,
Yarmouth Bloater.

PTE. LONG DID HIS DUTY WELL

Sergeant of 16th Battalion Writes to Mother of Missing Peterborough Boy to That Effect

Mrs. George Long, George Street, has received the following letter in regard to her son, Fred, who went to the front with the 16th Battalion and who wa sofficially reported missing following the battle of Langemarck:

France, May 23, 1915.

Dear Mrs. Long,—With every regret known to human nature, I have the unpleasant duty to inform you that your son Fred is counted among the missing, and I assure you that it is not only unpleasant intelligence for you, but it causes the utmost sadness to me and my section. Fred was one of the favourites of the section, and I consider his loss one of a personal nature, as I only had been promoted to a non-commissioned officer the day before I had the compulsory duty of considering him missing from the ranks. It might mean his being a prisoner in Germany or worse, and God forbid the latter. But my dear Mrs. Long if the latter is the result of his duty to his country, bear up with the thought that he did his duty and did it well, and no better tribute can be paid to any man. We all have to account one day to our God. I grieve and most seriously, for the loss of Fred from my section. So do the commanding officers, who thought so much of Fred. I return the letters addressed to him with sincere sorrow.

Sincerely yours,
J. C. Fraser, Sergeant,
Signal Section,
16th Battalion, 3rd Brigade,
The Canadian Scottish,
British Expeditionary Force.

MAYORS AND ALDERMEN ARE USUALLY LIKE SOME SMALL BOYS, SAYS SPEAKER

"If You Show Them Something They Can See With Their Eyes They Will Understand"—Visiting Ladies Were Heard in the Y.W.C.A. Last Evening on Interesting Subjects—A Boost For Playgrounds.

The gymnasium at the local Young Women's Christian Association building was filled last evening, when the Executive of the National Council of Women, in session here, held an open meeting. The meeting was featured by three addresses by members of the Executive. The speakers were Mrs. Plumptree, of Toronto, who has charge of the Red Cross work at Toronto; Mrs. Sanford, of Hamilton, a member of the International Council of Women, and Mrs. Huestis of Toronto, President of the Local Council of Women, Toronto, and a charter member of the Playgrounds Association. Their respective subjects, "Red Cross Work," "International Council of Women Work," and "Supervised Playgrounds" were very interesting, and the ladies were closely followed in their discourse. In spite of the fact that they had been in session during the afternoon and were tired they very kindly consented to give addresses.

The Chairman for the evening was Mrs. (Dr.) F. C. Neal, who, in her remarks in introducing the speakers, said that in this day and age the work of the women could not be over looked. The meeting there would give the ladies a chance to see what the Women's Council were doing, and what the women could do.

During the evening Miss Ada Richardson rendered a solo.

Mrs. Plumptree.

There were two reasons why Mrs. Plumptree liked to speak of Red Cross work. The first was because it had a claim to a high position. There was probably no society in the world which had a higher claim for a position of respect than the Red Cross Society. The second was because it stood for the fulfilment of its duty, and existed for service.

Some people would say it was not the duty of any society to do the work which the Government was supposed to do. Logically it probably was the duty of the Government to care for the sick and wounded, but the Government could not do anything without the people behind it. And almost every Government realized the value of the voluntary Red Cross work that was being done and has been done.

The speaker pointed out that we should be guarding against mistakes and profit by any which had perhaps been made. The symbol for all rescue work on the field of battle was the Red Cross. It was the symbol of all acts by which assistance was rendered to the sick and wounded. The members of all branches of the Army Medical Corps wore it. The buildings where the wounded were cared for was under a Red Cross, ambulances carried the symbol; in fact every person and every building connected with the rescue work wore the Red Cross. It stood for help, pity and alleviation of suffering.

To Save Life.

In connection with the supplies sent out by the voluntary Red Cross workers, Mrs. Plumptree pointed out that life might often be saved by ligatures which were used in large numbers. At the dressing station or sometimes when it was absolutely necessary to stop the bleeding at once these ligatures were on hand. It sometimes seemed that the members of the voluntary Red Cross Society did not help the brave doctors and nurses and other members of the Army Medical Corps. The duty of the society was to support, as far as possible, the work of the Army Medical Corps.

Referring to nurses sent out by the Society the speaker said that only three-year certificated nurses were accepted so far. There were many applications, but only those with the highest qualifications were accepted. The Society believed that our men at the front should not have a chance for life lost by incompetent people looking after them. There were already fifty-one Canadian nurses in England or at the front. There would be fifteen more sent at once to take the places of the fifteen commandeered by the British War Office. Canadians Nurses have made a name for themselves.

Motor Ambulances.

Then, extra motor ambulances had been supplied. In the beginning twelve were sent to the British Red Cross. These motor ambulances had already paid for themselves in the number of lives they had been the means of saving. And now a new Princess Christian Hospital Train was being collected for by the British Red Cross. The sum of £9,600 had been paid for a Canadian Car on this train.

Mrs. Plumptree explained the system in Canada for handling Red Cross supplies. People might often go into the warehouse in Toronto and find boxes upon boxes of supplies, and go away and say there was congestion, and that there were already more supplies than could be handled, and again the same they might return to the same warehouse and see almost nothing, and, going away, say that the Red Cross was not doing anything and could not get supplies. There was absolutely no congestion, according to the speaker, in Red Cross supplies anywhere. The warehouse in Toronto was cleared out every week regularly, with great pleasure. One of the largest consignments ever sent from Toronto was a week ago last Wednesday, when nine hundred cases of Red Cross supplies were shipped at one time.

But even though there were supplies it could not always be known at what point they were going to be needed. War was one terrible game of chess, in which each adversary was trying to get the advantage of the other. The Red Cross Society or the Army Medical corps could not always provide for the awful inevitable emergencies of war. An attack might be made at a point where there were no supplies. And again the wounded could not be brought from the field of battle until nightfall, as the enemy fired without and discrimination upon stretcher bearers and many of these noble fellows had already given up their lives in attempts to save wounded soldiers.

The Difficulties.

Transportation was one of the great difficulties to solve in the present war. Whoever solved that problem would be doing a great deal towards the help of the sick and wounded. Possibly at the dressing station there were doctors and nursing sisters waiting for the wounded to be brought in, but on the way a terrible shell might drop on the ambulance, filled with wounded, and there were then no wounded left to look after.

War is Wasteful.

There was nothing which was so wasteful as war. Perhaps in the need shirts, etc., were thrown aside for clean, without waiting for washing the discarded, which were then wasted. We could not think of the Army Medical Corps supplies or Red Cross supplies in time of war as the same as in the hospital in time of peace.

In conclusion, the speaker said the Red Cross Society was trying to help all those who were doing work for the sick and wounded, and would accept assistance from any other Societies engaged in the same work. At present the Red Cross Society was arranging to look after the comforts of the Allies who were prisoners. The Canadians had sent £1,000 to London to have the British Red Cross send parcels to those in Germany who did not have anyone else sending them parcels. Mrs. Plumptree said they might help the prisoners and they might help the sick and wounded and she asked her hearers to help the Red Cross.

MRS. SANFORD.

The second speaker of the evening, Mrs. Sanford of Hamilton, a member of the International Council of Women, spoke first on a trip through the Canadian West, from which she had just returned. She visited many of the cities there and was met by the members of the local Councils of Women. She found the same earnest workers there as here and the same interest inspiring them.

The gathering in front of her last evening reminded her of her trip to Rome, last summer, to attend the International Council Conference. The general impression of that meeting was peace and arbitration. How little they knew of the cloud that was overhanging.

Do Not Let Work Fail.

The speaker appealed to her hearers to not let this work of years fall to the ground, notwithstanding the natural feelings which would arise after the war. She had sat at a meeting of the International Council of Women shortly after the trouble between Norway and Sweden. On one side was a Swedish lady whom she was begging not to reply to a particularly provocative remark from a Norwegian lady. But she said these fundamental principles of love and kindness must be allowed to be severed owing to this war.

Mrs. Sanford has at one time or another visited nearly every country in Europe, and is in touch with the movements in the war zone as far as possible. She had the honour of being in Serbia to assist in the starting of the National Council of Women, there.

Greece Suffered.

The speaker read a very interesting letter from a lady in Athens, a dear friend of hers. The letter, though written by a Greek lady, was in English. It referred to the work of the women, and spoke of Greece entering the war. Questions were asked by the writer: "Why do these Christians fight?" She wanted to know what answer she could make to a question like that. The writer also said Greece would enter the war, but she was waiting to do so when it was necessary to defend her rights. She said the women knew what it meant. Had not the women of Greece been through two wars and were not their hospitals full yet? Greece had not yet recovered from her two wars.

Supervised Playgrounds.

In view of the fact that the Local Council of Women propose to establish Supervised Playgrounds in Peterborough this summer, the subject of the next speaker, Mrs. A. M. Huestis, was of special interest. Mrs. Huestis is President of the Local Council of Women in Toronto, and a charter member of the Playgrounds Association in Toronto, therefore what she had to say about supervised playgrounds was from a practical knowledge of the work and its benefits. In order to let her hearers know that she was also in accord with the Red Cross work, she said she was a member of the Red Cross Society, but she thought there was room for the Playgrounds Association also. As she remarked: "We women are getting to be so clever, that we can look after one, two, three, four, five or six things at once."

Mrs. Huestis explained the origin of the Supervised Playground movement, and the successful method to adopt. She showed how a start could be made on very little and gradually a wider scope could be taken. Supervised playgrounds stood for the conservation of life. What we were looking for to-day was a means for the conservation of life and supervised playgrounds was a pretty healthy thing to begin upon Supervisors the Key.

The success of the undertaking depended upon the personality of the supervisors. This was the key to the situation. Two separate grounds were needed. One of the grounds was for the boys and one for the girls. A fence could be built so that they would be able to see each other, but the boys and girls must not be allowed to mix up with the apparatus of the other. Then the supervisor must be competent. The young man must be able to vault a higher pole than the oldest boy under him. The lady must be able to do better work than the oldest girl under her.

Like Small Boys.

When looking for support the local women were advised to give anyone who was hanging out a "danger signal a prominent place in the work. If the aldermen who had charge of the parks were the kind who would not do anything to help they were to be gotten after at once, and also given a prominent place in the work. "My experience is that Mayors and Aldermen and so on down amongst the civic officials, are like small boys," said the speaker. "If you show them something they can see with their eyes, they will understand."

A start could be made in Peterborough at once by getting the school children to plant seeds in vacant lots and garden plots. She saw many vacant lots in her drive about the city yesterday, and thought they could be utilized to advantage for the children. In one city one season forty per cent. of the vegetables consumed that season in the city were grown by the children that way. And this is a time especially when vegetables are going to be needed in our cities. Flower seeds could be planted, as well. If they had too many potatoes for use in Peterborough this fall they could be sent to Toronto, where there would be use for them.

Let Children Play.

And Mrs. Huestis said to see that the children were not put out of the school grounds as soon as school was out. The people paid for the schools and their children had a right to the use of the grounds. In most places, said Mrs. Huestis, the school grounds belonged to some caretaker after four o'clock and children were chased off. Surely a city like this could supply a relay of caretakers if necessary, and if a window be broken it is very easily repaired, because was not the natural love of play of the children far more important than a window?

Then a Band might be hired to give concerts. In Toronto she found a man good enough to pay for a Band to play once a week in each of their playgrounds. And moving pictures for the children would be a means of amusement and could also be educative.

Baby to Grandmothers.

This movement should take in the baby in arms to the grandmother and grandfather. The playgrounds would be a fine place for a mothers conference and it only took two or three ladies to get the mothers started, and the discussions of the mothers on caring for the children would be very helpful to many mothers, and would mean the conservation of young lives.

Mrs. Huestis brought smiles from her audience when she explained several very original methods of getting funds. She said membership could be placed at one dollar, but it could be explained to everyone who was likely to give more, that one dollar was not the limit which would be accepted. They could go to the golf course. Here it could be said to the members: 'You people are spending a good deal of money to chase a little ball around. There are many children down town who have no ball to chase around and if they had they have no place but the dusty street in which to chase it." She guaranteed that this method would bring results.

After the addresses the members of the Executive adjourned to the Green Parlour, where all the ladies were invited to meet with them and discuss any questions there upon which they were not quite clear.

Mr. Cyril Davey presided at the piano in the Green Parlour.

The following is a list of the registration at the Executive meeting:

Mrs. Torrington, Toronto, President of the National Council of Women.

Mrs. W. E. Sanford, Hamilton, Treasurer of International Council of Women.

SIGNING OF THE MAGNA CHARTA

It was seven hundred years yesterday since King John signed the Magna Charta. On the 15th of June, 1215, the King, standing at Runnymede, and surrounded by nobles whom he dared no longer to oppose, affixed his signature to the great charter which conceded the rights of the people, and established the liberty of England. Its ratification marked the first great date in the struggle between democratic liberty and imperial rule. Runnymede only began the battle over the charter which went on for eighty-five years with varying fortunes. It was not until 1297 that the kings gave in when Edward I. finally confirmed the concessions which John had made.

England Feudalized State.

At the time of the signing of the charter England was a thoroughly feudalized state. For a longer or shorter time the barons had viewed with increasing distrust the policy of the King, his disregard of rights other than his own, and believing that he was under a contract with them not to exceed his proper authority they remonstrated in vain.

Then came the feudal rebellion in which the King faced defeat so certainly that he gave in and agreed to sign a Great Charter of Liberties. Principles were agreed to, and at a stroke of the pen he executed an instrument which in spirit rather than in letter, has been of incalculable importance in the development of freer institutions than hitherto had prevailed.

Principal Provisions.

In addition to the preamble the charter contains 63 clauses. "It is partly remedial and partly declaratory of the principal ground of the fundamental laws of England," says Coke. Its principal provisions are:

A declaration that the Church of England is free.

Feudal obligations are defined and limited.

Law courts are to be held at fixed places; assize courts are established, and earls and barons are to be tried by their peers.

No extraordinary taxation without consent.

No banishment or imprisonment save by judgment of peers of the law of the land.

No denial, sale or delay of justice.

One standard of weights and measures.

"Observed in Good Faith."

The closing paragraph of the charter reads:

"All the aforesaid shall be observed in good faith and without any evil temptation. . . . . Given .....in the meadow which is called Runnymede, between Windsor and Staines, the 15th day of June, in the seventeenth year of our reign."

Of the sixty-three chapters of Magna Charta all have become obsolete except the 39th, "on due process of law."

None of the barons who drew up and forced the signing of the Charter were in the first rank of statesmen, although they compiled the most statesmanlike document of the middle ages.

Defective Wiring Was Cause of Fire

Defective wiring was the cause of a fire at the residence of Mr. John Pilling, 402 Bolivar Street, at 12.30 p.m. yesterday. The Fire Department was called and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze before much damage was done outside of the wiring system, which is completely ruined throughout the building.

Chief Howard remarked that it was one of the worst cases of defective wiring he had encountered in the city.

Father Stanton Leaving Ottawa

OTTAWA, June 16.— Rev. Father Stanton, of the Ottawa University staff, has resigned his position at the college and immediately after the school closes next Wednesday will leave Ottawa to take up missionary work in the United States. Father Stanton has been in Ottawa for the last sixteen years, and during his lengthy term he has been a prominent figure in the various branches of athletics which has helped to make the institution such a success.

For several years he coached the football team which represented the Ottawa University in the Intercollegiate Rugby Union. One of his most notable achievements was that of 1907, when, with a team of youngsters, he romped off with the championship of the Union. In the days of the old City Baseball League he coached the college nine which were winners many times. In 1913, when the Ottawa Football Club and Ottawa University teams amalgamated, he acted as honorary coach. During his terms in the Interprovincial Union he made many friends in Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton, and his departure will be regarded as a serious loss to the various lines of amateur sport.

Some Class to Lindsay's Recruits

hTe Lindsay Warder says: Though a report was current that the two German suspects who were taken to Kingston on Saturday last, in charge of Sergt.-Major Allan and Sergt. Yuill, escaped at Peterborough, such was not the case. The men made no attempt whatever to gain their liberty, and if they did it would have been a the peril of their lives, as both officers carried the latest in six shooters.

It is thought that Corp. Graum is more of an adventurer than a spy, and to make it appear to his chums that he possessed some hidden information, made those foolish trips to Toronto in civilian dress, which only secured for him incarceration.

Corp. Gross was addicted, it is said, to a stupefying drug, which accounts for many of his shortcomings. He was well known to the Toronto police before coming to Lindsay.

THE WEATHER

It was quite cool again this morning and the thermometer was down in the neighborhood of 40 degrees. Some white frost was to be seen but no damage resulted. Yesterday's rainfall, .28 of an inch.

KODAK SAFETY

Says Americans Are Forced To Be the Allies of the Allies

NEW YORK, June 16.—Professor George W. Kirchwey, of Columbia University, recently addressed a gathering of workingmen and women at Labour Temple, Fourteenth Street and Second Avenue, on "America and the Present Crisis." His audience was comprised of persons whose birthplaces included nearly all the warring European nations.

"The only question presented to us by the Lusitania case," he said, "is whether the rights of neutrals shall give way to the rights of belligerents. In the time of Frederick the Great neutrals had no rights, but we are now in the twentieth century. Shall the hands of the clock now be moved backward? Whether Germany or Great Britain be the violator, neutral rights are too sacred to be abandoned, and we will stand for them manfully and inflexibly.

"In spite of the protests of sentimental pacifists, the shipment of munitions cannot and should not be discontinued. It is not only our privilege to sell these war supplies, but it is our duty to do so, so long as we offer them impartially to both sides. To abandon this course would be a violation of neutrality.

"We are by force of circumstances the allies of the Allies. The more we insist on our rights as neutrals, the more assistance we give inadvertehtly to those who have gained contrsl of the seas. But our attitude is impartial, and if conditions were reversed we would be selling to the German government now just as we are selling to her enemies, and international law would be on our side.

"Our citizens have a perfect right to sail the seas aboard any ship they may choose provided it be a merchant vessel and they are merely exercising their neutral rights in doing so. Yet the more the United States insists on these rights the more she is assisting one nation against the other.

"I believe somewhat in what Bernard Shaw said, that a nation cannot be strictly neutral unless it eliminates itself from participation in the world's affairs altogether. That might seem the question for us now. Have we nothing to choose but suicide or war?

"The industries of the world to-day have grown to such an extent that a nation cannot make war without disrupting the peace of all the others. Collisions between belligerenes and neutrals are unavoidable.

"I believe, however, that there are other ways of settling these difficulties than by resorting to arms. We can settle them in a way that would not involve the remotest threat or war. How could neutrality be served by going to a war that would inevitably increase the violation of neutrality?

"If our fleets were interfered with by ships of neutral powers would not a fresh violation of neutrality be the most probable result.

"The United States are practically the trustees of the entire neutral world, and I am in favour of the United States calling a conference of the neutral nations of the entire world to discuss their rights and decide upon some definite course to take. I am sure that if such a conference were held the warring nations would be ruled and persuaded by their decision.

"If Mr. Bryan's reasons for resigning his official post were a determination to make the foreign policy of the government an issue for the people to decide, I am in accord with him. If it was because he felt that the transmission of notes but increased the deadlock between this country and Germany, and was forcing us into war, I approve of his attitude."

In answering questions asked him by the members of the audience after the address, Professor Kirchwey said:

"The chance that a submarine runs a risk in signalling a merchantman, and giving her passengers a chance to escape is no reason why the submarine should not do so."

He also said he believed the United States had been delinquent in not protesting against the violation of Belgium's neutrality.

HEIGHT OF SOLDIERS

Tall Men More Imposing But Not Necessarily Best on Active Service

The maxim that "a good big 'un will always beat a good little 'un" may have its value on the race course or in the prize ring. Physiologists, however, are questioning its applicability to the selection of recruits, and the War Office by sanctioning the formation of "Bantam" battalions showed a disposition to lessen the own existing height standard.

The idea that tall men make better soldiers than short men has induced a belief that certain regiments which have a distinguished record are composed of tall men. The current notion is that Highlanders are exceptionally tall. Mr. J. M. Bulloch, in a book on "Territorial Soldiering in the North-east of Scotland, 1758-1814," points out that the fact is that the first recruits to the Gordon Highlanders in 1794 had an average stature of 5 feet 8½ inches.

In opening a discussion on "Tall versus Short Men for the Army," at the Royal Sanitary Institute in London Dr. M. S. Pembrey said the test of the soldier's efficiency is not his height, nor his weight, nor his girth, but his ability to bear the physical and mental stress of active service, to march, shoot straight, and to subordinate his own interests to those of the race. If this be granted it will be seen that no man can dogmatise upon the question whether tall or short men are the better soldiers. During peace height is a recognised standard for recruits, for most men will agree that a tall soldier is more imposing and dignified than a short one. An unjustified bias may thus arise in favor of the tall man.

The essential organs for life are in the head and trunk. These are often better developed in short than in tall men. The difference in height between a tall and a short man is due chiefly to the longer legs of the former. A man 6 feet 4½ inches, when in the standing position, 10½ inches taller than a man 5 feet 6 inches, but compared in the sitting position the difference was only 3¼ inches.

A VENERABLE LANDMARK IS COMING DOWN

One of the most distinctive landmarks of Peterborough, venerable both for its age and associations, is in the hands of the destroyer. Mr. W. H. Lytle, 484 Gilmour street, has been awarded the contract for the removal of the Dennistoun homestead building on Inverlea Park.. This is one of the oldest residential buildings in Peterborough, and perhaps the oldest of any considerable importance in architecture. It was built in 1863, sixty-two years ago, by the late Judge Dennistoun, occupied by him till his death, and was the birthplace of his children, of whom one at least became a prominent resident, the late James Dennistoun, father of Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun, resident in Winnipeg, but now with his two sons, "somewhere in France," serving the Empire.

The building which was erected at a time when jerry-building practices were unknown, as is proved by the work of demolition. This is revealed in honest solidity of construction, with high-class material — showing joists of excellent quality 2x12, 16-in. centres, rafters 6x6, 16-in centres, and other solidity of construction throughout that would bankrupt a modern building contractor. The interior was principally finished in hardwood, largely walnut, with built-in bookcases in natural oak, etc. A feature is the main hall window, is the crest of the Dennistoun family, set in the glass which was, it is said, imported from Glasgow.

There seems to be enough first-class material in the building if allotted to the standard of modern building methods, to build two houses of like size.

New button molds have metal disks on the back that can be removed for the insertion of covering fabrics and shirt sleeves feet to hold shape.

A Tribute to Pte. C. L. Pitts

Former Peterboro' Man Died on Field of Honour While Rescuing Wounded Canadians

A little over a month ago Pte. Chas. L. Pitts, 2nd Field Ambulance, formerly of Peterborough, was reported to have died of wounds at the front. The first particulars were received to-day sent by Capt. T. H. McKillop, 2nd Field Ambulance, to William J. J. Pitts, of Toronto, a brother of the deceased.

The letter in part, follows:

"The duty of giving you particulars of Charlie's death is a painful one to me. It is, however, also an honour to write of the last days of such a man as your brother proved himself to be and one that I appreciate very much indeed.

"I think you will be glad to know that the official report in the papers was mistaken in placing his name among those who died of wounds. Charlie was killed in action and did not suffer in the least.

Killed By a Shell.

"While carrying on his duty in a fearless, noble manner he was killed by a shell. There were about twenty wounded men in the barn and in order to give them some safe refuge it was decided to move them into the adjacent house and cellar. While carrying out this duty he was killed.

"Verbal message to those he left behind there was none, but the example he set us will live in our memory while he endures. The thought of the way he lived and died helped many to go through a most trying ordeal successfully. The manner of his life and death was his last message; a nobler one man cannot leave behind him, and, put into words, I must take from the Bible, it was this, "Greater love hath no man than this that he give up his life for his friends." Up to the hour of his death his skillful performance of his duty brought comfort and freedom from pain to many a man who was sorely wounded.

Comrades For Years.

"Charlie and I have been comrades for a number of years, and his friendship was an honour I valued highly. The loss of his companionship to me is a severe blow.

"Charlie was buried on the field of battle where he played so noble a part. He sleeps in a soldier's grave in the place where Canada's first division made their stand for honour and right. We buried him in a little grave near the village of St. Julien.

"In conclusion I can only say that I hope that when my time comes I may be as ready as he; that I may meet it as courageously. Charlies Pitts lived and died a noble gentleman and a splendid soldier, true to fine principles; a loyal and patient comrade whose friendship helped me more than I can tell. His passing is to be mourned, but the manner of it should bring peace to those who are left behind."

INCREASE THE TILLAGE AREA

OTTAWA, June 17.—Steps are being taken toward the solution of the unemployed problem in the west. Settlers on Dominion lands there are to be given an opportunity to increase the amount of the tillage area on their holdings. The Federal authorities, with the consent of these settlers, will utilise the services of the unemployed to clear large areas of scrub land and make the cost a first charge on the land. The areas under cultivation would in this way be greatly increased and many men employed who would secure a useful knowledge of the work required as homesteaders.

As the Dominion Government's authority relates only to unpatented lands, the scope of the work and the relief of unemployment in that part of the country will be greatly extended, if, as is expected, the Provincial Governments take the same action in respect to patented land.

Forty Civilians Killed And Eighty Injured In Zeppelin Raids

Admiralty Announces the Toll Exacted by the Air Menace in the Last Two Raids on the English Coast---Italians Continue to Advance---One Thousand Austrians Captured---Food Shortage in Constantinople.

BRITISH SUCCESS NEAR YPRES

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, June 17.—The Admiralty announcesc forty civilians, men, women and children, were killed, and eighty injured in the last two Zeppelin raids on England.

PARIS, June 17.—The British offensive is general and another German position near Ypres has been captured.

ROME, June 17.—Italians continue to advance. One thousand Austrians were captured in a mountain fight.

PARIS, June 17.—Twenty-two lives were lost when the Germans torpedoed the British steamer Glencairn yesterday.

ROME, June 17.—Turkish prisoners declare that there is shortage of food in Constantinople, and Government resources are at a low ebb.

LONDON, June 17.—Responding to criticisms in the Commons under Secretary for War Cowans said that Britain would shortly carry on aerial warfare on a gigantic scale, with aeroplanes that would carry five men a thousand miles.

LONDON, June 17.—It was announced in the Commons that there was now no shortage of high explosives, and the British army would make continuous progress.

LONDON, June 17.—The British steamer Strathnairn was torpedoed in the Irish Channel.

AMSTERDAM, June 17.—British aviators attached the German military aerodrome Grongrade, near Ghent, and it is believed that several Zeppelins were damaged.

LONDON, June 17.—The Austrians were completely routed by the Italians at east Trentino Glacier.

MILAN, June 17.—The Italians have undertaken a new invasion of Austria through the Stelvio Pass. The Italians are attacking summits which are protected by Austrian heavy guns.

PARIS, June 17.—The French general staff computes German casualties at four million two hundred thousand, and Austrian losses at two million five hundred twenty-six thousand.

VANCOUVER, B.C., June 17.—Provided the British Government will permit him to perform the feat, Teisuke Shimizu, a veteran diver of Kobe, desires to attempt to refloat the Emden which destroyed eighteen merchantmen of allied countries, subsequently being battered and driven ashore at Cocos Island.

ATHENS, June 17.—"After six days of continuous bombardment the fire of the Allied warships at the Dardanelles slackened somewhat Wednesday," said a Mytilene despatch to-day.

LONDON, Eng., June 17. — The British steamer Trafford was sunk by a German submarine 30 miles off the Small Islands yesterday. Her crew landed at Milford Haven this morning.

Near the same spot, the London steamer Turnwell from Liverpool to New York was stopped by a submarine and the crew ordered to take to the boats.

The submariners then boarded the Turnwell and set off several bombs. The submarine disappeared, but the explosion failed to sink the Turnwell.

The crew re-embarked and proceed into Milford Haven this morning for repairs.

MEDAL FOR BRAVE PRIEST UNDER FIRE

BRESCI, Italy, June 17.—The Rev. Eduardo Gilarde, a Roman Catholic priest who is serving as a chaplain in the Italian army, has been decorated with a silver medal for conspicuous bravery under fire.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

My boy Frank seemed weak-chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

AN UNUSUAL VISITOR FOR REEVE COBEN

Mr. Chas. Coben, Reeve of Galway, who is in the city attending the meeting of the County Council, saw a fine Moose in his meadow last friday, the second occasion on which it has paid the Coben farm a visit. Several men endeavoured to capture, but it jumped a fence like a steeple-chaser and made off. It will be flirting around once too often and will lose its freedom.

INCREASE IN AERIAL FLEET

LONDON, June 17.—The Government is now manufacturing a giant aeroplane similar to the Russian Sikorsky, which carries five men and five times as much explosive as the ordinary biplane. Tennant announced. Within the past few months the number of British aeroplanes for war purposes has been increased ten-fold and the number of trained aviators five-fold.

British Superior.

"British aviators have demonstrated their superiority over the Germans," said Tennant. "Since February there has been no shortage of high explosive bombs. On the contrary we now have a reserve supply ample for all purposes."

Tennant's announcement was made only a few hours after the Admiralty issued an official statement, reporting a new Zeppelin raid on the British coast.

This statement was made in reply to the suggestion by a member of the House that machines of this character were needed adequately to deal with raiding Zeppelins

GREAT BRITAIN'S AERIAL SQUADRONS ARE READY

Huge Air Fleet of 2,500 Aeroplanes Will Be Used in Both Defensive and Offensive Operations---Will Practically Render London and Other Big Cities Immune From Attack---A Chance For Canadian Aviators.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 17.—Sky battles on a scale the world has never dreamed of will lend a new thrill to the European war spectacle before many weeks.

Within the past six months, aeroplane factories here and in the United States have been turning out scores of biplanes designed to give Britain supremacy in the skies. Publication of this fact was not permitted until formal announcement from the War Office was made in the House of Commons yesterday.

It was learned to-day that the British air fleet now comprises 2,500 biplanes and monoplanes, and about fifty dirigibles, equipped for bomb hurling raids. New air pilots will include many from Canada.

To challenge Great Britain's superiority in the skies, German aeroplane and dirigible factories have been working overtime since last September. Zeppelins have been turned out as rapidly as they could be manufactured at the Friedrichshaven factory, but the German Admiralty, according to reports received here, has placed less reliance on aeroplanes for battle purposes, and now has less than two thousand Taubes to meet the British attacks in the air.

Great Britain's fleet of 2,500 aeroplanes and seaplanes was recruited partly for defensive and partly for offensive action. Despite the admission from the Admiralty yesterday that 40 persons were killed by Zeppelins in raids on the northeast coast on June 6 and June 15, it is the belief here that the aeroplane defense of London and other large cities is so nearly perfect that Zeppelins will never be able to reach the central districts.

WARDEN KINDRED'S ADDRESS AT OPENING OF COUNTY COUNCIL

Gentlemen,—At this the regular June session of the County Council, as it is customary, your Warden will endeavour to give expression to the conduct of the affairs of the county.

It is perhaps the exceptional year in the history of the county, from the fact that Canada has been brought to bear the heaviest burden yet experienced. Not only has business been stagnated and money expended as a result of the war, but many of our boys have laid down their lives for civilization and liberty, and the stemming the advance of Prussian militarism has been on several occasions credited to our Canadian boys, and, while we sympathize with the afflicted friends, we are proud of the courageous actions of our Canadian soldiers, and Canada as a result stands worthy of the great Empire to which she belongs. Foodstuffs being so necessary for the successful prosecution of the war, I would ask all not to fail in the recognition of the all-providing hand of Providence in bringing about harvests in the various countries where available for such purpose, and to unite in our humble way by doing all in our power for Christian and civil liberty throughout the known world.

The chairman of the finance committee will, no doubt ask you to provide for expenditures heretofore not called for, but, as before stated, I now bespeak a ready response, not only from this Council, but from the county at large. It is a source of gratification that the agriculturist realizes for his product a fair remuneration, and, although the crops of late years have not been up to the average and sometimes below, yet Ontario has not been placed in a position to be subsidised by the Dominoin Government as have been the Western Provinces, to assist in securing seed grain at the opening of any season.

The same is an evidence that money to be invested in agriculture can be more profitably invested in Ontario.

The chairmen of the various committees will report to you the work under their jurisdiction, therefore I will not intrude further.

In conclusion, I would ask you to join with me in praying for a speedy winding up of the present war, with conditions satisfactory to the Allies, of which the British Empire is one; and to also thank you for your patience and forbearance with your Warden. I would also frankly admit that any success that follows the conduct of affairs for the year 1915 is due to an able body of councillors who do not legislate from any local standpoint but for the general welfare of the whole county.

Wishing you and the county prosperity, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

H. C. KINDRED,
Warden.

Committee's Report.

The committee to deal with the Warden's address reported as follows:

to the Council this morning:

We appreciate the eloquent remarks of the Warden with respect to the war now pending and the losses and destruction thereby involved, and trust that this conflict may soon approach a successful issue, and feel assured that the people of this country are prepared to make any sacrifices that may be necessitated to bring such success to the Allies' cause.

We join with the Warden in expressing our sympathy with those who have suffered bereavement, and trust that those from this county who are now serving the Empire on the battlefield may be preserved from further losses.

It is very gratifying that in these times, when food supplies are so much needed, a bountiful harvest may be expected, and hope nothing will occur to mar the present bright prospects.

We recognise the great interest being shown in the construction of good roads, and particularly trunk lines, and feel such questions should be given careful consideration by the Council.

In conclusion, we desire to express appreciation of the very careful attention all county matters have received from the Warden, and the force and ability with which he has treated all such matters coming before him, and feel that the county has been highly benefitted by his services during his term of office to the present time.

B. W. SQUIRE,
Chairman.

J.A. SEXSMITH, M.P. AGAIN CONSERVATIVE CHOICE

Was Unopposed at Annual Convention Held in Norwood Yesterday —"Keep Your Powder Dry" Was Timely Advice Passed Around.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

The Conservatives of East Peterborough put another little bet down on John A. Sexsmith, M.P., when their delegates, to a man, at the annual convention of the East Peterborough Liberal-Conservative Association held in Norwood on Wednesday, selected him as their entry in the next Federal elections.

Fifteen years ago this Belmont farmer was not even considered as a parliamentary possibility, but somebody had to be sacrificed and he was the victim. Four years later the skies seemed to have deepened over Conservative prospects in the east riding, and Sexsmith again tasted the bitter fruit of electioneering that brought only defeat. On his third appearance up and down the back townships he lined up a following that gave him his first majority, and in 1911 he rode [illegible] on the "Cow track and trade" cry.

If the variations of Mr. Sexsmith's fortunes run in cycles of two years there is a fall coming to him within the next year in spite of the unanimity of his nomination. For he was certainly accorded a most encouraging reception at yesterday's convention. The only opposition voiced during the day was in the streets of Norwood and not in the town hall. Previous to the meeting it was intimated that S. S. Joyce would likely be brough forward to contest the nomination, but at the meeting the name of his prominent Havelock citizen was not even whispered. It was all Sexsmith. Warden Kindred was on the platform, it is true, and the doctor is developing fast down in the east end of the country, but he was content with reminding the member that it was about time Havelock got some of the Jack Horner fruit. Plums had gone to Norwood and Lakefield, but the pie had yet to be passed to Havelock.

Was Well Attended.

However, the convention must have been extremely gratifying to Mr. Sexsmith. Practically every delegate was present and most of the prominent Conservatives in East Peterborough were also there. It was a purely business meeting without the semblance of contention. Speeches were brief and to the point. In fact the convention was as placid as the Norwood mill-pond. There wasn't a ripple on the surface, and Reeve H. G. Fitzgerald of Lakefield had an unusually light task as chairman.

Two Birds, One Stone.

Mr. Fitzgerald announced at the outset that it had been decided to nominate a party standard-bearer at what was essentially the annual meeting of the Association.

The Canadian constitution required an election in 1916 at the latest and it was just as well to be prepared for any eventuality.

J. B. Peoples, Wm. Knox and David Johnston were selected as a credential committee, but they quit when they were half way through. By that time it was apparent that there would be no balloting.

Mr. Sexsmith was nominated to represent the party at the next elections on motion of Dr. J. R. Fraser of Lakefield, seconded by R. E. Birdsall. There were no other nominations submitted during the five-minute time limit set by Mr. Fitzgerald.

Mr. Sexsmith's Remarks.

Mr. Sexsmith was warmly received when he was named by President Fitzgerald as the party's choice. He made a comparatively brief reply, speaking calmly and earnestly without heroics or bombast.

"Words fail me," he said, "to express my deep appreciation of the honour conferred upon me by this convention of being your representative, especially giving me an unanimous nomination. It is some years since I first came before you. I always tried to do my duty and this convention is one of the best evidences I have ever had that my work is being appreciated, and as far as you are concerned, is considered satisfactory."

He was pleased with the large attendance. It was an evidence of their interest in their country and the Conservative party which had done so much toward laying the foundation of Canada's greatness. He referred to our system of government by party which [illegible] ever devised, [illegible] the people supreme. Representatives were sent to Parliament to represent all the people of Canada and to do whatever was best for the Dominion as a whole. We've got to give away to a certain extent sometimes in order that a policy may be a benefit to the greatest number.

The Trials of Office.

Since 1911 Mr. Sexsmith said he had been on the government side of the House and he realised the difference.

"I was as happy as a bumble bee in Opposition. You never did anything to amount to anything and you were not expected to get so much as when you are supporting the government. I have tried to do what I thought was in the best interests of the great mass of the country, and the best interests of the Conservative party.

I haven't done a great deal; I received a good response from the Ministers and I have no reason to complain."

Rural Mail Delivery.

In the east riding there are 30 rural mail routes serving 1,000 farmers. It is not perfect. Some "good Conservatives" have not been able to get a box at their gates. I'd like to see one at every man's gate. I don't care whether he is a Liberal or Conservative. It is in the interests of the people, and especially the young people. The Postal Department will double on roads for a distance of a mile for four boxes or upwards, but will not double for seven-eighths of a mile. Mr. Sexsmith said he intended to have the seven-eighths stretched to a mile.

Mr. Sexsmith said there was no immediate sign of an election, but it was best to be prepared and ready to go into battle as before with every hope of success.

Officers Re-elected.

On motion of Mr. Melville, seconded by Mr. Johnston, all the officers were re-elected, and Messrs. Wilson, Sherwen and Bygott were elected to the vacant vice-presidencies in Dummer, Burleigh and Lakefield respectively.

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., said it was his first opportunity of thanking the delegates for their support at the last provincial election. He spoke briefly on the work of the first session.

"Keep Powder Dry."

Mr. Wilmot, Conservative, organiz-

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Furthermore I was gettin' so dead sleepy that half o' the time it seemed like a bad dream; but a little after one in the mornin' we reached the Horseshoe and when we stopped in front of the door, Tom Smith and the girl came out; and it struck me right then 'at they seemed perfectly friendly with each other. The gel couldn't quite manage her breathin' as we carried her father inside, but she didn't shed tears, nor sob hysterical, and she acted on every suggestion the old hermit made without askin' questions nor offerin' an amendment. She sure had quality, that girl had.

Old Josiah's bedroom was fitted out like the picture in a furniture catalogue, but he turned it over as free and hearty as though such bedrooms were as common in those parts as cottonwood trees. He had me help him put the gel's father to bed, and then while I was straightenin' up his clothes with the money-belt on top wher it would be first seen, old Josiah stepped out in the other room to mix up some medicine, and the gel came in to watch by her father's side.

Her face was a little gray and it sagged a bit, but her eyes were brighter than usual. "Your friend has gone," sez she. "He told me to say good-by to you, and that you were not to try to find him."

"Do you mean that Tom Smith?" sez I, and she nodded her head. "What he needs most is a gardeen, but I'm not it."

"He is in trouble," sez she, in a low tone.

"So will every one else be who takes an interest in him," sez I.

"Then," sez she, with a fightin' smile, "you and I will both be in trouble, for we have to take an interest in him after what we three went through together."

I was lookin' into her face with a grin of appreciation when the old hermit came in. "I reckon that's about all you can do, Hally Hawkins," sez old Josiah, cheerily.

That old hermit had thawed out his hospitality to such an extent that I had about fortified myself again' tellin' him not to bother when he urged me to make myself at home for the rest of the night; but he couldn't have expressed his gratitude any more flowery if I had been a wayside pump. I stepped outside to see if he would follow after and point out which one of his empty chanties was to be my sleepin' place, but there, with my saddle on him and the reins trailin' on the ground, stood the paint pony.

"Cloverblossom," sez I, "don't you never do nothin' for nobody without gettin' paid in advance"; and then I clambered up into the saddle and headed for the Diamond Dot.

Around the clock in the saddle is all in the day's work, but it was now forty-eight hours since I had started [illegible] all over the state of Texas, and durin' most o' that time my emotions were bein' plowed and harrowed. Truth to tell, I was drowsy.

As a rule I could sleep as comfortable in a saddle those days as in a bed, and that pinto was a sure-footed pony, and sensible, but instead of lettin' the reins slack that night, I must have had dreams, for several times I bumped into trees, and finally I woke up holdin' the reins in one hand and leanin' again' a wall of stone with the other.

"Clover-blossom," I sez, "I don't know where we are nor why we are, nor how we got here, but this locality suits me fine. It smells of dawn; but I don't have to pay anything extra for the misuse o' sunshine, and I'm goin' to sleep again right now."

By bitin' my lip I managed to stay awake long enough to get the pinto hobbled and stripped; and then I said farewell, sweet world. It was about two in the afternoon when I awoke, and I just rolled over on my back and gazed up at the sky through cottonwood leaves. I was so out and out rested that I felt stretchy and free-minded like an old house dog; and the still, small voice of Jim Jimison's investments didn't ring in my ears worth a cent. I wondered lazily where in the deuce I was, but I could not see that it much mattered, and so I just smuggled myself into a cloud which floated above and let myself drift along with it.

The sound of voices attracted my attention, and when I picked out one as belongin' to Tom Smith, I was on the bit in a second.

"I have been watchin' for you for two hours," sez he. "When I left you I rode for about an hour and then went to sleep under a tree expectin' to start on early this morning; but I couldn't go without seeing you again."

"Was there something you wanted to say to me?" sez the gel's voice.

"Many things, sez he; but I can't say them. How is your father?"

"He is resting and does not seem to suffer," sez the girl; "but he is very weak. What do you wish to say to me?"

"Why," sez he, "after thinkin' over our conversation last night, I feared you didn't quite understand it. I didn't want to say anything to shock you; but the truth is that I am an outlaw and the government has set a price on my head."

"Then I have brought trouble to you," sez the girl, not seemin' much indignant about him bein' an outlaw.

"No," sez he, "not at all. I am absolutely innocent of the crime for which they are after me; but I am guilty of plenty of others, and when they try a man like me, they don't try him for any one thing, they try him on his general reputation, and they accuse him of whatever crime carries the worst penalty."

"There is some one I want to see first," sez he. "You can't possibly understand how a feller first gets started as an outlaw — I was only a boy—but once he gets in, it is mighty hard to get out again. I intend to live straight from now on,—I have been livin' so for over a year; but I have to square myself with the old crowd first. They were real friends to me when I needed friends, and then we had trouble. Now, I just cannot start new until I find out where I stand with them. While I was with Big Jeff, I heard of a man who can tell me where to find them, and I'm going to see him now."

"After you have seen them, where will you go?" asked the girl.

"Probably to Mexico," sez he.

They hung silent for some time, and I lay on my back down below, and wondered if those two sillies up above really believed that he had come back just to hand over such a line o' talk as this. He had sprouted love-feelin's for her, and she was full of romantic nonsense for him, and nothin' would be so certain to root up her peace of mind as for him to come back just to tell her that he was goin' away for good and all. I felt a little ashamed at eavesdroppin' 'em, but I hdn't expected 'em to get confidential, and after they had I feared it would embarrass 'em more for me to beg their pardon than if I just let 'em go on and then kept their secrets.

"A year ago," sez she, in a dull, steady voice, "I wouldn't have believed it possible to stand out here in the open and talk to an outlaw without feeling repugnance to him; but his last year has beaten me as with hammers, and now, I can sympathise with you. I never can repay you for what you saved me from, and perhaps—perhaps it was for just this that you had to go through what you did go through. I am sure that from this on you will be open and upright."

Their voices were husky, they were so earnest about what they were sayin', but it sounded purty flabby to me down below, and I was willin' for 'em to get through as soon as it was convenient to 'em.

"I must go in, now," sez the girl. "We shall probably never meet again but whenever times go hard with you I want you to remember that I am still thinking of you with gratitude, and perhaps even that will help you a little. My name is Kate, Kate Kastle."

Kate was the name of an old white mare Barbie used to ride and it had allus struck me as bein' just fitted to a steady-goin', safe old critter; but after the girl had spoke it, it took on a new colour right now, and it seemed to suit her exact.

"You can think of me as Lester," sez Tom Smith. This was the first time I had ever heard of Tom bein' called Lester for short, but it was all on a line with the rest o' their nonsense.

"Good-by, Kate," sez he.

"Good-by, Lester," sez she; and then I heard 'em grip hands with a pop, and immediately hurry away in opposite directions.

"Humph," sez I, gettin' to my feet, "that's about the peorest attempt to end things, ever I heard of."

I had to walk a full quarter before catchin' up with the pinto, and I reckon he enus; have though; I was altogether crazy. I had gone to sleep just to the north of the Horseshoe.

CHAPTER TWENTY.

The Old Hermit Gets Friendly.

II circled around to the south on the way back so as to locate some of the stuff; but my mind was dwellin' mostly on Kate. Tom Smith had told her just enough to stir up her imagination, and I knew that right at that minute she was buildin' him up a past which would make him out a hero at every step.

Shorty allus said 'at Christmas and the Fourth o' July were the only hysterical dates he could remember; and Red used to lure him into sayin' this as frequent as possible. Well, not one woman in a thousand can tell the difference between hysterical and historical, when it comes to fittin' up a past for the man 'at's took her fancy.

Jim and Phil McLaughlin rode in just ahead of me, and they were sittin' on the porch hoddin' a confiab when I came up after havin' give the pinto a little grain as a thank-offerin'. Jim leveled his eyes at me as though he was about to fire a volley of personal questions into me, but I refused to look guilty.

I allus make it a point to hold out for the same privileges as a veteran dog. When I'm about the place I am bossy because I'm interested; but when I choose to pirute around a little on my own hook, I don't aim to take kindly to a bootin' when I find it convenient to return.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known society lady who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look 10 to 20 years younger.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WHEN A MAN MARRIES

This One Fancied Himself in Love With His Fiancee's Avowed Rival.

By GEORGE MUNSON.

"I'll walk home with you, Dick," said Frank Fayles to his friend Richard Talbot, and started away with him from Miss Landis' door. At the corner of the block he stopped and wrung his friend's hand violently.

"I congratulate you, old man," he said warmly. "I think your fiancee is one of the finest girls I've ever met—and just suited to you, too."

"It's odd, Dick," he continued, "but I never gave you credit for being able to pick a winner like that. I don't believe any of your friends did, either. I suppose your being an artist makes us think you must be erratic and miserably married and all that. But you're done splendidly, my boy, and I bet your married life will be one long dream of paradise."

"Do You Know You Have Been Acting In a Very Odd Manner Lately?"

Talbot did not reply, and his friend, mortified by his coldness, accompanied him in silence. Talbot was thinking bitterly of his folly—his absolute folly. It was too late to withdraw with honor now. The wedding was only one month away. And during the past two weeks he had come to realize that he had made the mistake of his life.

He had thought Elsie Landis all that could be desired in any woman until—until he had met Edith Spinner. A friend had introduced them, and then Talbot knew that, deeply as he had been in love during his thirty-odd years of life, he had never surrendered so completely to the divine passion before. Honor forbade him to speak; but the pressure of their hands when they met must have betrayed them to each other. They had met three times only—and he was head over heels in love with Edith.

He thought over his future that night. He could not withdraw. He could not tell Elsie the cause of his coldness. But he could, and must, in honor tell her of his miserable doubts for their future happiness. How could he ever have thought himself in love with Elsie, when Edith Spinner was the very complementary portion of his soul?

He rose up after a sleepless night, resolved to give Elsie the chance to reconsider. One thought buoyed him up; loving as she was, he had felt that of late—ever since he had known Edith, in fact—her affection had been less demonstrative. What if she also had come to believe that happiness would not bless their union? The day dragged with feet of lead. It was not until eight o'clock that evening that he found himself in Elsie's presence.

Their greeting was commonplace enough: The handshake, the kiss, and even that seemed perfunctory. Talbot sat down.

"Richard," said his fiancee, looking at him curiously, "do you know you have been acting in a very odd manner lately?"

"I? How is that?" he stammered.

"You haven't seemed to love me as much as you used to," she stammered. "I have been thinking—O, Richard, don't you care for me?"

A moment later and she was on her knees at his side, her arms around him, weeping.

"Elsie!" exclaimed Richard, miserably, "I—I love you—"

"You won't love me when I have told you something," she sobbed.

"Tell me and see," said he. He could think of nothing better to say.

"I have been untrue to you," she sobbed. "I don't mean that I've—kissed anybody else. No, but—O, Richard, you are so simple and noble, you would never understand. Well, I—I had been wondering whether our marriage was going to be happy. It had begun to seem so ordinary, our love. And then I met a man—just two weeks ago. He fascinated me and—and I loved him more than you, dearest."

Richard sat up very straight. This was a turning of the tables with a vengeance.

"We never told each other," she went on, weeping bitterly. "But he knew and I knew, and it seemed so hopeless that that only added to the feeling between us. And I was frantic. I felt that we ought not to be married until you knew—and I didn't dare to tell you until today."

"Why today?" inquired Richard kindly.

"Because he is married now," sobbed Elsie. "He got married yesterday. And he had been engaged to her for a whole year—just think of that! He had just been flirting with me and I—fooling me. And then a sudden revulsion came over me and I knew that it was you I had loved all the time. Richard, can you ever forgive me or shall I give you back your ring?"

"Nobody you know, Richard," she answered. "So it wouldn't do you any good to tell you his name. But I'll tell you whom he married. I believe you met her once. It was a Miss Spinner."

"Edith Spinner!" he shouted, and out of the tumult of emotions in his heart he was conscious of a mad rage that dominated all others.

"Yes, Richard. She is said to be a dreadful flirt and to have had affairs with half a dozen men at the same time. I don't believe there will be much happiness for them. Why, what is the matter?"

"Come here, Elsie," said Richard, and led her to the lounge. "Elsie, dearest, I have been as big a fool as—I mean, we have both behaved like ninnies. Do you know I have been fancying myself in love with Edith?"

"You, Richard? Since we were engaged! Why, how dared you?"

"How dared you?" he retorted.

"I didn't!" she cried. "It was purely imagination. I just feared that we mightn't be quite suited to each other and—"

"That's what I did."

"You never kissed her, Dick?"

"Never!" he said, looking her in the eyes, and then suddenly he drew her upon his knee and kissed her.

"You see, dearest," he said, "it amounts to this: I guess when two people are going to get married they expect all sorts of things of each other, and then, when they don't quite measure up to the mark, each thinks the marriage is going to be unhappy. Well, I guess that isn't the proper basis for marriage. There must be a sort of mutual trust and confidence and—what I'll call faith. Elsie, darling, shall we start over again in that spirit?"

"Yes, Richard," she answered, raising her lips to his. "But—you're quite sure that you never kissed her, Dick?"

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE "RAVENING WOLFE" IS CHIEF OF STAFF

Descendant of Man in Whose Arms the Great General Wolfe Died at Quebec

Chief of the Imperial staff of the British army is the proud title of Lt.-General Sir James Wolfe Murray, a man in whom Canadians should be interested because of the fact that he is a lineal descendant of Col. Murray of the Black Watch, in whose arms General James Wolfe died upon the Plains of Abraham before Quebec in 1759. Col. Murray named his son James Wolfe, and the two names of England's great hero have been handed down from generation to generation. The present James Wolfe was born on March 18, 1853.

This boy in due time went to the aristocratic Glenalmond school in Perthshire. From there he went to Harrow, thence to the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, getting a commission in the Gunners in 1872. At the "shop" no one supposed that the young Scot would have a particularly brilliant career but it was recognised that he could work for ten hours at a stretch and was extremely long-headed. It is told of Wolfe Murray that on seeing the Pyramids for the first time he was observed to be pondering deeply over the spectacle. Everyone believed him to be vastly impressed by their antiquity and grandeur until he solemnly delivered himself as follows: "Only to think of these things standing here all these thousands o years. Give me a couple of batteries and I would guarantee to knock the rubbish to bits in a week."

The "Ravening Wolfe"

Why he should ever have been called the "Ravening Wolfe" is not clear. There is no record in any mess of his ever having murdered a sheep-fold; on the contrary, he has always been known as a most staid and respectable member of society, who has been twice married, and brought up two sons and three daughters in the way they should go. In the bad old days when Wolfe Murray first entered the service, subalterns considered that it was the proper thing to play hard and work not at all. But Wolfe Murray was a heretic. Play he did not greatly care about, but he worked all day, studied Russian, and passed for the Staff College. It was probably there he learned that a rifle is a more or less serviceable arm for the destruction of one's enemies. In his early youth he, like most gunners, had a fine contempt for that weapon, and on an inspecting officer questioning him about his battery's musketry progress looked vague and astonished. On being pressed for an answer he admitted to knowing that his men had some hand-guns, but added that "he did not know what they used them for."

His Chance Came

On leaving the Staff College he went to the Intelligence Department at the War Office, and then off to Aldershot. At last a chance came. Britain had trouble with a dusky potentate. A small British garrison was shut up in Comassi, and Sir James Willcocks was despatched with a force to relieve it. Major Wolfe Murray was appointed as commandant of the lines of communication. Detail and hard work suited him excellently; he got a decoration and a brevet. His job in Ashanti had done him so well that when the South African War came along he got a similar one in Natal, and was mentioned in despatches both by Sir George White and Sir Redvers Buller. By this time he was a major-general, and went out to India as Quartermaster-General. His superiors looked on what he had done and found that it was good, so they revived an ancient billet, by name Master-General of the Ordnance, and this they gave to Wolfe Murray. The chief duty of the person holding this job was to give tips to those in authority over him and let them know when guns, rifles, and ammunition were reaching vanishing point in the arsenals—in other words, to get ardent economists out of scrapes. Murray could do this more than well because detail and organization were as the breath of his nostrils. In gratitude for all he had saved everybody he was made a divisional general in India and later succeeded the late Sir Charles Douglas as Chief of the Imperial Staff.

Destroyers of Zeppelins

Mr. R. F. Robertson, of Dublin, has produced an invention designed for the destruction of Zeppelin balloons by aeroplanes. It consists of a steel dart, fitted at its rear with fish hook like projections. The dart is hollow, and contains an explosive, which burns with a fierce sharp flame. When such a dart is dropped from an aeroplane upon a Zeppelin or other gas balloon, the hooks catch in the fabric after the point of the dart has pierced it and the explosive charge is ignited by the falling backward of a friction detonator. As the explosion takes place inside the gas bag, its effects are expected to be disastrous.

QUAINT OLD GERMAN CITIES

Empire of Peoples That Are as Diverse as Are Territories They Occupy.

Germany is a big country. Moreover, it is the most interesting country in Europe save Italy. Towns can be found there that are, as Henry James would call them, "mediaeval silhouettes;" and there also are the most ultra modern cities in the world, cities that are more representative of the best of the twentieth century's thought on municipal life and municipal problems than is any American municipality, says the Travel Magazine. It is an empire of peoples as diverse as are the territories they occupy; the brusque and domineering Prussians, living in the vast plain of northern Germany; the ancient Saxons, still clinging to former superstitions and still living in the beautiful environment of their exquisite old-time towns and in the atmosphere of legend and romance that lingers yet around the regions of the Harz; the gay Wurtemburgers, with their brilliant capital of Stuttgart; and best of all, beautiful, enchanted Bavaria, land of medieval cities, of mountains, of castles, of lakes, of the kindly, fine-faced men and women who live there. Let me outline a charming trip from Cologne to Hegensburg.

From Cologne to Mayence, which constitutes the tourist's Rhine, is 117 miles, and the trip can be made in a day on steamers that are comfortable. The narrow stream, seldom more than a quarter of a mile in width and more frequently much less, is crowded with boats of every description; on the banks are large cities of modern look, and villages that still preserve in wall and tower the appearance of a distant past; terraced vineyards lead from the water's edge up steep hillsides to ruined castles on the summits; and over all is an atmosphere of legend and of wild and thrilling historic fact that makes of the rhine country one of the great objective points in every European tour. Guerver's "Legends of the Rhine" should be read by the traveler who would get the spirit of what he sees; and some knowledge of the history of the varied peoples now united in Imperial Germany, and of their varying stages of civilization, is also essential to a full enjoymdent of the land.

Clamps have been invented to fasten the cover on an ironing board in a few seconds.

BLOOD THIN AND WEAK TOO NERVOUS TO SLEEP

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own cases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

GERMAN FINED $25 ON CHARGE OF SEDITION

CALGARY, June 17. — Raynold Horden, a naturalized German farmer, was let off with a fine of $25 and a warning in the criminal court on a charge of sedition. He confided to a German-speaking Scotsman in a hotel here that he was going to join half a million Germans from Canada and the States, who intended finding their way to Germany.

Horden said he was drunk at the time, and could not go back to Germany, as he had deserted from the Kaiser's army to come to Canada.

COMEDY IN BATTLE.

Serio-Comic Incidents of the Zulu War in South Africa.

The following story is told of an incident that occurred during the Zulu war in South Africa, when an overwhelming force of natives was opposed to a little band of English marines. From the Zulu host stepped forth a [illegible] which he calmly mounted on a tripod in the open, while the marines looked on, admiring his pluck and wondering much what he proposed to do. At last one jovial marine suggested that their photographs were about to be taken, and by common consent no shots were fired.

Having loaded his piece with great deliberation, the Zulu primed it, sighted it and, leaning hard upon its breech, fired. The recoil knocked him head over heels backward, while a great roar went up from the delighted marines. He sat up, looking dazed, and then, the amusement over, he and his countrymen charged and were annihilated by a volley from the steadily aimed pieces of the little band of marines.

During one of the many battles waged by the New Zealand Maoris against the British settlers the latter ran out of ammunition. At the moment when death seemed imminent a flag of truce appeared from the enemy's trenches and messengers came forward with a supply of cartridges to enable the white men to continue fighting.—Washington Star.

The Spy and the King.

The following story is told of Louis XVIII., king of France, and Fouche, who had been at one time Napoleon's minister of police: After the Bourbon restoration the king asked Fouche whether he had set spies over him during the empire. Fouche admitted that he had. "Who was the spy?" the king asked, and he was informed that it had been the Comte de Blacas. "How much did he get?" continued the king. "Two hundred thousand francs a year, your majesty." "Ah, well," said Louis, "he was honest, then, after all, I had said."

The Sickroom Door.

In severe cases of illness where the patient is disturbed by the noise made in closing the door tie one corner of a handkerchief around the knob on one side of the door and the opposite corner around the knob on the other side. The door will now close noiselessly on the folds of the handkerchief.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. R. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

MAY EXAMINE THE LUSITANIA

LONDON June 17—Examination of the Lusitania by divers from a neutral country, with a view to ascertaining what she had on board in the way of arms and ammunition, was suggested in the House of Commons by Laurence Ginnell. The practicability of this suggestion was questioned by Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, owing to the depth at which the vessel is lying, and because that locality is not free of hostile craft.

Mr. Runciman said he thought there would be no difficulty in the way of ascertaining all the material facts by means of the Board of Trade inquiry.

Easiest Way to Remove Ugly Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture)

Here is a method for removing hair or fuzz that is unfailing and is quite inexpensive: Mix a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, and spread on hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes, rub it off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. No harm or inconveniece results from this treatment, but be careful to get genuine delatone.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

"There is a healthier feeling in wholesale circles generally, although the volume of trade is not up to that of a year ago. Of course there are a few exceptions, the business of a wholesale grocery firm last month being $56,000 over that of the corresponding month last year. Better reports are coming in from dry goods and boot and shoe manufacturing concerns; and on the whole considering war times and their tendency to unsettle trade, the business situation is in as good a position as could be expected. Remittances are only fair, whilst city payments have improved."

A review of the week's markets shows wheat still decidedly on the decline, coarse grains tending to lower levels, mill feeds weaker, dairy produce easy and other products fairly firm.

WHEAT

There has been a net drop on this market of 15c in the past week. Several factors account for the decline. High prices resulted in increased acreage and the new crop must now be taken into consideration. So far little foreign interest has been shown in the 1915 crop. Indian wheat, too, is now going forward by the millions of bushels, and there is still much wheat stored in Russia that can be released on European markets should the Dardanelles be forced. No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.29; No. 2, $1.23; No. 3, $1.23; Ontario wheat, $1.17 to $1.19.

COARSE GRAINS

There has been a scaling down in prices of coarse grains, the same factors operating here as in the case of wheat. Quotations follow: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 59c to 60c; No. 3 and extra No. 1 feed, 58½c to 57½c; Ontario oats, 54c to 55c; peas, $1.50 to $1.60; corn, American, 76½c; Canadian, 75c; barley, malting, 70c to 72c; feed, 65c; rye, $1.19; buckwheat, 75c to 77c. At Montreal quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 3, 32½c; local oats, 30c to 31c; corn, 78c to 79c.

MILL FEEDS

Here too the tendency is downwards, bran having declined $1 to $25; shorts, $27 to $28; middlings, $29 to $30; feed flour, $1.80 a bag. Montreal quotes bran, $25; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $34; moullie, $35 to $40.

HAY AND STRAW

Prospects continue promising for a good hay crop and recent rains will help considerably. There is still time, however, in the next four or five weeks for adverse weather conditions to considerably reduce the cutting and the market holds firm. No. 1 baled hay, $16 to $17; No. 2, $14 to $15; No. 3, $12 to $13; baled straw, $7 to $8. At Montreal No. 1 baled hay is quoted $21.50; No. 2, $20.50 to $21 and No. 3, $18 to $19.50.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Storage stock of eggs have been pretty well taken up, although surprise receipts coming along are still going into storage. The ruling price in the country is 18c. On this market specials in cartons sell at 24c; choicest, 24c to 25c; extras, 22c to 24c; No. 1, new laid, 21c to 22c and No. 2, 18c to 19c. The Montreal market quotes selected stock, 22c to 23½c.

Poultry quotations are: Chickens, live, 13c to 14c; dressed, 17c to 20c; fowl, live, 12c to 14c; dressed, 14c to 16c; ducks, live, 13c to 15c; dressed, 16c to 18c; turkeys, live, 18c to 20c; dressed, 22c to 25c.

HIDES AND WOOL

Quotations on hides are still on the upgrade: Hides, flat, cured, 15½c to 16½c per lb.; part cured, 14½c to 15½c; green, 12½c to 13½c; calfskins, cured, 16c to 17c; part cured, 15c; deacons, or bob calf, 45c to $1 each; horse, take-off, No. 1, $4.75 to $4.85; No. 2, $2.25 to $3 each; sheepskins, 75c to $1; shearlings and spring lambs, 25c to 45c; horsehair, firmers pebble stock, 25c to 28c per lb.

Wool quotations are: Washed, coarse, 25c to 27c; fine, 28c, to 30c; washed, rejects, 25c to 26c; unwashed, coarse, 19c to 20c; fine, 22c to 23c.

POTATOES AND BEANS

The ruling quotation on potatoes remains unchanged from last week. Ontario's selling at 65c in car lots and New Brunswicks, 55c. At Montreal too the market is quiet, a few car lots being placed at 65½c to 70c per bag of 90 lbs.

Beans here are quoted: Primes, $2.10, to $2.25; hand picked, $2.20 to $2.25. At Montreal one and one-half pound pickers are quoted at $2.20 to $2.25; three-pound pickers, $2.05 to $2.10 and five-pound pickers, $2.00 to $2.

DAIRY PRODUCE

Receipts of butter into Montreal for the week ending June 5, 1915, were 14,068 packages, against 34,859 packages for the week previous and 28,234 for the same week last year. Cold storage men still hold back and refuse to buy the June make at present quotations for future markets. What appears to trouble them is the increased make of the Middle West. Saskatchewan, it is reported, will double its make of butter this season, and Alberta will show a considerable increase. This will interfere considerably with the market for Eastern butter in British Columbia. Prices, however, have not declined as some dealers expected, and choice butter has been freely sold at 27½c, with some inferior lots down to 26c. On this market fresh creamery prints command 28c to 29c; solids, 26c to 28c; dairy prints, 21c to 23c; and bakers, 19c to 21c.

"The exports of cheese from Montreal for week ending June 5," reports the Trade Bulletin, "were 36,905 boxes and from New York for week ending June 3rd, 28,343 boxes, making a total from both ports of 115,291 boxes, against 48,676 boxes for the corresponding week last year and all from Montreal." These figures are in themselves enough to explain in part why the cheese market has been markedly weaker of late. It is just possible, however, that a large proportion of the exports going forward, are for government account, and if this is the case, the situation is more promising than it would otherwise be. Finest Westerns are quoted at 17½c, and some Quebec cheese has sold down below the 17c line. Board prices are given elsewhere.

LIVE STOCK

The run of cattle at the Toronto yards this week totalled 5,155 head. This was 1,400 more than the corresponding week a year ago and nearly 100 in excess of last week. One feature saved the market from a breakdown. This was the demand for heavy butcher steers, bulls and cows for shipment to France. These cattle are being shipped to the French army on the hoof. The steers and heifers sold mostly between $8 and $8.35, while bulls and cows went at $7 to $7.50. At the beginning of the week prices on butcher steers and heifers receded 15c and remained at that price throughout the week. Quotations run about as follows:

Heavy choice steers, $8.10 to $8.35; handy choice steers, $7.85 to $8.15; butcher steers, $6.75 to $7.85; heifers, $6.75 to $8; choice cows, $6.75 to $7.50; com. to good, $5 to $6.75; feeders, $6.50 to $7.40; stockers, $5.50 to $7.25; canners and cutters, $4 to $5.

The demand for milch cows was slightly easier at the end of the week, but the undertone of the market was strong: Choice, $65 to $85; com. and med., $45 to $65; springers, $60 to $85. Calves were strong all week, good veal calves going at $7.50 to $10; com. and med., $4.50 to $7.50; bob calves, each, $2 to $7.

Lambs were scarce and firm, while sheep were very weak. Spring lambs, $10 to $12; yearlings, light, $7 to $8; cows, light, $5.50 to $6.50; sheep, heavy and bucks, $4 to $5.50; culls, $3 to $4.25.

The hog market was steady, quotations running from $9.15 to $9.50 f.o.b.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

DRESS IN MIDDY STYLE.

By Anabel Worthington.

The middy style is so becoming and suitable to young girls that it is no wonder some one has thought of designing a dress with distinctive middy features. For, contrary to appearance, this little dress has no separate skirt, the skirt part being attached to the blouse under the hem or tuck finish. The whole dress slips on over the head and then the front opening is drawn up with the cord or lacing. The sleeves being cut in one with the body, there is little time required in the making, and certainly very little trouble need be expended for such a simple frock.

The only seams are at the shoulder and under arm. The sleeves may be long if one prefers, but the short sleeve seems to go with the style of the dress. For 8-year size 2 yards of the white and 1¼ yards of the dark material, 36 inches wide, would be required. The pattern, No. 7,504, comes in five sizes, from 4 to 12 years.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

THE FRENCH ATTACK IN NEW QUARTER

BRITISH SUBMARINE SINKS THREE TRANSPORTS

FRENCH START NEW OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT IN THE VOSGES

Capture All the Heights Dominating the Fecht River Valley and Are Advancing Toward the German Military Centre of Colmar in Alsace---Important Gains Says Official Statement.

TURKISH TROOPS ARE REPULSED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, June 17th. — (French official communique.) — A new French movement in the Vosges, pressing forward on a wide front, has resulted in the capture of all the heights dominating the Fecht River valley from Metzoral to Steinabruck.

This afternoon's official communique reported further progress of this movement toward the German military centre of Colmar, in Alsace, but contained no hint of the number of forces engaged.

"Our troops have made important gains between the branches of the upper Fecht, and also along the heights between the Fecht and Lauch valleys, west of Colmar," said the official statement

LONDON, June 17.—The Turkish troops in the Dardanelles have been repused in their attempt to recapture the trenches lost by them to the British on June 12, according to the official statement on the situation made public to-day. On the night of June 15th the enemy led by a German officer, made a gallant attack on the trenches occupied by one of the British brigades. Many dead were counted, including the German leader and his Turkish subordinate.

LONDON, June 17. — Charges that the incompetency of the Lusitania's crew was partly responsible for the heavy loss of life when the liner was torpedoed, were made by the survivors who testified at the official inquiry. A passenger named Baker swore that the steamer lacked competent men to aid in lowering the boats and that several passengers undertook the task, but were stopped by the officers.

BERLIN, June 17—Via wireless—The admiralty to-day officially admitted that the German submarine U—14 has been destroyed by the British and its crew taken prisoners.

OTTAWA, June 17.—The Canadian casualties up to this morning reach a total of 8830. This includes 1429 killed, 5788 wounded, and 1623 missing.

ROME, June 17. — The Italian troops now occupy the whole ridge of Monte Nero. Despatches received here this afternoon said that the artillery is being dragged into position on a peak 5000 feet high, dominating the Austrian positions at Tolmingo.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., June 17.—With a battery of rapid firers and machine guns and plenty of ammunition aboard, the flagship Colorado, of the Pacific Fleet, sailed from here to-day for Lobari Bay, Mexico, carrying 600 marines and blue jackets to protect the Americans in the Yacuqui valley. This is believed to be the beginning of a new American intervention in Mexico.

LONDON, June 17.—Minister of Munitions Lloyd-George announced in the Commons this afternoon that the Government is sending "a prominent business man" to America to discuss the whole subject of United States and Canadian war contracts.

An Athens bulletin says: A British submarine on Wednesday sank three Turkish troopships full of troops, for the Dardanelles operations, according to a despatch from Mudros to-day.

ENLISTMENT WONDERFUL

OTTAWA, June 17.—It is estimated that there are from 135,000 to 140,000 men already recruited for service with the Canadian forces.

These include men who have been at the front, the troops in England, and those now being organized in the Dominion. It is intended to increase the total to about 157,000 men. No troube whatever is being experienced in raising the recruits for the 35 new regiments recently organized. "Enlistment is simply wonderful," is the statement of the department here.

LONDON, June 17.—There is one comforting admission in to-day's statement from Berlin, and that is the reference to Rusia's improved position with regard to ammunition. The Berlin statement says: "On Tuesday evening the enemy threw tens of thousands of shells against the village of Jeonoretz, north of Przasnyss, forcing our troops to evacuate their positoins." While the Germans claim to have retaken these positions later, the ability of the Russians to shower the enemy with shells in this way is significant.

So Writes Peterborough Boy But By This Time Many of These Wounded at St. Julien Have Returned to Firing Line.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

A letter received from one of the Peterborough boys in the 2nd Battalion, yesterday, stated that at the time he wrote there were only eighteen men left on duty of one hundred and twenty-eight of the 57th detachment which left Peterborough. A number, of course, were sent home from Valcartier and Salisbury, and the quota that crossed to France was about one hundred strong. Many of the men wounded at Langemarck, by this time will undoubtedly be back on the firing line. One of them in fact, Pte. Fred Clarke, has been wounded for the second time.

Mr. Wilfrid Huycke, who has been attending the Law School at Toronto, and recently succeeded in passing his examinations, spent a few days at home with his parents, Judge and Mrs. Huycke. He left this morning for Belleville, where he is completing his course for a Lieutenant's Commission.

KINGSTON, June 16.—On July 8th the 38th Battalion will go to Valcartier from Barriefield camp, and there is a possibility of the 59th Battalion, to be formed in Ottawa, coming to Barriefield to take the place of the 38th.

It is practically settled that Major H. J. Dawson, acting officer commanding the 14th Regiment, P. W. O. Rifles, Kingston, in the absence of Lieut.-Col. W. S. Hughes, will command the 59th Overseas Battalion, which will be organized at Ottawa immediately. Major Dawson since the war broke out has been in command of the 14th Regiment home guard. He is a member of the civil staff of the Royal Military College, of which he is a graduate. Major Dawson is one of the best rifle shots in the country.

GORDON-DAVIES COY'S FRIDAY AND SATURDAY TABLE ECONOMIES

To-morrow and Saturday ought to be busy days at the meat and provision store of Gordon-Davies, Limited. Housewives will be delighted with the lists of lowered prices in the bill-of-fare in both their meats and grocery departments. Stocked as this store always is with the choicest dainties in fresh meats and fancy prepared foods, poultry, etc., as well as in fresh fancy groceries, fruits, etc. Their announcement for Friday and Saturday of such unusual reductions in table needs will attract the housekeeper's attention. In teas alone, which are daily soaring in price, a big saving awaits the buyers. Butter, canned goods, soaps, relishes, etc., are also lowly priced to meet the demands of economical shoppers. The meat list has been substantially reduced in most lines, and the cooked meats will be appreciated just now as the hot weather approaches, because of the saving of time and discomfort attending the cooking. Read their advt.

SENTENCE DEFERRED

SENTENCE MONDAY

Alexander Lillico, who was found guilty at his trial at the General Sessions of the Peace, of having entered the house of Mr. Fred Collett, Brown street, with intent to commit an assault, on motion of Crown Attorney Hatton, came before is Honour Judge Huycke this afternoon for sentence, but was again remanded until Monday next, until some further inquiries as to his record and reputation are instituted.

The jury, in bringing in their verdict, put in a strong recommendation for the mercy of the Court, and this fact coupled with the circumstances of the case is being considered by His Honour.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who has been conducting the case for the prisoner, had a number of letters from people in the city who had known Lillico, and he submitted them for the inspection of His Honour Judge Huycke and the Crown Attorney. He made a strong plea for mercy, pointing out that Lillico had come to the city last August and was known as a good workman. He was employed as C.P.R. Constable at the bridge soon after war was declared. As an expert gardener he was employed for a time by the Peterborough Floral Company. Mr. Gordon had been informed by Chief Thompson that there was no previous record of any conviction against Lillico. City Detective Newhall was previously acquainted with him and knew he was a good workman. He drew attention to the strong recommendation for mercy of the jury, also the fact that every witness for the prosecution spoke well of him in their evidence. The prisoner was under the influence of liquor when he fell, and it was owing to liquor that he fell. In addition, the intent of the assault, if there was any intent, never took place. As soon as there was an outcry he left the house. He was informed that about that time there was a party of Scotchmen in the city, and Lillico got started to drink with them. Up to that time he had a reputation for sobriety.

His Honour Judge Huycke remarked that in order to give the defence every chance he would hear what any of the gentlemen who knew Lillico personally, had to say about him. Mr. Roland Denne, President of the Peterborough Floral Company, in whose employ Lillico was shortly after the preliminary hearing on the charge, said he was a good workman and was always on the job. He did not know anything about his supposed inebriety.

Detective Newhall when asked, said he knew the prisoner when he was employed on the C.P.R. bridge and found him a quiet, obliging fellow. After he left there he knew him to drink a little, but was very much surprised to find him charged with the offence. Chief of Police Thompson did not know the prisoner personally, but knew there was no record of any previous conviction against him. Mr. Dellecour, with whom Lillico boarded since he came to Peterborough, said he was a quiet man about the house and did not know anything about him drinking. He never saw him under the influence of liquor. He attended St. James church as far as he knew.

A question was submitted to the prisoner as to what church he attended and he replied that he went to St. James' and Knox. The only minister he knew was Rev. Mr. Clarry, but he did not know him very well.

His Honour addressed the prisoner saying it was a painful duty to have to sentence him on this charge and he wished more time for consideration of some of the facts. He would therefore order a remand until Monday, when he would pronounce the sentence.

WARE MEETING IN PETERBORO'

Executive Council of the Woodmen of the World Will Hold Its Quarterly Meeting in City To-night

TO PRESENT REPORTS

The quarterly meeting of the Executive Council of the Woodmen of the World will be held this evening in the Empress Hotel. Members of the Council from different parts of Ontario are here for the meeting. Reports will be presented by the Head Council Commander, Dr. W. S. Harrison of Toronto, the Head Clerk, Sovereign Clair Jarvis of London, and the Board of Managers. To-night also Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, W.O.W., the local camp, will initiate twenty-five candidates.

To the Examiner, Head Clerk Jarvis stated this morning that during the past year the Order have adjusted their rates, adopting the N. F. C. table, and its position is conceded by the Government as well as by the consulting actuary, Dr. Sanderson of Toronto, to be 100 per cent. solid.

RUSSIANS BEND BACK FOE'S LINE AT SEVERAL POINTS

Cossack Regiment Wins Brilliant Victory—Fighting in the Shavli District Continues With Varying Fortune.

EASTERN SITUATION

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, June 17.—Battling along a 100-mile front extending from near the Baltic into Northern Poland, Slav armies have beat back the German line at several points, and have resisted determined attempts by large forces of the enemy to approach Kovno.

An official statement from the War office to-day credited a Cossack regiment with a brilliant victory near Popeliany. The Cossacks forded the Venta river in the face of hot fire, and drove the enemy from the east bank.

"Our cavalry continues to pursue the enemy, sabring the retreating forces," said the official statement. "We have taken hundreds of prisoners."

"The fighting in the Shavli region continues with varying fortune. The enemy has captured some villages, and has been driven from others.

"Beyond the middle Niemen, large forces of Germans attacked heavily on Tuesday. Their offensive was beaten back and they suffered heavy losses."

BOARD OF WORKS RECOMMEND MORE STREET PAVING

City Council Will Be Asked to Endorse a Proposal to Lay at Least 40,000 Square Yards.

CONTRACT DIVIDED

After a discussion extending over two hours the Board of Works, at last night's meeting, decided to recommend the construction of at least forty thousand square yards of asphaltic concrete pavement; one half of this amount to be awarded to the Warren Paving Co. of Toronto, and the other half to the Standard Paving Company, or what is better known locally as the Foley and Gleason Paving Company. In addition to this it was decided to recommend the construction of two blocks of bithulitic paving on George Street from Edinburgh to Smith streets, amounting to approximately 6,000 square yards. This will go to the Warren Paving Company, as this is the only Company which tendered on that particular class of paving. The object of laying bithulitic is for the purpose of comparing the wearing qualities of the two pavements which at the present time is in dispute. A resolution embodying the above recommendations was moved and seconded by Aldermen Egar and Saunders. An amendment to have the matter laid over for another meeting, which was moved by Ald. Langford and seconded by Ald. Weir, was eliminated by the deciding vote of Ald. Green, chairman of the Board.

The Tenders.

If the above proposed contracts are endorsed by the City Council they will have to be carried out according to the specifications and the arrangements regarding debentures and local labour, etc. The resolution reserves the right to increase the contract on the same terms. The tenders were based on the following figures:

Wearing surface—53,900 sq. yards.
Concrete curb—22,700 lineal feet.
Concrete gutter—61,000 sq. feet.
Brick paving—1,780 sq. yards.

Warren Paving Company—$130,656.
Standard Paving Co.—$130,656.
Murphy and Madill, Montreal—$131,235.
W. A. Taylor, Port Arthur—$122,579.

The last named tender being the lowest of the four was given first consideration. It differed from the first two in that no provision was made for accepting in payment, five per cent. city debentures for one-half of the total amount of the work. This it was estimated, was worth several thousand dollars. Besides, it was agreed that the first two companies named were better qualified by reason of long experience, and were able to use the Trinidad Lake asphalt on their contract, which to the Board, implied a better pavement.

Concrete Paving.

Some of the aldermen were in favour of laying concrete pavement. This is a matter that may be taken up at a later date. Some considerable discussion arose as to the advisability of the city undertaking the curb and gutter work. It was pointed out by the City and Engineer that if this were done a defect might arise at the point where the concrete gutter connects with the asphalt. When the work is done by the paving company the joint is eliminated so far as the base is concerned as the concrete base is carried right through to the curb, making a continuous job. Representatives of three of the companies were consulted and they agreed that it would be better to lay the work all in one piece.

City Engineer Parsons in a report to the Board recommended the use of asphaltic concrete. He did not favour the use of concrete.

Picton Knights Templar Visited Moore Preceptory

Occasion Was the Visit of the Provincial Prior

Moore Preceptory, Knights Templar, were honoured by an official visit on Friday evening last of Sir Eminent Sir Knight C. Clapp [illegible], Provincial Prior, Kingston and Ottawa district, and the occasion was also marked by the presence of Eminent Sir Knight E. G. Garbutt, Presiding Preceptor, and the following Knights of St. George's Preceptory, Picton: Sir Knights W. G. Neill, W. J. Gerow, H. Lighthall, C. E. Waring, J. H. Colden, Wellington Boulter and C. D. Hart, of Picton, and W. P. Miles, of Wellington. The visitors were entertained at dinner by Moore Preceptory and the evening was in every sense a most enjoyable one. On Saturday morning the visiting Knights were taken to see the Life Lock, leaving for home via motor car at 11 o'clock. Sir Knight Wellington Boulter, one of the visiting party, is one of the best known Masons in Eastern Ontario, and although seventy-seven years of age, takes a keen interest in the work of the order.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving their names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

NOT DISCOURAGED.

Germany, Austria and Turkey, the members of the murderbund are "in the same boat"—almost literally. All their naval forces are locked up in their own ports, as useless from a naval or military point of view, as so much junk. Germany's navy, which she broke her financial back almost in rushing forward, as a factor in her world domination idea, lies rotting or rusting in the Kiel Canal. Now we have the statement that Italy has established a complete blockade of Austrian ports and has obtained absolute naval control of the Adriatic Sea. The triple alliance (with Turkey substituted for Italy) is in a bad way. It may give the quadruple entente a good deal of trouble yet, but its doom is certain. If Britain and her allies were in the same relative position as Germany and Austria, we should feel mightily downhearted. "Are we discouraged?" No-o-o!

"JITNEY" SERVICE FOR EAST CITY.

The Examiner has, apropos of an article advocating a "jitney" service for East City, received the gratuitous information that there is already such a service. What The Examiner insisted upon was that there should be such a service as would equivalate a street car service for the people living east side of the river—"such a service," to quote from the article of yesterday, "to be effective and satisfactory, should make dependable and regular connections with the street cars." Suppose a citizen in the extreme east of the city, or vice versa, should wish to make a journey to the extreme east or west, he or she would not want to be carried half way either way, but would want to be sure that when he or she arrived at a junction point he or she would find a "jitney" or a street car to take him or her the rest of the journey. The success of such a service, would depend very largely upon its continuity of transportation by the street cars, and this would depend upon dependable connections. Something like this certain connection must be secured if the people on the east side of the river are to get benefits similar to those that would come from from a car service extended across the river. That's the point The Examiner is trying to impress, in the interests of effective traffic intercourse between the east and west parts of the city.

DISHONESTY AND HYPOCRISY.

"Made in Canada" is an admirable slogan and the injunction to buy, by preference, goods made in this country is a patriotic injunction that appeals to all good Canadians. If manufacturers are honest in making an appeal to purchase home-made goods, they must furnish honest goods worth the price; and the appeal to buy such goods because they are made in Canada must be honestly and consistently made justifiable. But dishonesty in methods to get the advantage of a regarded appeal to patriotism in purchasing is tremendously inconsistent. We are told of a patent medicine firm that recently received a large consignment of bottles, made to their order in the United States, with the words "made in Canada" blown in the bottles. If this applies to the bottles themselves, in statement of fact, and its honesty of appeal to patriotism in purchasing, it is a lie. If it applies to the nostrum contained in the bottle, that "made in Canada" is also constructively a lie. The maker of the goods, appeals to Canadians to purchase Canadian goods by a direct breach of the spirit of his own appeal. By an appeal, made in the United States—blown in a glass bottle—to Canadians to purchase Canadian-made goods, he practices a monstrous hypocrisy. This firm makes an appeal it doesn't believe in, because it refuses to apply it to itself. It should have had its bottle "made in Germany"; then we should know what to expect.

ON DUTY BOTH.

We simply know it is done; we dont' know in detail how it is done. We know that the British fleet has kept the sea-paths virtually clear and driven German ships from the face of the deep. We often inquire, some of us, what the British navy is doing. We know it is on guard, with steam up and decks cleared for action; the mighty Dreadnoughts and the battle cruisers are "on the job" somewhere and Germany knows and feels the fact, but does not know where. Britain has lost some ships, but she can stand the loss, and they were, after all not ships of capital importance or modern. Britain has not drawn upon her capital ships for service in the Dardanelles except in the case of the Super-Dreadnought, Queen Elizabeth, and she was sent there on what may be called a trial trip, in order that any defects could be discovered by the test of actual service, so that improvements suggested may be applied to ships of her class later launched. This greatest warship is not alone. It will surprise many to learn that since the war began, nine Super-Dreadnoughts—nearly one a month—have been added to the mighty strength of the British fleet. We can't be told all, or nearly all, about the movements and functions of the British navy from day to day. We can rest sure, however, that it is employed a way that will not endanger the truth of the boast, that "Britannia rules the waves." We must have patience and trust. Many wonder what the British armies are doing in France. We may be certain that they are doing the best for the success of the allied cause. An army of ten million men would be useless without ammunition. When the needed supply of ammunition comes, Tommy Atkins will show us, and show the Germans too, what getting "good and ready means."

WHY CHANGE THE NAME?

There is a proposal to change the name of Berlin, the bustling and beautiful Ontario City, to something identical with the capital of Germany. Some persons seem to be inclined to become excited over non-essentials. The name Berlin doesn't hurt anybody, and besides it is the name of a great and beautiful city which was the capital of a great country when the Ontario village appropriated its name. Because an imperial madman and his party have made the name of everything German odious, it is not necessary to condemn good honest names. Berlin, Germany, will be a great city, a city to be proud of, when Germany is purified as by fire, and the hateful system of militarism and absolutism is overthrown. There would be infinite confusion if every name that has been discredited by the bearer of it were changed. For instance, what if every British Bill should want his name changed because Emperor William bears the same name? Why not then let the name of Berlin stand in Ontario, to be borne by a city filled with people who will make the name a credit in Canada, and something to be proud of as it is now. What are the people who object to the name "Berlin" doing to destroy the conditions that make the name objectionable in their eyes? Are they in the fighting line; are they busy with Red Cross work? Are they helping the Patriotic Fund, or are they busy in any of the countless ways open to people who want to help destroy a system that in its aims and ambitions, is a curse to Germany as well as the world at large. Prejudice so blinds some persons that they can't see the path of duty or the beauty of consistency.

THE LANGUAGE FITS THE THEME.

"The Herr Doctor Deraburg's room is better than his company. If an honest man he was a most mistaken man; if merely an organizer of the German colony in America, and an agent of the German spy system, he was the enemy, not the friend, of his countrymen in America. He could help no cause. He has greatly hurt the cause of Germany. Let him go and be damn'ed to him and now, as ever, to Hell with the Hohenzollern and the Hapsburg!"—St. Louis Democrat.

The Churches and the License Commission

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, June 16.—What the Churches say and their opinions on the new License Commission and the Ontario Temperance situation, is given below:

London Methodist Conference—

"The Central Commission may mean much, but your Committee calls attention to the fact that the Methodist Church did not ask for a Central Commission or for another dry holiday, but "a dry Ontario" every day, and the appointment of a Commission is far from satisfying us, or, in the words of a recent press article, "spiking our guns." Until the Central Commission spells prohibition we will cry mightily unto God and a Book of Remembrance will be written, and in that cry the iniquitous three-fifths' clause will be remembered."

Toronto Methodist Conference.

"Repeated demands were made upon the Ontario Government for the closing of all bars and drinking places during the war, but the Government ignored the demands.

Instead of closing the bars the Government appointed a commission of five men to take over and perform the duties of the license boards. The personel of the Commission is commendable and we believe they are endeavouring to perform the duties prescribed for them faithfully, but the Methodist Church, which has always stood for total abolition of the liquor traffic cannot expect the appointment of this commission as a fulfillment or even a partial fulfillment of the Government's duty to the country at this time of strain and stress."

Resolution:

".....We most earnestly request the Government of the Province of [illegible] for the retail sale of intoxicating liquors, at least during the period of the war."

Rev. Dr. Chown, Superintendent, Methodist Church, at Toronto Methodist Conference:

"Stripped of every rag of responsibility, the liquor trade in Ontario continues to flourish and the Government covers it with a mantle of protection and asks us to perpetuate it. We will have nothing to do with a license under a commission, or without a commission. We are out to annihilate the trade. Nothing else will do."

Anglican Synod, Toronto—

"In view of the danger occasioned to the Empire by the ravages of this deadly and insidious foe to our race .....this Synod most earnestly advocates and approves of the policy of total prohibition of the liquor traffic during the time of the war and instructs the committee on temperance and moral and social reform to take all steps in their power in conjunction with other religious bodies to procure legislation in order to achieve this result."

Rev. W. L. Armitage, at the Anglican Synod, Toronto:

"It is the Church that is on trial and not the liquor traffic."

Mr. Mark Bredin, at the Anglican Synod, Toronto:

"Some things you cannot regulate. The only means is abolition. If ever there was a curse that cannot be regulated it is the liquor traffic. Abolition for the length of the war is good, but for all time is better."

Rev. Dr. Herridge, retired Moderator, at the Presbyterian General Assembly:

"And then there is the curse of intemperance in our land. Even though we may not be prepared to assert that prohibition will necessarily usher in the millenium, we must surely feel that these stern days call for total abstinence from some things, and temperance in all things. What Russia has done with her vodka, and France with her absinthe, we, in Canada, can do with the saloons that imperil our youth and lead some of them to an untimely grave. All that is needed is the united effort not of a narrow bigotry, but of a national self-respect and an energetic Christian sentiment to sweep this curse away."

Toronto W. C. T. U.:

"We deplore the continuation of the open bar-rooms with their deleterious influence. In view of the action of other nations, we had hoped that the Government of this Province would take more drastic measures entirely to prohibit the sale of alcoholic liquor during the war. Be it, therefore resolved, that we urge upon the local unions to continue every effort to agitate and educate public opinion on the question."

"Where is the British Navy?" and Where is the American Navy?

Where is the British navy? a favourite question in some American newspapers may now be dropped, and the question varied to, Where is the American navy? Wherever it may be, the incident reported by officers and passengers of the American liner St. Paul suggests where it ought to be, and that is in the submarine war zone. It appears that the St. Paul was escorted through the Irish Sea on her return trip to the United States by two British destroyers until she was well past the danger zone where submarines were supposed to be lurking off the south coast of Ireland. The Buffalo Express comments strongly on the incident, and recalls the Admiralty statement after the sinking of the Lusitania that Great Britain had not enough destroyers to convoy all the merchantment passing to British ports. Nevertheless, at a time when Great Britain has not enough destroyers to convoy British passenger ships she spared a couple of them to ensure the safety of an American vessel that might be supposed to have been sufficiently protected by the American flag. "That," says the Express, "was a very notable courtesy, but the United States had no right to accept it so long as it has a navy of its own lying idle in home ports, nor has Great Britain the right to repeat it while so many of her own ships and seamen are perishing daily for lack of similar convoy."

The German submarine blockade has placed American ships and the ships of all other neutral nations in exactly the same peril as it has placed British ships. The American nation has protested against this policy, and while no more American lives have been lost since the sinking of the Lusitania, Germany has not formally declared that in the future she will not sink American vessels or British merchant vessels upon which Americans may be passengers. This being so, there is common sense in the contention of the Express that the American navy ought to assume the duty of guarding American vessels. That is what the American navy is for, and it makes no difference in what part of the world the danger threatens nor from what source. If American vessels were menaced in Mexican or Chinese waters American war vessels would be at once despatched to the scent. The United States has refused to accept the doctrine laid down in the German submarine blockade. Why, then, does it not demand that the navy shall protect American vessels until Germany has come to a decision upon the issues presented in the American notes? — Mail and Empire.

GUELPH FRANCHISE MAY BE TRANSFERRED

HAMILTON, June 17.—There is a chance that the Guelph franchise in the Canadian League will be transferred to some other city within the next few weeks. Despite the fact that the Leafs have been playing good ball and are in second place, they have not been drawing at home, the total paid attendance for the three games, which Hamilton played there, being under 1,000. The shareholders in the club are beginning to realize that their efforts to put Guelph on the baseball map again are not being appreciated, and they are just about ready to throw up the sponge unless the Guelph people begin to show a little more appreciation of their efforts. Two or three cities are willing to take over the franchise, St. Catharines being among others that are anxious to have Canadian League ball. The schedule has been arranged so as to give the teams of the smaller cities the good dates in the three larger cities, but even then the clubs cannot hold up their end if they are not given liberal patronage on the home grounds. The class of ball being played in the league this season is 25 per cent. better than it ever was before, and it is to be regretted that the people of Guelph do not realize what they are getting in the way of the Chadwick pastime.

LACROSSE

The following players will represent the Peterborough Lacrosse Club at Hastings to-morrow: Fleming, Gilman, Hatton, Dillon, Mein, Reynolds, Crough, Kenneally, McCoy, Cranfield, Brown, Johnston, Dunsford, Hamilton, Todd and Sutherland.

Any player wishing to go via boat will kindly notify J. Sutherland this evening.

Those not going by boat will leave at 1.30 G.T.R.

WORTH KNOWING

Break up old pastures—the breeding places—by plowing five or six inches deep in late fall or in spring.

Use the New Poison Bran Mixture—Bran, 20 lbs.; Paris Green, 1 lb.; molasses, ½ gallon; water, about 2 gallons; lemons, 2 or 3 fruits.

Preparation and Application

Mix thoroughly the bran and Paris green, dry, in a tub or any large receptacle. This may be done the night before. On morning of using squeeze the juice of the lemons into the water, run the pulp and rind through a meat chopper, and add this and also the molasses to the water, stir well, and then pour the liquid upon the poisoned bran, and mix so thoroughly that every part is moist and will fall like sawdust through the fingers. Apply in the morning between five and seven o'clock by scattering so thinly over the infested field, fence corners and roadsides, that the above amount will cover four or five acres. Sometimes a second application about three days later is necessary.

Don't delay using until damage has been done, and don't look for results until two or three days after applying.—Department of Entomology, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

[These same treatments may be used with excellent results for cutworms, which have been doing much damage in fall wheat, young corn, etc.—Editor.]

Saturday's Games In City Ball League

Saturday's games in the City Baseball League will see a clash between the Empires and East City at 2 o'clock, and the Classics and Thistles at 4 o'clock. Manager Johnston, of the Empires, promises a greatly strengthened team, and if he has Yebbie Flaherty on the mound, his khaki-clad warriors will give Dan McCabe's squad a busy two hours. Both Classics and Thistles need that last game badly, and it will be a battle royal. Huycke will pitch for the Thistles and either Gus or Lornie Rose for the Classics.

DR. W. S. HARRISON

Head Council Commander of the Woodmen of the World, the executive council of which is meeting in Peterborough this evening.

Constantinople is a City of Oddities

Constantinople, or Stamboul, as the Turk calls his metropolis, is a much-discussed city just now, says a writer in "London Answers." But of its important foreign quarters, Pera and Galata, the stay-at-home Briton hears little. Galata is separated from Constantinople proper by the Golden Horn, and lies principally between the two bridges which span that world-famous waterway. Formerly these bridges had captains and crews exactly as if they were ships. Later they became remarkable for their shops, beggars and dogs. Shops, beggars and dogs have gone, but still the bridges are objects of intense interest to the stranger. In Galata may be found a sort of Petticoat Lane in full swing every day of the week. [illegible] market in the East End of London, the venue is shifted each morning. For example, the indescribable bargaining and din is to be found on Thursdays at Pershembeh, which means the Thursday market.

Dealers in second hand clothing have a more or less permanent rendezvous at the Bit Bazaar of Louise Market — an appellation more apt than delicate.

Pera, which is modern Greek for "beyond," stands on the hills behind Galata, which in a double sense it looks down on, considering itself the superior suburb. Both are despised by the real Turk who if he wishes to tell you that another Turk has gone helplessly to the bad, will say "he has gone to Pera," or, more correctly, "to Bey Alou," for the Turk refuses to recognise the Christian designation or either Constantinople for its suburbs.

A stranger stranded at Pera might possibly go hungry but it would be his own fault if he thirsted. Elaborate drinking fountains are in nearly every street.

There is a super-abundance of post-offices—but no postmen! No letters are delivered. Each European power has — or had — its own post office. Thus, one calls at the English establishment if expecting letters from home, at the French if correspondence is likely to arrive from Paris, and so on.

Three Sundays a week are observed in both suburbs—Friday by the Turks, Saturday by the Jews and Sunday by the Christians. And three distinct calendars are used. This year the Mohammedan is dating his letters 1333, the Jew 5675, and the Christian, of course, 1915.

But the inconvenience of using three different calendars is slight compared with the bewildering method mostly used in computing the hours of the day. A watch which kept correct time on the shores of the Golden Horn would be, somewhat paradoxically, rather an erratic timekeeper according to the standard laid down by Greenwich. For as 12 o'clock is reckoned always to fall at the exact moment of sunset, one's watch has to gain or lose a few minutes each day, according to the season of the year.

GOLF

The semi-final draw in the Stratton trophy is as follows: Mrs. Goodwill vs. Miss Nora Hatton; Miss Aylmer a bye.

The finals in the Consolation event will be between the following: Miss E. Morrow vs. Miss M. Denne.

An official scorer will be provided for the finals in both events.

Any players who wish to enter for the captain's prize are requested to hand their names in before Wednesday of next week.

SOVEREIGN G. N. GORDON

"KNUTS" IN KHAKI

An Officer's Valet Tells of Brave But Extravagant British Heroes

It is a bit difficult for the wealthy "knut" to gratify his taste in dress at the front; but, nevertheless, he manages to do so to a certain extent, and to spend a very fair sum of money in doing so, says a writer in London "Answers."

For example, there is a young officer in one of the crack cavalry regiments who was certainly one of the best dressed young men about town in the pre-war days. When he went out to the front he carried with him no less than twenty uniforms, some hundreds of the finest silk shirts of a khaki dye that ran him into about £7.10 apiece, and hundreds of pairs of silk socks at $5.00 a pair, and boots at $25 a pair. One way and another, he took out to the front with him a wardrobe that must have cost him something like $5,000.

Whenever he got a spell out of the trenches at the rear, he would fling away every stitch of clothes he had on, and array himself in an entirely new rig-out, and march back again to face death, a couple of days later, as spick-and-span as if he was going on parade at Knightsbridge Barracks.

They Make Good Fighters

He was a good officer, too, and won the D.S.O. before he had been two months at the front. There is a story that is worth repeating told of one young officer in the Guards who habitually spends about $5,000 per annum on his dress. He was ordered to the front rather unexpectedly, and at very short notice. He rushed to his tailor and ordered a dozen uniforms to be made in twenty-four hours—an impossible order to execute; but the tailor managed to get two done in the time, and sent the others on.

The uniforms did not fit as well as the young officer desired, and he declared to a brother officer that it would be "a beastly thing to be killed in a badly-fitting tunic." However, he had to put up with the tunic that "dragged" somewhat under the left shoulder. Three days later he was bayoneted in an attack the Germans made on the trench he was in. His tunic was ripped from the shoulder to the waist by the bayonet, and as he was borne on a stretcher to the field hospital, he exclaimed, "Don't wonder that drag in my tunic annoyed them; they have cut it out, any way!"

One well known and very popular young officer, the son of an enormously wealthy peer, was for many weeks compelled to go about in rags. The consignment of uniforms he ordered from London went astray somewhere, and never reached him. He went with only one, and it was nearly a month before he was able to get a change.

Some in the Ranks

All the knuts are not officers, of course; many may be found among the rank and file. Lord Cowdray's son, for example, who enlisted at the outbreak of the war, and was killed after he got out to the front, was a notable knut; his uniforms were made of fine material—a mixture of cotton and silk—that must have cost him a pretty penny. He was a brave and dashing young soldier, and as popular as he was courageous.

There was another wealthy young knut who enlisted, and took out a big stock of uniforms with him. He got about twenty of them sent to a peasant's cottage a few miles or so to the rear of the British advanced trenches, so that he could get a change when he went off duty. Some of his pals in the trenches discovered the whereabouts of these spare uniforms, and when they were off duty made straight for the cottage, and did a quick change.

So the Phonograph Happened.

I was singing to the mouthpiece of a telephone, when the vibrations of my voice caused a fine steel point to pierce one of my fingers held just behind it. That set me to thinking. If I could record the motions of the point and sent it over the same surface afterward I saw no reason why the thing would not talk. I determined to make a machine that would work accurately, and gave my assistants the necessary instructions, telling them what I had discovered. That's the whole story. The phonograph is the result of the pricking of a finger.—Thomas A. Edison.

Soldiers Uncovered in Court

"Cases are constantly occurring in which officers and soldiers are reported to have refused to take off their caps in police courts and other courts of records. The army regulation is perfectly clear and covers all such cases completely," says The London Times. "Its text is as follow:

"'In a civil court an officer or soldier will remove his head-dress while the judge or magistrate is present, except when the officer or soldier is on duty under arms with a party as escort, inside the court.'

"In these latter circumstances the prisoner or prisoners alone are uncovered."

Step Lively.

Yeast: "Nothing will make a person walk so quickly as good cold weather."

Two Letters From Lance Corp. MacNab

Mr. A. MacNab, G.T.R. station master here, has received two interesting letters from his son, Lance Corp. Alan MacNab, who is with the Divisional Cycle Corps now in England.

Dibgate Camp, Fov.
Sunday, May 30th.

Dear Folks at Home.—Suppose you have received my long letter written on board the "Corinthian." I had to wind it up rather suddenly, as we were to land sooner than we had expected.

I was up on deck about 3.00 a.m. Thursday morning and could see the shore on both sides, as we were entering Plymouth Sound. Two mine sweepers went up the channel ahead of us, and one destroyer, while another destroyer followed in our wake.

After entering the harbour we dropped anchor and waited three, and a half hours for the tide. A tug then took us in tow, and away we went up an arm of the harbour, to Devonport, where we disembarked at noon. We sure got an enthusiastic reception while going up the docks, and also while passing through on the train, which came down on the docks for us.

When we reached Shorncliffe at 3.00 a.m. Friday, we had about three miles of a march to do, to reach camp. Blankets were issued about daybreak, and I turned in and slept until 9.00 a.m.

When I awoke I had to convince myself that I was really, at last in "Old England." It certainly is a fine old country. Canada's beauty is of the rugged kind, while England's is more of the picturesque style. The fields are very highly cultivated, and it is hard to find even a pebble in them. The hills are not sharp, or rugged as in Canada, but are all rounded, or flattened off. Even the woods from a distance, appear as if trimmed. There are very few wooden or wire fences between the fields, it is nearly all hedges, and the birds, and rabbits are everywhere.

Speaking of birds, I was out for a stroll to-day and in the course of my wanderings, I found any amount of nests, and secured thirteen specimens, which I will send home as soon as I can get them boxed. I may not have such another chance to add to my collection at home.

The Major told us while on parade yesterday that we were now living on what are called "iron rations," and I believe every word of it, and we are certainly not over eating. However, we enlisted with the understanding that we were not going on any picnic, and so we are prepared to take it as it comes, and with as little kicking as we can help. We are allowed five pence ha'penny per day extra with our "iron rations," which goes into a fund for buying "extras."

As you will see by the heading of this letter, we are located at "Dibgate Camp,' west of Shorncliffe, on a flat, sandy plan.

It reminds me of Petawawa on a windy day. The 18th, 19th, 20th a nd 21st are about two miles from us at Sandling Camp. I have met quite a number of the Peterborough boys, but missed Jim Alp, who they tell me is in the hospital in Kingston, Ont., and was not able to come with the bunch. Please find out how he is progressing and let me know when you write.

'Last post' is sounding, so I will pull the flap of my tent, and close for this time. We can hear the sound of the heavy guns in France, when the wind is from that direction, and can see her shores on a fine day. Aeroplanes are circling over our camp every day.

In another letter dated June 3rd, he writes:

Here we are after one week in England, and all feeling fine. Started into our regular routine of drill on Monday and are now getting some pretty stiff work.

Reville 5.30 a.m.; drill six to seven, breakfast 7.15, drill 8.15 to 11.40, dinner 12.00 noon, drill 1.00 p.m. to 4.45 p.m., supper 5.00 p.m., last post 9.30, lights out 9.45 p.m.

You will see we are not getting much time to ourselves, but have free leave from 5.00 to 9.30 p.m. We will soon be given passes till 11.30 p.m., but we will not use them much, as we are two miles from town and get plenty during the day to keep us exercised.

Left films in a shop to be developed last Friday, and will not get them until to-morrow. Photographic material is much dearer here than in Canada, and they are not very quick in turning out amateur work. Speaking of prices, it seems to me that almost everything is as dear, or more so than in Canada. They have probably put their prices up since the Canadians came into camp here, knowing that we are used to paying higher prices than English "Tommies." It is very amusing to watch some of our fellows trying to make change in English currency, especially those who played 'hookey' in their school days. hTey buy an article, and after an effort to figure out the proper amount, throw down their wad and ask the clerk to take what they need to settle the bill.

We were out wheeling yesterday and this afternoon. The roads are certainly fine, but there are a great many hills in this vicinity, which makes wheeling rather fatiguing work. We wheeled out along the shore yesterday to Dynnchurch, about ten miles from the camp, and went in for a swim in the sea. Saw Lieut.-Col. Hopkins from Lindsay at Folkestone on Saturday—back from the front on furlough I believe.

Shorncliffe, and Folkestone are full of English, French and Belgian soldiers, and also French and Belgian civilian refugees.

Canadian mail arrived to-day; no letters have reached me yet. Last post. I'll ring off. Write often.

ALAN.

GALA WEEK

Laugh and the world laughs with you. Weep and you weep alone. That is the old saying, nevertheless, a true one. The H. T. Piersons Canadian Shows, coming to Peterborough for one week, commencing Monday, at the Exhibition Grounds, is one of the highest organizations touring the country.

The shows make the old feel young and the young think life worth living; every kind of show that will please almost everyone, is the motto of the management, and here you have the variety of entertainment that will suit every taste, no matter how varied it may be.

The shows are clean throughout, and we can recommend them to the public as the best that has ever played here.

There are ten attractions, all high class, two bands and numerous concessions that will not offend the most fastidious taste.

The shows open promptly at 7.30 Monday night and with the throwing of the several thousand electric lights you will see a Fairyland group. As this is the only out-door amusement that will play the city the coming season there will undoubtedly be in attendance a large crowd. The entire system of the show is new to Canada and the management has spared neither time or money to make this the biggest and best show to play Canada.

Cuff buttons which allow a shirt sleeve to be held at any desired position on the arm without folding have been invented.

NATIONAL EXECUTIVE ENTERTAINED

Tea at the Golf Club and Visit to Lift Lock—Saw Stoney Lake To-day

At the close of the afternoon session of the National Executive of the Council of Women yesterday Mrs. Neal and other officers of the Local Council entertained the visiting members of the National Executive to a very delightful tea at the Golf Club. About twenty-four were present, and after supper a drive was taken to the lift lock and other points of interest around the city. Before leaving for the drive Miss Machar of Kingston moved a very charming vote of thanks to the hostesses, which was very heartily seconded by Mrs. Sanford of Hamilton.

The visitors all appeared to be delighted with Peterborough's hospitality, and Mrs. Torrington of Toronto warned the hostesses to be wary about giving invitations to come to Peterborough in the future, because she felt quite sure that all such invitations would be unanimously and overwhelmingly accepted.

To-day the visitors are enjoying a trip around the lakes. The next meeting of the National Council will be the annual meeting which will be held in Toronto in October, to which delegates from the Local Council will doubtless be sent.

YOUTH'S BROKEN BACK IS CURED

Plans to Devote His Life to Work for Victims of Disease

PHILADELPHIA, June 17. — Research work in behalf of unfortunates confined in local hospitals is the vocation which James W. Keith, a senior medical student at the Jefferson Medical College and a cripple, will adopt should he be successful in passing his final "exams." Propped up in pillows and seated in a wheeled chair, Keith stood his examination in obstetrics. A year ago he was expected to live at the most two months.

"Hope you kill your 'exams' Jim!" shouted a group of medical students as Keith was wheeled into one of the classrooms where the examinations took place.

"My broken back has been cured, boys; my health is better, and I feel happier. Now for the 'exams.' If I win out I'll feel as happy as though I had scored a home run in a baseball game," replied the optimist.

Keith, on April 17th, 1914, accidentally plunged a distance of three floors through a skylight. He received a borken back and internal injuries. For a while physicians did not think he would recover. Later his left leg was amputated. This limb became infected. The leg was amputated without administerng anesthetics because the patient was too weak.

To Dr. Francis Sewart and Dr. H. A. Hare Keith gives credit for his recovery. His broken back has been mended. He has gained in weight. His face is now tanned. For weeks on sunny days, he has been spending his time on the roof garden of the hospital.

The injured man is twenty-seven. His case is most pathetic. The accident occurred just about the time he was preparing to begin a rosy career. During his illness his wife has been a constant visitor at the hospital.

"I don't believe I shall practice medicine," says Keith. "I have made up my mind to spend my remaining days in the laboratory and do special research work. I feel that I will be able to do some good for those who are confined in bed in the hospitals or in other institutions. I haven't quite made up my mind just in what I will specialize. I want to do some good to my fellow man. I feel that it is my duty to help the poor and suffering."

Appeal Case on Monday

Another Chapter in the Arbitration Proceedings Between the City and Power Company

The city's appeal against the award of the Arbitration Board in connection with the arbitration between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company will be heard in Osgoode Hall on Monday next. It will be remembered that the award amounts to $154,615, which was considerably higher than the city expected to pay and lower than the Company hoped to receive. The latter expected an award of at least two hundred thousand dollars for the electric lighting and power system of the Company, while the civic authorities did not expect to pay much over one hundred thousand dollars. The arbitration which was held in January and February of this year cost the city several thousand dollars The arbitrators were His Honour Judge Huycke, chairman, R. A. Ross of Montreal, and Wallace Nesbitt of Toronto.

The city may ask the Grand Trunk railway to move the gatehouse at the intersection of Charlotte and Bethune streets. By moving it back a short distance the resident.. on the street will have an uninterrupted view.

Attended County Council.

His Worship Mayor Buller, Ald. Dobbn and City Clerk Armstrong waited on the County Council this afternoon for the purpose of discussing a number of matters in which both city and county have a common interest.

Annual Summer Tea

The St. John's Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary held the annual summer tea on Tuesday last. The heavy rain prevented the use of the beautiful church grounds, so the event was brought off in the guild room. A good number assembled, and after tea, the Rev. Canon Davidson expressed the regret of all the members at the loss of the splendid work of their leader of the Dorcas Department, Mrs. W. G. Common, who leaves for Quebec next week. The President, Mrs. Davidson, made the presentation of a beautifully bound combined hymn and prayer book on behalf of the members to Mrs. Common, who suitably replied.

Local People Were Not Wanted

In Brantford—Classed as Unwelcome Set of Visitors

BRANTFORD, June 17.—A peculiar case came before the local authorities for which there was no legal remedy, inasmuch as the criminal law of the Dominion does not cover the offence against the morals of the community.

Mrs. Laura Welch, early in April left her home and husband in Peterborough to take up residence here with another man named Albert Powell.

With him she lived with her three children at 6 Nelson street until the Children's Aid Society got on to their track. They were found to be known as Mr. and Mrs. Pierce and he was working for the city. The facts of the case became known and the man's employment was taken from him. The atmosphere for the children aged between eleven and three, was decidedly immoral, so the C.A.S. took charge of them and subsequently turned them over to the Peterborough Shelter, in which they had been previously cared for.

Powell was given transportation to Peterborough and cleared out, and later Mrs. Welch did likewise, going to Toronto.

Thus did the city get rid of a rather unwelcome set of visitors, for Mrs. Welch gave signs of being very much aggrieved at the intervention of the Children's Aid Society and threatened dire calamity upon those who had interrupted her plans for a stay in the city.

WOMAN, AGED 82 YEARS, RUNNING A PAYING FARM

CADILLAC, Mich. June 17.—"Are you never going to stop working and move into Cadillac and take life easy?" asked a friend of Mrs. Thomas Whaley eighty-six years old, and the oldest woman pioneer in Wexford county.

"And why should I retire, as you call it?" asked Mrs. Whaley. "Am I sick? Can't I milk? Can't I pick more huckleberries than any of the boys I hire to work for me."

Mrs. Whaley came to Wexford county late in the '60s. She helped organize the Presbyterian church of Cadillac, of Clam Lake, as it was called then, in 1872. Last November she drove six miles to Cadillac through a snowstorm to attend the forty-second anniversary of the church.

Ten years ago Thomas Whaley died. The neighbours and the Whaley sons and daughters tried to persuade their mother to move into Cadillac. The farm gradually had been divided up among the boys so that only sixty acres remained. But Mrs. Whaley refused. One boy lived with her, and she remained in charge.

To-day Mrs. Whaley is as active on the farm as ever. Her son, James Whaley, sixty, recently retired and moved to Cadillac. But his mother continues to milk cows, to hoe potatoes, to pick berries and to drive to town in the winter time with the thermometer below zero, and bring with her butter, eggs and other farm products.

"In 1870 there was little religion in this country," she says. "Our first church was over a saloon on Lake street in Cadillac, and while we prayed in that little room and sang songs, men down in the saloon mocked us and drank themselves to death. We held church over that saloon for two years."

In spite of the fact that Mrs. Whaley is eighty-six years old she manages to make her farm of sixty acres pay as big profits as it ever did when her husband was alive. She tells the hired men what to do and when to act. Her farm is one of the best and most valuable in this section of the State.

One of Mrs. Whaley's daughters, now Mrs. George Gane, was the first women ever married in Wexford county, and the ceremony was observed and celebrated by the entire section of the State. People came from long distances, making the trip with horses and waggons. The wedding occurred in the early '70's. It was an out of doors wedding, and wild flowers were strewn upon the ground.

Will Be Tried By a Jury

Trial of A. Nelson Will Take Place on June 26th

A. Nelson, who is charged with a serious offence, this morning appeared before His Honour Judge Huycke in the County Court and elected to be tried by a jury. The accused will be tried on June the twenty-sixth. He was represented in Court by Mr. G. N. Gordon, who entered a plea of not guilty on the prisoner's behalf.

CORP. CARPENTER BURIED CLOSE TO THE TRENCHES

Grave Adorned With Flowers and Marked With a Cross Writes Lieut. Graham of the 2nd Battalion

The personal effects of the late Corp. H. E. Carpenter, 2nd Battalion, First Canadian Contingent, have been received by his parents. They consist of photographs, letters that were sent to him while in France; also a number of French bank notes. The effects were forwarded by Lieut. Grahame, together with a letter of sympathy. Lieut. Grahame states that the late Corp. Carpenter was buried ten yards to the rear of the trenches. Flowers were placed on the grave, also a cross at the head and foot. Lieut. Grahame, who is now confined in a hospital in London, has volunteered to secure a photograph of the grave and forward it to the parents if they so desire. Corp. Carpenters last letter to his parents, which reached its destination after he had been reported killed, contains a reference to the battle of Langemarck, which the deceased described as being particularly severe. Out of a section of fourteen men, seven were killed, three wounded, while Corp. Carpenter and three others escaped uninjured. Major Mills and Captain Ackerman have both written to Mrs. Carpenter sympathizing with her in the death of her son.

Newsome & Gilbert Reorganize

Well Known Firm Under New Management

The firm of Newsome and Gilbert, Toronto, law and commercial stationers, so long and favourably known throughout Canada, has been recently reorganized. The business, under the same name, will be carried on by Mr. Wallis Dunn and Mr. George W. Woodland, who have taken over the assets, good-will, plates, dies, etc., of the old company. These gentlemen have long been connected with the Newsome and Gilbert business and their many customers and friends will be glad to know that the management of the company and the direction of its policies are now in their hands.

Opening of the New Cafe

The new Peterborough Cafe made its opening bow to the Peterborough public to-day. It is situated at 311 George street, opposite the new Barrie Block, and is convenient to theatres, railways and the shopping district, and will be on the main thoroughfare to the new post office when it is built. The preparations which have been in progress for the equipment of this new eating house, proves to have been in charge of experienced hands, as the premises is fitted up in such a unique and attractive style that you may dine or lunch in comfort or luxury, at all hours. In addition to the good equipment, patrons are assured of an exceptional cuisine, and satisfactory service. Ladies when unattended will find dining at the Peterborough Cafe a safe and satisfying pleasure.

VON TIRPITZ, the "BABY KILLER," IN A NEW ROLE—In an effort to undo the effect of the German Admiral's policy of ruthless barbarism, which resulted in the death of scores of babies on the Lusitania alone, the above "photograph" of Von Tirpitz holding a child, said to be his granddaughter, is being circulated among the American papers. "Notice the playful winkle around his eye," writes the press agent.

BOSTON, Mass., June 16.—After nearly nine months' service in the American Red Cross Hospitals in France and Serbia, more than two months of which he was in charge of the battle against the deadly typhus in Serbia, Dr. Reynold M. Kirby-Smith, of Suwanee, Tenn., reached Boston to-day on board the Canopic, of the White Star line, from Naples. With him were two Philadelphia nurses—Miss Margaret Lehmann and Miss A. C. Lufving—who served under him from the time he left New York on September 13 on board the steamship Red Cross until he started from Belgrade on May 9 on his return to the United States.

When Dr. Kirby-Smith left Belgrade, the typus fever epidemic, which has killed thousands of Serbs and Austrians, was under control, and he believes it soon will be eliminated.

Conditions when he got to Serbia he describes as horrible. Victims of the disease were lying even in the streets, and in the hospitals at Belgrade and Gevegelia, on the Greek border, most of the physicians and nurses were ill of the disease.

"I was in charge of the American Hospital at Pau, when the epidemic of typus got beyond control of Serbia," Dr. Kirby-Smith told a Herald reporter on board the Canopic.

The American physicians and nurses who had gone to Gevegelia had found 1,500 wounded men in that town, man y0f whom had developed typhus. The sanitary conditions were terrible and it was not long until most of the wounded had contracted the dreaded disease.

"With Miss Lehmann, who had been the supervising nurse of the hospital at Pau, Miss Lufving and Miss Rebecca Watson of Baltimore, I left for Serbia on March 3. In Gevegelia of six physicians and twelve nurses most of them were ill of typhus, and when I reached Belgrade I found Dr. Edward Ryan seriously ill of the disease.

Dr. Ethan Bullard, of Washington, had accompanied me to Belgrade, and we plunged into the hardest work that I have ever tackled, assisted, assisted by a Serbin physician and a Russian woman physician. For eight days, until Dr. Earl Downer and Dr. Ernest Pendleton Magruder were sent to help us, we slaved night and day. At the end of two days we had only two nurses fit for duty, the rest having fallen victims to typhus.

"Out of 1,500 patients suffering from wounds received in the fighting between the Austrians and the Serbs about eight hundred developed typhus. Every day new cases developed, and without nurses for a while our hands were tied. The disease soon killed Dr. Magruder, but no other American lives were sacrificed.

"The American physicians and nurses in France and Serbia have done a splendid work that is a credit to our country. They have displayed marvellous skill in surgery and the world does not yet realize what they accomplished in Serbia against such tremendous odds."

GUNNER KING IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. King, 548 Wownie street, has received a letter from the Red Cross society to the effect that her son, Gunner Harry King of the Canadian Field Artillery, who was wounded, is doing on well in the Oakland Mansion Hospital, Shrewsbury, London. He went with the First Canadian contingent.

FRED BOARD HAD HARROW ESCAPE

Peterboro Boy a Credit to the Land That Gave Him Birth —Writes Relatives in England

From relatives in England, Mrs. Chas. James, 306 Sherbrooke St., has received a very interesting letter in regard to her grandson, Pte. Fred Board, of the 14th Battalion. Pte. Board, who was formerly employed at The Examiner office, enlisted at Lindsay with his "pal," Pte. Jas. Dundas, of Fenelon Falls.

The letter in part says: I received a letter from Fred Board and am pleased to tell you he is still all right and had been fighting hard for five days. He is a brave boy, a credit to you and the land that gave him birth. Mrs. Lock saw his comrade, Jim Dundas, in hospital at Oxford on Friday, and he says that Fred is a wonder. He was only two feet away from him (Dundas) when he was wounded and many others were killed and wounded, and how Fred escaped he cannot understand. He says on one occasion the colonel called to him and said to him; "Fred Board, you can run, can't you?" Fred said "yes." The colonel then said, "run as fast as you can towards those German trenches and find out how strong they are." Oq Fred ran and came back, bullets flying round him in all directions, and brought the strength of the Germans. Not one of his comrades ever thought he would get back, but he did you see. I think he deserves the D.S.M. Now aren't you proud of your grandson?

Police Magistrate Must Remove Ashes

Board of Works Object to Load of Ashes That Was Deposited on Edinburgh Street

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works Ald. Edgar moved that Mr. D. W. Dumble, police magistrate, be asked to remove some ashes which it is claimed he caused to be deposited on the south side of Edinburgh street, east of Donegal street. In a letter addressed to the City Council, Mr. Dumble admitted that he dumped a load of ashes in the ditch for the purpose of diverting the water so as to prevent it from flooding adjacent lands in which he is interested. He asked the city to supplement the load of ashes so as to completely fill up the ditch, if not an action for compensation might result.

The Board decided to ask Mr. Dumble to remove the ashes not later than the 10th of this month. If this is not done the Chief of Police will be asked to take action. The resolution was seconded by Ald. Saunders. The letter said that Mr. Dumble had no more right to dump a load of ashes there than any other private citizen.

Ald. Edgar expressed surprise that Mr. Dumble would do such a thing.

Permission Granted.

The City Engineer recommended that the Bell Telephone Company be granted permission to erect three poles on the north side of Weller street in accordanle with company's request. The recommendation was endorsed by the Board of Works.

Police Court

Chas. Meyette, who has been languishing in the county jail for a couple of weeks awaiting trial on a vagrancy charge, was allowed out this morning for a month to see if he would do any better. He will have to report to Chief Thompson every week during the month. If he makes good the charge of vagrancy will be dismissed.

Trespassing.

A C.P.R. detective made a "catch" yesterday when he landed "Casey" Jones, who was walking on the C.P.R. bridge. "Casey" was very happy this morning when Magistrate Dumble let him go with a warning.

THE FISHING SEASON'S OPENING AT BUCKHORN

The bridge, pier and weir at Buckhorn was lined yesterday morning with the first bass anglers. Out on the lake there were numerous canoes and skiffs with trawlers. Peterborough was largely represented among the enthusiasts, and local men seemed to have the luck or whatever it is gets fish.

WILL USE TEN CARS ON OIL

City Engineer Parsons Estimates the Quantity of Road Oil Required

Ald. McIntyre, who is out of the city, has addressed a letter to the Board of Works stating that he was given to understand that Dennistoun Avenue and Inverlea Street would not be oiled this summer. City Engineer Parsons said that he knew no reason why the streets named should not be oiled.

Ald. Green said that it was the intention of the Board to oil all streets that were watered in previous years. The main thoroughfares were being treated first. Up till the present nearly one car of oil has been applied. The City Engineer estimates that the city will use about ten cars of oil before the season closes. Each street will receive about two applications.

Council Will Meet To-night

Board of Works Recommendation Will be Considered

A special meeting of the City Council has been called for this evening for the purpose of considering the proposal of the Board of Works to construct at least forty thousand yards of asphaltic concrete paving. As the Board of Works committee is represented by the Whole Council it is probable that the recommendation as adopted last evening will be approved. Should this be the case the contract will be let immediately and the work proceeded with. This will give employment to a large gang of men for the entire summer.

COUNTY NOTES

Among the County Councillors at the Norwood Convention were Warden Kindred, Forster, Brown, Griffith, Lean, Bullied, Ex-Reeve A. A. Wilde, of Belmont, was also there.

Reeve Coben tells a story of a moose that walked all over his farm the other day. Big as a horse it was, and well set up. It nosed its way up practically to the back stoop looked aronnd the yard and trotted off across a field of wheat. And this is not an uncommon sight.

Towards midnight last night a young farmer burst noisily into George street from the New York Chinese Cafe. A wide serviette flapped from its position tucked securely inside his collar. Three Chinamen were hanging to his back like bees. He reached the car tracks in a few jumps, at the same time yelling that he wouldn't pay, and the Orientals making queer noises as they clung to him. At that moment two cops bobbed up from somewhere and the froth subsided. However, inside the cafe, and witnesses to whatever fracas had occurred, was a bunch of County Councillors including Reeves Brown, Bullied, Lean, Shaw and Coben. Reeve Brown seemed very indignant that the young man had tried to put one over the "Chinks." "I'll see fair play no matter who it is," he was saying, and the young farmer declared that he never had any intention of skipping the meal.

C. O. F. Elect Their Officers

ST. CATHARINES, June 16.—At the Canadian Foresters' High Court to-day the following officers were elected by acclamation: High Chief Ranger, J. A. Stewart of Perth, who has occupied the chair for a dozen years; High Vice-Chief Ranger J. A. A. Brodeur, Montreal; High Secretary, A. P. Van Someran, Brantford; High Treasurer, Robert Elliott, Brantford; Chairman Medical Board, Dr. U. M. Stanley, Brantford; High Registrar, William Coupor, Montreal; Superintendent of Organization, W. O. Strong, Brantford; High Chief Solicitor, W. L. Roberts, Brantford.

The convention decided to place a special assessment upon each member of the order to take care from a fraternal standpoint, of the members at the front. In addition to bearing dues and assessments of those now on active service, the High Court decided also to pay sick benefits and insurance premiums where death occurs.

Owen Sound was selected as the next place of meeting.

OBITUARY

MARGARET WHALEY.

The death occurred this morning of Margaret Whaley, the four year old daughter of Mr. Wm. Whaley, 500 Cedar street, following an attack of pneumonia. The sympathy of their many friends will go out to the bereaved relatives. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

MR. JOHN MACFARLANE.

After but 24 hours illness, during which time he was unconscious, Mr. John Macfarlane, a well-known resident of this city, passed away in the Nicholls Hospital, last evening. On Monday afternoon Mr. Macfarlane became ill while doing some work at the incinerator, where he commenced to work on Monday morning. A physician was called and had him removed to the Nicholls Hospital where it was found that he was suffering from a stroke. He never again regained consciousness and passed away during the latter part of the afternoon, yesterday.

At one time the late Mr. Macfarlane was a well-known railroad man about this district. He was born in the City of Quebec in the year 1853, the son of Mr. W. A. Macfarlane, deceased. In 1880 the family removed to Port Hope where the father was engaged in the milling business for some years. When he went into the flour and feed business for himself, the son, Mr. John Macfarlane, was employed as bookkeeper, and he remained at this position for some time.

His first experience at railroad work was secured on the switch gang when the Grand Trunk main line for this district was operated via Bethany and Omemee. He was later section foreman at the Midland yard. He later went West and has been employed on many of the leading roads through the United States and in Western Canada. He was employed at track laying when the Canadian Pacific Railway put the first track through the Rocky Mountains and was there when Sir John A. McDonald made his first trip over the road and through the snow sheds.

Since the death of Mr. Bowman, his brother-in-law, in 1869, he has resided with his sister, Mrs. Bowman, Charlotte Street, and of late has been acting in the capacity of watchman at the Fire Hall. He had worked but half a day at the incinerator when he was stricken with paralysis.

The late Mr. McFarlane was a quiet inoffensive man. He never married and is survived by his sister, Mrs. Bowman, from whose residence the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon. A short service will be held at the house at 3 p.m., the funeral leaving at 3.30 o'clock. Interment will take place in Little Lake Cemetery.

Mr. Richard Lillico of Saskatchewan is home on a visit.

Mr. John Read was in Norwood on Wednesday.

Mr. L. J. Howden attended the Conservative Convention in Norwood yesterday.

Mrs. George Dicks and son Albert of Washington are visiting friends in the city.

Mrs. Sharpe, widow of Lieut. Sharpe the Canadian aviator killed by a fall durng a flight in England, and Miss Tompkins of Ottawa, are the guests of Mrs. McCulloch, Charlotte street.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mrs. Booth, 176 Sherbrooke Street, on Wednesday by soldiers' wives and mothers, when work was done for the boys at the front. Music and singing made the time pass pleasantly. Miss Eva Booth sang "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" and "Your King and Country Need You."

THE CASE IS CONTINUING

The County Court resumed this morning with the continuation of the case of Frederick T. Mahood, who is suing John Hayes for $220.04, said to be the balance due for concrete work. The sum of $25 is also claimed for costs.

Huycke's Orchestra at South Beach

Mr. Brooks, the popular proprietor of South Beach Hotel, wishes to announce that he has secured the services of Asa Huycke's Orchestra for every Thursday night. New Firm Has Been Organized

The firm of W. H. Hill and Company, insurance brokers, will in future be known as Messrs. Hill, Weddell and Company, Mr. Alex. Weddell having taken an interest in the firm.

Mr. Alex. Weddell, who is well-known in and about the city, has been connected with the firm of W. H. Hill and Company for the past twenty years.

The new firm was organized June 1, 1915, and they are carrying all lines of insurance. Their offices will still be in the Crown Chambers Building, Corner of Hunter and Water Streets.

At The Top Of St. Paul's Spire

Messrs. Art Drummond and Topsy Walker are to-day occupying a position that enables them to look down on everyone in Peterborough, i.e., the top of St. Paul's church spire, which they are renovating and painting. It required all of yesterday afternoon to reach the top to secure the table, but to-day the daring steeple jacks regard the job as practically done, now that the dangerous preliminary work is done.

Bad Roads Cost District $100,000 Yearly

"The loss to Peterborough and vicinity through bad roads, is probably $100,000 every summer," Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., told the County Council this morning, in the course of an address. "And it will likely be much more this summer," he added. Mr. Burnham said that it was inconceivable that people who were always talking about the business should provide worse roads than thirty years ago. Tourists from everywhere turned off before they tackled the back country, and even Peterborough people shunned the district on account of the roads.

ASKS COUNTY COUNCIL FOR LARGER GRANT

EMPIRE NEEDS US

John E. Atkinson, of the Toronto Star, addressed the County Council this afternoon in behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Association, urging the necessity of an increased grant to the Patriotic Fund.

Sir Herbert E. Ames had planned to attend the Council's sessions, but was detained in the west end of the peninsula.

Where unemployment has prevailed in a marked degree enlistments have been heavy.

In Southern Alberta, Mr. Atkinson said $92,000 had been donated to the Patriotic Fund, but $91,800 has been withdrawn in that section, where 1,600 families are receiving assistance.

In Northern Alberta $94,000 was donated by the people, but the Fund has been drained to the amount of $117,000.00 for dependants of soldiers under arms. As the number of men under arms increased the demands upon the Patriotic Fund grew proportionately heavy.

Country districts have not recruited men as heavily as the cities. But men had a patriotic duty in the work of farm production and it was well that the cities had borne the heavier share.

Mr. Atkinson spoke impressively of the significance of the war and the obligation upon those who remained at home to perform the duties which confront them, duties which will be to their honour to perform, with something of the spirit of the men who have given up their lives and have shed their blood at the front.

Ald. Dobbin spoke plainly. The County Council had been contributing about $140 a month to the Patriotic Fund. County dependents have been drawing between $350 and $400 from that fund. There was a deficiency there which, as an illustration, ciency there which, as an illustration, funds and the need of generous donations from municipalities.

W.O.W. TO MEET IN PETERBORO'

The W.O.W. meets in Peterborough on Thursday, the 17th inst., and will attend in a body the excursion of the Woodmen at Hastings Thursday morning. All the Executive Officers of the Province will be present at this June Session of the Executive Council. Mr. G. N. Gordon, of this city, is a member of the Executive and representative of this district.

SOME GOOD RESOLUTIONS.

Those girls who want to perhaps turn over a new leaf, and who would like to win golden opinions from all should determine to:

Be kind and unselfish; to think of others first and themselves last.

Be kind and obliging to the old folk and those who are in ill-health or in trouble.

Not try and overcome all their failings at once, but take the big things first and then tackle the lesser faults.

Never look back on past mistakes and slips, and brood over them, but should forget them and courageously determine to start afresh.

Be bright, cheerful, and pleasant even when in difficulties themselves.

Never give way to despair, but with a brave heart resolve to overcome whatever difficulty confronts them.

For serving condensed milk a tubular handle has been invented that is forced into the top of a can, a valve closing its opening against dust except when it is tilted for pouring.

Brick Yard Mill Victim Of The Flames

Bad Blaze at Curtis' This Morning —Brigade Called Out

The mill at Curtis' brickyard, containing most of the machinery for operating the brick-making plant, was destroyed by fire which started at noon to-day. The plant is situated outside of the city limits, but nevertheless the department did what they could. Ald. Duffus took the Chief and several men and a number of chemical tanks to the scene in an automobile. The steam fire engine followed and water was pumped from a small creek with 1,500 feet of hose. It was impossible to save the mill which was completely destroyed, but the house and other buildings were saved. There was no insurance on the building destroyed.

AUSTRO-GERMAN FORCES HAVE CROSSED THE DNEISTER

The Battle For Goritz Wages With Renewed Intensity

AUSTRIAN FLEET BOMBARD FANO

A NOTED WATERING PLACE ON THE ADRIATIC---DAMAGE DONE NOT KNOWN

Austro-German Troops Have Crossed the Dneister 15 Miles Northeast of Stanislau---King Constantine's Condition Worse.

THIS MORNING'S LATEST WAR DESPATCHES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, June 18.—The Austrian fleet bombarded Fano, a noted watering place on the Adriatic this morning. The official statement from the Ministry of Marine, did not report the extent of the damage. Fano, with a population of 12,000, lies eight miles southeast of the tiny Republic of San Marino, and is the home of a famous old Cathedral and churches adorned with rich art treasures.

The Austrian naval base of Pola from which the attack probably was directed, lies 85 miles northeast of Fano across the Adriatic.

BEING WAGED WITH GREAT FURY.

ROME, June 18.—The battle for Goritz is being waged with renewed intensity, General Cadorna reported to the War Office to-day.

The Italian artillery has bombarded and destroyed the railway station at Goritz. Six miles north of the city Italian forces have seized and fortified the heights surrounding Plava on the east bank of the Isonzo.

RUSSIANS REPULSED ENEMY.

PETROGRAD June 18.—Austro-German troops have crossed the Dneister fifteen miles northeast of Stanislau. The War Office made this official admission to-day but announced that Russian forces east of Stryj threw back the enemy, capturing 202 officers and 8,544 men.

KING'S CONDITION WORSE.

ATHENS, June 18.—King Constantine's condition was worse to-day. An official bulletin said the King "was very weak." Great anxiety was felt in official circles.

JOAN ARNOLDI

Italians Are Now In Sight of Trieste---Railway Station at Goritz is Destroyed

French Have Captured Steinbruck in Alsace and Altenoff Near Arras---Canadian Brigade-Major Killed in Action ---British Make Further Progress.

ROME, June 18.—Italians are now in sight of Trieste. The railway station at Goritz has been destroyed by Italian artillery.

LONDON, June 18.—The French have captured Steinbruck, in Alsace, and Altenoff, near Arras, and have defeated strong assaults of a quarter million Germans in a stiff two days' battle.

LONDON, June 18.—Lieut.-Col. H. C. Becher, of London, Ont., Brigade-Major, First Canadian Brigade has been killed in action.

PARIS, June 18.—The British have made further progress near Ypres.

LONDON, June 18.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been selected by Lloyd George to make ammunition arrangements for Britain in the United States and Canada, according to the London Globe.

ATHENS, June 18.—British submarine which sunk three Turkish transports with six thousand troops returned safely after eluding the mine fields and four Turkish warships.

LONDON, June 18.—Lieutenant Vincent Asquith, son of Premier Asquith, was seriously wounded in action.

BERLIN, June 18.—Official statement declares that the Russians are retiring hastily from all the defences of Lemberg.

PARIS, June 18.—Lieut. Warneford, V.C., the Canadian who destroyed the Zeppelin recently, was killed with Henry D. Needham, United States magazine writer when their aeroplane fell from a tremendous height to-day.

Hope to Capture Lemberg Before July the First

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, June 18—The Austro-German rush in Galicia is on again. Both Berlin and Vienna officially state the progress has been made along practically the entire southeastern front, and Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, seems again to be in danger.

General von Mackensen has telegraphed the German Emperor that he hopes to capture Lemberg before July 1, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Amsterdam.

Mosciska, to the east of Permysl, has been captured by the Austro-Germans, and, according to German contention, the Russians are falling back south of the railroad connecting Permysl and Lemberg. All the Russian counter-attacks have been repulsed, with gains for the Teutons from a point north of Permysl into Bessarabia.

Far off as this point is from England and France it is being watched more closely than the western front, because it would appear that these operations are being pressed in an attempt to clear Galicia of the Russians, preparatory to a breathing spell to the east, which is likely to be followed by a crushing blow aimed at Italy.

According to scientists a man should live about five times as long as the time required for the full development of his frame and muscular system but seldom does.

Bulgarian Army Is Prepared

Army in Much Better Shape Than It Was in Balkan War

SOFIA, June 18.—The Bulgarian army is now far better prepared for war than it was for the Balkan war of 1912. It comprises four divisions of 300,000 men of first line reserves, who could be mobilized in a few days. If necessity should arise, this force could be more than doubled.

Austrians Retire Before Invading Armies of Italy

Trenches Considered Impregnable Have Been Occupied—The Town of Mori Also Falls

AUSTRIAN SPY PLOT

Special to The Examiner:

UDINE, June 18.—Italian troops, customs guards, and the Alpine men have made many successful surprise attacks upon the enemy, compelling them in several cases to surrender without fighting. It is their custom to advance upon the enemy in trenches considered impregnable over little-known smugglers' trails. In this manner the mountains to the west and to the south of Malborgeth have been occupied, as have also certain heights dominating the plateau of Gail. The artillery duel between Austrians and Italians in the Carnic Alps is continuing day and night. Up to the present time the Italians have maintained their superiority.

Occupy Town of Mori.

Verona, Italy, June 18, (via Chiasso and Paris). — News received here from the front is to the effect that the Italians have virtually occupied the town of Mori, advancing from both the south and the east. Mori is about 20 miles from here and about five miles from Roveredo. The way between Mori and Rovereto is however, most difficult. Fortifications have been erected on virtually every commanding position in this district and to move forward out of Mori will necessitate the dismantling of many trenches.

Austrians Spy Plot.

Bresci, Italy, June 18, via Chiasso and Paris.—Information has been brought in here of alleged Austrian ways of procedure in the Codino district. In this locality the Austrians decided they would make no resistance.

Consequently they expelled all the people who were favourable to Italy, leaving behind only those who sided with Austria. They were instructed to act as spies and to organize brigandage on the Italian soldiers. In order to deceive the invaders they were to pretend to be enthusiastic supporters of Italy. The Italian authorities discovered this alleged plot, and ordered the complete evacuation of the village.

PARIS, June 18.—There were wild rumours that fifty Zeppelins set out from Germany to attack Paris, London and Rome, but strong aeroplane guards are patrolling to offset such an invasion.

ROME, June 18.—Constantinople telegraphed that another British submarine had penetrated the harbour and blown up five vessels there.

German Overtures For Peace Would Not Be Entertained By Allies

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By Ed. L. Keen, European Manager of the United Press.)

LONDON, June 18.—Although an official statement is not procurable, I am authoritatively informed that the allies, especially Great Britain, would regard any German peace overtures at this time as premature.

Great Britain is determined to continue, at least until Germany is driven back upon her own territory. Any peace talk that has reached the United States certainly has not had its origin either in London or any other capital of the allies.

There were several reasons why Great Britain in particular intends to prosecute the war until the German grip upon Belgium and Northern France has been shaken. Briefly, these are among the more important:

GERMANY ON DEFENSIVE.

First—It is the firm belief here that Germany has reached and passed the high peak of her offensive efficiency. England believes that from now on the Kaiser must fight desperately on the defensive and hold what his armies grasped by "getting the jump" on the allies at the beginning of the war.

ENEMY WILL BE ROLLED BACK.

Second—It is the universal belief here that England is now only approaching the height of her offensive efficiency. When its full intensity is developed, the Germans, it is believed here, must be rolled back out of France.

LONG ENDURANCE STRUGGLE.

Third—Military men here agree that the final verdict will be won, not by brilliant dashes, but by a long drawn out endurance struggle. They base this belief upon the strength of line after line of strongly fortified works on both sides of the Flanders-France battleline. And England is certain that the longer the struggle, the more absolutely certain will the great resources of the allies ultimately overwhelm the Kaiser.

DEMOCRATIC ARMY TO TRIUMPH.

Fourth—England wishes to demonstrate that a citizen army, organized by volunteer enlistment, can cope successfully with what she calls "German militarism." The signing of a peace pact now, no matter how satisfactory its terms might be to the allies, would leave the solution of the question of the ability of a "democratic" army still in doubt.

NO APPRECIABLE PROGRESS.

In support of the statement that Germany has passed the height of her offensive ability, it is pointed out here that since the dash into France last fall, the Germans have been unable to make any appreciable progress against the Franco-Flanders front. On the contrary, they have been forced back at several points, notably north of Arras.

FRANCE WANTS DECISIVE VICTORY.

The people of France unquestionably would resent an attempt at peace negotiations at this time. No other nation in Europe can boast of more whole-hearted support from its citizens and the fiery patriotism of France demands not a compromise, but a decisive victory.

The English were slow in becoming aroused to the seriousness of the struggle. But once aroused, they are determined to stay in with bulldog tenacity. There is no sentiment here for a peace agreement, no matter what it gives to the allies, until Germany has first been decisively beaten on the field of battle.

Germans Get Off First Real Bit of Humour

In Connection With Their Submarine Warfare—Many "Dummy" Submarines Washed Up Along British Coast in Recent Storm

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 18, (by mail to New York).—British naval circles have Germans credited for the first real bit of humour in connection with the German submarine campaign. It is a "dummy submarine" and it explains thrilling tales of British sea captains who swear they dodged their way through hordes of German "Ubats."

One of the "dummy submarines" was captured and sent to the Admiralty. It consisted of a stock of wood resembling a broom handle, with a perfect reproduction of a periscope head rigged on the top. On the other end was a weight to make the "periscope" stand upright.

Many "dummy submarines" were washed up along the British coast during a recent storm. The Germans are believed to have planted hundreds of them around the British Isles.

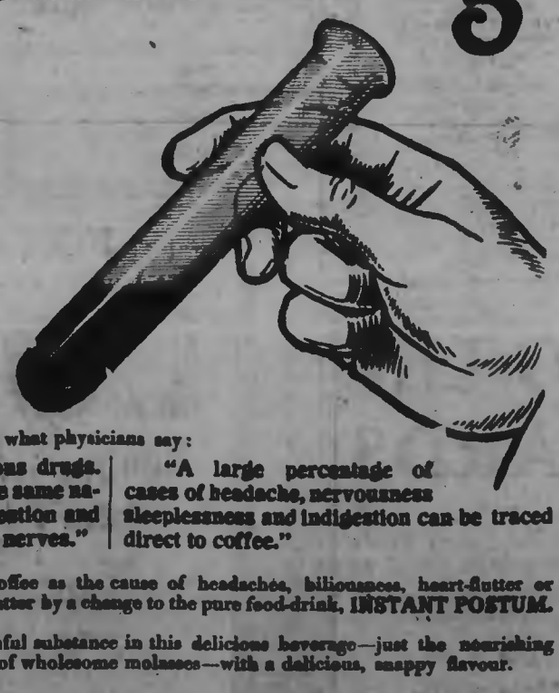
The Coffee Drug

Do you know what it is?



It's caffeine—a poisonous and powerful nerve irritant—from 1½ to 3 grains to the average cup of tea or coffee.

Listen to what physicians say:

"Coffee and tea are poisonous drugs. The caffeine they contain is of the same nature as uric acid. They impair digestion and produce various disorders of the nerves."

If you haven't suspected tea or coffee as the cause of headaches, biliousness, heart-flutter or sleeplessness, suppose you test the matter by a change to the pure food-drink, INSTANT POSTUM.

I dropped into a chair, looked accusin' at Jim, and sez: "Jim, your cow herd is now purty well balanced; but you haven't anywhere near enough for the size o' this range. We're short-handed as it is a good part of the time; but with only a few more men we could handle five times as many cows and could get our share of the free range. What you want to do is to buy up a few whole brands. They're pretty well shot to pieces up north o' here; but they've organized now and they think they can discourage cattle-rustlin'. What you ort to do is stir around a little and see if you can't locate some bargains clear to the south. Stuff don't get the fever up here in the Panhandle and if you could pick up some stuff to winter through it would be money in your pocket."

Then I turned to Phil McLaughlin, and put him through a cross-examination, pointin' out where he might have done a little better, but on the whole, admitting that he had done fairly well; and by this time everything was adjusted and neither one of 'em had nerve enough to ask me exactly what I'd been doin', myself, the last three days. My motto has allus been, if there has to be trouble, start it yourself.

After McLaughlin had left, I turned to Jim, and sez: "Jim when I'm away you spend a heap o' time in the saddle; but when I'm here you keep your nose in a book altogether too constant. My business on this ranch is to fit you out as its boss, not to run the place myself; and that is why I don't act like a regular foreman. Some o' these days I'll be movin' on, and so you might as well get good and ready for it. From now on, you treat Phil McLaughlin as the foreman, and I won't interfere unless you start to ball up. He'll stick to a job better 'n ever I would, but he's never got the trick of handlin' big bunches as easy as litle, and there's where you have to come in. Learn to plan, keep a week or two ahead of the game, write letters until you get some names to the south you can depend on; and go it big and strong."

Jim might have suspicioned that part o' this sound advice came from my leanin's toward personal liberty; but he took the advice and didn't make a single insinuation. Jim had a lot of character-wrappin's on him at this time and it took a heap o' scratchin' to get down to the raw animal.

I felt just a shade unconcerned about old Josiah on account of him forgettin' to coax me to stay all night when I was so beat out I wasn't trustworthy; so I tended strictly to Jim's business for a week or two, and then I just drifted in offhand.

I didn't see Kate, and only passed a few words with Josiah. He told me he had brought up a regular doctor from Paris, ate a stewed in Lamar county, and the doctor had said at Mr. Kastle had had what they call a partial stroke, that he'd get better of it, but would never be very strong again. I asked the old hermit how long it would be before Mr. Kastle would be able to go back home and he bristled up and said that he doubted if he ever did go back home.

"In fact," sez old Josiah, "he hasn't any home to go to, and I don't intend to stand by and see that gel starved any longer."

"Starved?" sez I.

"Yes, starved," sez he. "For years the old man's mind has been settlin' onto his son, who was away, while he has been neglectin his daughter who was at hand. She has been starvin', I tell you! She has a joyous, lovin' nature, she wants plenty o' range, she's fond of all sorts of animals and the outdoors and the mind and the stars; and yet day after day all she has heard was this old man whinin' because he couldn't find the son he had drove from his door.

"Now, I've been stickin' around here about like a tree, and not takin' much more interest in life than a tree, until I thought I was made out of wood like a tree. Why, man I had no idee how blessed lonely I was until that little gel came ridin' up to my door!

"She brought back to me all the joys of my youth, and all the sorrows; and it would surprise you to know how little difference the' is in the welcome I give to these two sets o' feelin's. When you're young you can't help but feel that sorrows are parasite growths on life, eatin' it up and destroyin' it; but when you get old you see that sorrows are the deep taprots and joys are the blossoms. If sorrows ever come to you, son, don't try to cut 'em off from your life. Sometimes they grow again and make most often in killin' the rots, you kill the trunk, and when you get to the full bloomin' time o' life, you haven't got nothin' to draw on to give you the blossoms o' joy.

"A feller by the name of Emerson, he knew all this and wrote a piece about it called compensation—which means gettin' full weight and full measure for every cent you spend out. Well, in that piece he tells right out that no man can be cheated by any one except himself; and it's the blessed truth. I cheated myself out of what should have been the best years of my life by simply givin' myself up to the destroyin' of my own roots of sorrow; and then when I came to myself and saw what a blasted snag of a trunk I had become, I came out here and squatted right on this Horseshoe to think it over—and, boy, my heart's been gettin' softer and lighter ever since.

"Another thing that feller Emerson said was that if a man would sock his hoofs right square in his own instincts and refuse to budge an inch, the rest of the whole blame world would swing around to him—and it's true. I know 'cause I've tried it.

"Now, understand 'at this don't mean to scheme out what would tickle your own selfishness and to sit and howl for that until you get it, for nine times out of ten it'll make you sick after you do get it. It means that just before it's time for you to act, the' comes a quiet little hint to you as to how you ort to act—you, jinst you. This ain't no order, understand, and it's no high-fangled theory so if you start to arguin', why, it'll shut right up with a quiet smile; but if you act on it and keep right on actin' on it even after it's got you into a scrape that makes what you call your better judgment climb on the back fence and call you all kinds of a fool, why, the' just simply ain't any way to keep you from gettin' all that's best for you to have."

"You try for a while," sez old Josiah, as earnest as a real estate grafter, "and you'll find it mighty amusin' if you don't find it anything else. You'll be studyin' about somethin' and all of a sudden this small, quiet voice'll chip in and say, 'what you ort to do is so and so'; and you'll be irritated for true. 'Get out o' here!' you'll say, 'and don't you never interrupt me again when you see I'm thinkin'.'

"Well, you'll have your own way. It'll back right out just as quiet as it stepped in. You'll think and think and think until you've thought yourself a beautiful house of sand; and then as sure as fate, when the rain comes and washes away that house of sand, somethin' 'll come and stand behind ya while you're gazin' down at the ruins, and another little voice, a raspier and scratchier little voice'll say, 'That first little voice told ya in the first place 'at this here wasn't no fit location on which to erect a sand-house, nohow'; and you'll wish that a big foot as misty and unpersonal as these voices'd come and give you a proper kickin'.

"Another thing about followin' your own instincts, is that you don't clutter yourself up with any silly superstition about it's bein' wrong to change your mind. Supposin' you made up your mind day before yesterday, and made it up the very best you were able—what then? Why, boy, since then the earth has whirled you around twice, and swept you along through space, every star in the sky, every blade of grass in the ground, every grain of sand in the crust of the earth has changed its position and its relations since then; and hanged if I can see where you'd have the nerve to swell up with false pride, even if your own mind was so loaded down with bump-on-the-logishness that it was the only single thing in creation which hadn't changed.

"For some years, now, I've been gradually learnin' to grab at the hand of my instinct every time it was held out to me, and every time I did it, it paid big. Sometimes it made me do things I didn't approve of doin', sometimes it made me hurt the feelin's of those I cared most for but it never did turn out wrong in the end, and the very persons whose feelin's I'd hurt, trusted me more 'n ever they had before.

THE USE OF SOAP SPOILS THE HAIR
Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking at its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.
The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), it's cheaper and better than soap or anything else you can use.
One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.
You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Pulling Out Posts.
The trick of lifting oneself by one's boot straps may appear somewhat difficult, but a machine has been built which does that. It is intended to pull out piles which have been driven in so firmly by a pile driver that they cannot be pulled up by ordinary means. The machine is clamped to the top of the pile, which it grips firmly and automatically. Steam is supplied through a hose. The steam lifts a heavy weight in the machine and lets it drop suddenly. By an arrangement of levers the force of the blow, instead of being downward on the top of the pile, is upward.
The main difficulty in pulling up a pile is to get it started, but a quick series of these blows soon starts the pile. The machine keeps knocking it up until it moves easily, when no more progress can be made, and the pile must be lifted out with ropes.—Saturday Evening Post.

No Need to Climb.
It was a very wet night, and the last omnibus was full inside when the conductor asked, "Will any gentleman ride upon the top to oblige a lady?"
There was no response, so the inquiry was repeated. But again there was no reply.
At last one of the male passengers remarked, "Are you sure she is a lady and not a poor woman?"
"Oh, yes, she is a lady," said the conductor without hesitation.
"A well dressed lady?" again asked the passenger.
"Yes, a thorough, well dressed, fashionable lady," said the conductor.
"Then I should think she can afford to take a cab home," said the passenger.—London Mail.

OUR LIVES.
Our lives are waves that come up out of the ocean of eternity, break upon the beach of earth and lapse back to the ocean of eternity. Some are sunlit, some run in storm and rain; one is a quiet ripple, another is a thunderous breaker, and once in many centuries comes a great tidal wave that sweeps over a continent, but all go back to the sea and lie equally loved there.—Austin O'Malley.

HAD INDIGESTION FOR OVER 10 YEARS. ALMOST DESPAIRED OF EVER GETTING WELL.
Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitating feeling in it. After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation. It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion if you will only try that old and well-known remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, which is a combination of nature's best known roots, herbs and barks for the cure of all stomach and blood troubles.
Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several doctors' medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings.

DRUG HABIT DEFINED AS A DISEASE

FIRST INTERVIEW WITH DR. ERNEST S. BISHOP BY SPECIAL PERMISSION OF DR. KATHERINE DAVIS, COMMISSIONER OF CORRECTIONS

By A. R. PARKHURST, JR.

New York, Saturday.

UNLESS we are to become a nation of drug addicts, give us federal legislation that will put a stop to the illicit sale of narcotics."

That was the concluding sentence of an impassioned address made on the floor of the House of Representatives by one of its members in the bitter fight waged there for the passage of the Harrison bill, an act to curb the growing menace from drugs that is threatening the country. The Harrison bill finally was enacted and as a result there were bared even more amazing revelations of the drug evil than were dreamed of by the police of the largest cities.

Since then crusades have been started all over the country and when police officials of New York city emphatically stated that seventy-four per cent of the criminals arrested here are drug addicts, the police of other cities awoke to a realization that their comrades in New York were on the right track in their effort to check crime.

Lieutenant Scherb, chief of the Narcotic Squad of the New York Police Department, and his men have been making scores of arrests daily of drug addicts and those venders who pander to them.

The Boylan law, and more recently the Block act, both enacted in New York State, have made it extremely hazardous for any venders to peddle their poison about the streets. Hundreds of arrests have been made and few have escaped conviction. The good work done by this squad and the valiant aid the police generally are lending are doing more toward stamping out violence here than any step taken by the uniformed force in years. Commissioner Woods awoke to the peril of the situation and the creation of the Narcotic Squad speedily followed.

A day rarely passes now but that some unfortunate appears in one of the police courts and asks the Magistrate to commit him to an institution where treatment may be obtained for the "habit." Oftener the victim requests that he be sent to the Workhouse, on Randalls Island, where many remarkable cures have been effected.

Determined to visit the Workhouse wards and at the same time have a talk with Dr. Bishop, I went to the office of Miss Katherine Bement Davis, the new Commissioner of Charities, under whose rule the Workhouse comes. I found Dr. Davis just as deeply interested in the drug evil as any official to whom I had talked, and while she preferred that I obtain from Dr. Bishop the information desired on the perplexing problem, she consented to discuss conditions as they were and do exist.

"There is in the Workhouse no class of prisoners which is receiving more attention from us just now than the drug addict," said Dr. Davis. "The activity of the police in checking the sale of drugs has increased tenfold the number of these poor unfortunates who come under our care. We are meeting the need, however, and I think we are not without a measure of success. We are trying to apply sane and common sense methods rather than theory and the result is very gratifying to me. Our physicians and nurses are untiring in their efforts to alleviate the suffering of the poor unfortunates they have under their care, and I am confident Dr. Bishop, who supervises the work, is as well if not better qualified for it than any other man I know. A visit to the wards where these patients are undergoing treatment would soon convince you of this, I am sure."

It was here that I interrupted Dr. Davis with the request for permission to visit those wards.

"No, I won't give you such a permit," Dr. Davis replied. "Dr. Bishop is in charge of the work and under no circumstances will I override his authority. I would suggest that you go to see him and anything he might do, or say will be all right. He is in charge and it is for him to decide."

When I left Dr. Davis' office bearing a card to Dr. Bishop I lost no time in calling upon Dr. Bishop at his home, No. 251 West Eighty-fifth street. Before taking up his story I wish to say I was little prepared for what I later learned from him. Practically all physicians and specialists to whom I have talked about drug cases referred to the victims as "fiends" or "dopes." To them the drug habit was a vice, a cancer that was gnawing at and fast destroying the very vitals of society. All drug victims were essentially identical and all were treated in exactly the same way. There was a prescribed course through which the sufferer must go, and his physical condition at the time of starting in on the cure mattered little. The addict who had been a user of drugs for twenty-five years was treated in precisely the same manner as an addict of as many months. They were poor unfortunates who had sunk so low that they were social pariahs, incompetents, and in most cases outcasts who would stoop to any crime in order to replenish their supply of "dope."

But what Dr. Bishop had to tell me came as a revelation. Straight off he said:—"The drug habit, you know, is a disease."

"A disease!" I echoed. "You mean a vice, don't you?"

"Nothing of the sort," came the vigorous denial. "A disease, I repeat, and a most pronounced and well defined one at that."

"Now, before we go any further," Dr. Bishop continued, "I wish you to understand that I am not what might be termed a drug specialist. I have no desire to be so classified in my profession. I am a medical man, a practitioner, a diagnostician, if you will, and in no circumstances will I discuss the drug habit from the viewpoint of medicine. Neither will I tell you what my treatment is. When I tell you I regard the drug habit as a disease you can draw your own inferences.

"You know as well as I do that no two persons afflicted with the same malady can be treated in precisely the same way. Circumstances alter cases. The treatment given drug addicts depends entirely upon the drug by which they are enslaved, as well as upon their physical condition when they come under medical care for treatment. We have been very successful in the treatment of such cases in the infirmary at the Workhouse, and as much credit is due the intelligent corps of nurses who are co-operating with me and the resident physicians as to the medicine that is prescribed.

"Just what those results are, however, you will have to discover for yourself, for I cannot discuss them with you. Neither can I discuss what others are doing in their efforts to cure the habit. I have my own methods. So far I am thoroughly convinced I am on the right track. Results have proved that. But I want it clearly stated that I don't profess to have 'a cure.' Find out for yourself, and in your own way, what has been done and let it go at that."

It did not take me long to realize that I was confronted by a forceful and unusual man of medicine. Dr. Bishop is a strapping, broad shouldered six footer, who, as tackle, had battered his way through many an opposing line when he played on Brown's varsity football eleven. After overcoming almost insurmountable obstacles, he has not only a splendid private practice, but also occupies the chair of professor of medicine at the Polyclinic and Medical School and Hospital, yet finding the opportunity to devote a great deal of time to the human derelicts who find their way to the city Workhouse. His late post as resident physician in charge of the narcotic and alcoholic wards at Bellevue Hospital gave him the opportunity he needed to study the drug addict at close range, and there he accumulated ideas, conceived through practical observation, which made it possible for him to accomplish what is now being done at the Island.

"When some years ago I was resident physician of the alcoholic and prison wards of Bellevue," Dr. Bishop continued, "my definition of narcotic drug addiction would have voiced the popular and generally accepted conception. I should have called it a condition based on some inherent weakness of will power and mental stamina; a condition arising from the habitual use of a narcotic drug which caused a deterioration, or degeneration of the physical, mental and moral being; an abandonment of the individual to the pleasure derived from sensuous indulgence; a habit, a vice, a morbid appetite to pander to which the debauche would go to any lengths, and, lost to self-respect, did not wish to escape from his degrading thraldom.

"A few months of bedside observation and effort showed me how far this conception fell short of clinical fact. Literature and questioning of existing authority failed in explanation of obvious manifestations. In the end I put preconceived bias and previous conception out of my mind and approached the plentiful clinical material for my solution. What I have learned is from the study of the narcotic drug addict as a clinical problem, viewing him as a sick man, listening to his history and his statements of narcotic drug action, watching his clinical manifestations and interpreting them in the light of physical action and reaction.

"Since leaving Bellevue I have retained my interest in narcotic drug addiction and in the cases in my service at the visiting physician at the Workhouse Hospital, as much as I have been in private practice, or as my [illegible] have clarified and classified my ideas and increased my ability to relieve the addict of his affliction.

"My present definition of narcotic drug addiction is this:—A definite physical disease condition, presenting constant and definite physical symptoms and signs, progressing through clean cut clinical stages of development, explainable by a mechanism of body protection against the action of narcotic toxins, accompanied by inhibition of function and autotoxemia, often displaying deterioration and psychoses which are not intrinsic to the disease, but the result of toxemia, malnutrition, anxiety, fear and suffering."

This definition was so entirely at variance with those I had heard specialists outline that for a time I was inclined to regard Dr. Bishop as a theorist, a dreamer, but hardly one who was making actual "cures" from his efforts. Before I left him I was convinced of my error, all of which was strengthened a thousandfold before I concluded my visit to the Workhouse drug wards. And, added to this, I had opportunity to read several papers that Dr. Bishop had offered before medical bodies. These papers treated of drug addiction and the many so called "cures," but I was forbidden to quote from them despite my earnest desire to do so.

"We will deal with the morphine addict, for example," said Dr. Bishop in resuming. "The facts I have gained from long study of these addicts offer a beacon light of hope, and convince me that ultimate rescue is possible for the majority of the so called 'incurable dope fiends.' I am firmly convinced that the majority of users of morphine have been terribly wronged in a firmly rooted and widespread opinion prevalent among both medical men and the laity. This opinion is that chronic morphinism is a morbid habit—a perverted appetite, a vice; that only he who is morally or mentally defective would allow it 'to get a hold upon him,' and that its main character manifestations are those of mental, physical and moral degeneration. Morphine users are often painted as liars, full of deceit, absolutely untrustworthy, using a dream and delight producing drug for the sensuous enjoyment it gives them—addicts who do not want to discontinue its use. They are thought of as mental and moral cowards who, after realising their deplorable condition, refuse to exert will power in the endurance of discomfort as the price of freedom. This was my opinion when I first went to the alcoholic ward in Bellevue, and for a time I worked on that theory.

"From my patients themselves and from watching and studying them, I later learned truths that have since been mightily strengthened—that the so called discomfort we think of them suffering upon withdrawal of the drug is actually unbearable torment, accompanied by physical and organic disturbances and manifestations sufficient to account for and prove the actual suffering. I further learned that the delightful sensations to which we attributed their continuance of drug use, and which have formed the background for all pictures of them hitherto painted, had in many if not in most of the cases with which I had come in contact, never been experienced, or if they had ever existed, they had long ago been lost and all that remained in morphine effect was support to organic processes necessary to the continuance of life and activity. To be brutally plain, the morphine addict has in the majority of cases never experienced any real enjoyment as a result of the drug and has endured indescribable agony because of a non-supply.

"I do not mean by this that morphine will not produce pleasant sensations or that it is never used to the end of experiencing these sensations. There is a class of the inherently, or otherwise degenerate who indulge in morphine from a morbid desire for sensuous pleasure just as they would and do indulge in any other form of perversion. The individuals of this class are mentally incapable of self-restraint, indulging jaded appetite with new stimuli. They yield themselves to any and all forms of self-indulgence and gratification of appetite.

"There comes a time when for them morphine, from increasing tolerance and dependence, loses its power to give pleasurable sensations and becomes simply a part of their daily sustenance, exacting physical agony from its non-administration. When this occurs they make no effort to control its amount or method of use, and it, with other conditions attendant upon their mode of life, relieves society of the menace of their membership.

"As a class these are the true dope fiends, largely incurable and hopeless; socially, economically and personally unworthy of salvage. They are not, however, hopeless and worthless because they happened to have acquired morphinism, but because they are fundamentally what they are—diseased, degenerate and defective. The morphine element is as incidental to their fundamental condition as are many of the other diseases from which they may suffer.

"These are the types who have fallen into the hands of charity hospital alienists and the workhouse and penitentiary physicians. The observations of these physicians made in the past upon this class of addicts, have had an unwarranted influence in the status of morphinism, and the stigmatizing of the morphinist. Because the degenerate class uses morphine to secure sensuous gratification, is no reason for stigmatizing the mass of those afflicted with morphinism as puppets of perverted appetite."

Here I interrupted Dr. Bishop to question him about his methods of treating what he so flatly characterizes "disease."

"When you visit the workhouse infirmary," he answered, "you will see many patients under course of preparation for treatment for narcotic addiction. You also will see a great many in the actual course of treatment. If you look far enough you will see a score or more men and women who have undergone the treatment now being built up to follow a normal life. Mingle with the various groups of prisoners, and you will come in contact with a great many who have been treated and are cured. Talk to them, and maybe their experiences will furnish better and more graphic reading than anything I can tell you.

"But while we are on the subject I want to say this:—In morphinism we have what will before many years be recognized as one of the most definite and curable diseases in medicine. Treatment which is based upon the recognition and removal of fundamental conditions as they appear in the individual case will give surprising results. Most of the past treatments have aimed at the withdrawal of morphine and at the bolstering up by whatever means were at command the supposedly defective mentality and will power.

"I want to state emphatically that the use of morphine does not constitute morphinism nor does the withdrawal of the drug constitute the cure for morphinism. The desire for morphine is in the majority of cases simply the expression of body need as the desire for water is an expression of body need. The fundamental condition is the changed physiology which makes morphine a necessity for organic satisfaction and adequate carrying on of organic function. If this were not so we would have long ago reached the solution of our problem.

"Withdrawal of morphine has been accomplished in many ways, and the average patient will live through almost any method of so doing. Experience shows, however, that following treatment which depends upon and has for its sole aim withdrawal of the drug comes months of suffering and endurance of physical inadequacy so great and so constant that there are few who do not relapse.

"Withdrawal should be simply one step in the patient's treatment, undertaken and executed with due knowledge and understanding of the disease and not by routine procedure. The important factor is to sufficiently understand the disease and its symptomatology so as accurately to estimate the patient's actual body need for morphine, to neither oversupply nor undersupply it so long as it exists, nor to eliminate, without artificial support, the conditions which create this need and to leave the patient well enough to react to strain and readjusted to normal functioning.

"All this can be done, and if I were at liberty to do so without harm to them I could summon the testimony of able physicians, past patients. For its accomplishment I have no magic cure, no routine treatment or universal method to advance. I know of no drugs, or combination of drugs which properly can be called a specific.

"Morphinism, fundamentally, is a disease. It shows stages and variations just as do other diseases. It is complicated by or complicates other diseases exactly as do other morbid processes, and every case is absolutely individual. It is just as reasonable to treat all cases of pneumonia or typhoid or cardiac diseases according to one routine as it is so to treat morphinism. I conceive it from my experience just as impossible to honestly promise a short duration cure for all cases of morphinism as it would be to do so in any other disease. Rational treatment and prognosis must depend in it, as in other diseases, upon its history, its stage and development, upon its complicated complicating factors, upon the condition of the patient, mental and physical, in the individual case.

"Modern medicine has been for some time getting away from the blind following of routine and the search for the specifics, and aiming at the discovery and consideration of, and treatment of fundamental cause and underlying conditions. When this method of research is applied widely to morphinism and other narcotic conditions, and the facilities of our great charity hospitals properly directed to its furtherance we shall rearrange our conception of morphinism. Restraint and custodial care and psychiatric classification will be applied more sparingly and more intelligently. Many worthy ill persons, instead of being refused admission and turned back into the streets after inadequate treatment, more hopeless and less efficient, adding to the municipal burden of the care of its unfit, will be rationally treated and returned to health and self-supporting competency.

"The primarily normal sufferer, innocent victim of circumstances or of misguided or unavoidable medication, will be treated as any other patient, in his house, in the general hospital or in reputable sanitania, according to his wishes and purse and the desire of his physician. With unbiased study and education, medical and lay, will come a rearrangement of our attitude toward morphinism and toward the treatment of its victims, and in its place will stand as a part of the ethical rational practice of medicine the treatment of a new disease."

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

Business Men's Excursion Was Great Success

That the tenth annual excursion of business men was an unqualified success was conceded by the one hundred business men who participated. The steamer "Stoney Lake" was chartered and a trip made to Harwood on Rice Lake. The arrangements, which were in charge of Mr. Frank Clarke, were carried out to the satisfaction of all concerned The weather was ideal and the outing, as a whole, was enjoyed by all on board. Almost every profession was represented and, needless to say, there was no lack of good humour. The party returned home early in the evening.

Stags are raised in China for their horns, which are cut off when soft and used in the manufacture of native medicines.

GERMAN AFRICA INVADED BY THE BRITISH FORCES—War Scenes in German South and South-West Africa.—While the greater conflict has been raging in Europe and the Dardanelles, a less important, but very successful British campaign has been progressing in Africa. One picture above shows the landing in German South-West Africa of a gun for the use of the British against the Germans there. These invasions were accomplished in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties in the way of nature of country and distance to be traversed. The country, it will be observed, is vastly different from that in which the British troops are fighting in Flanders. It is in this kind of country that General Botha, Premier of South Africa, has made his great success.

Destruction in Turk Capital

AMSTERDAM, June 18.—The Lokal Anzeiger, of Berlin, according to a despatch reaching here from the German capital, has received a message from its correspondent at Constantinople saying that a fire in the Hassana Bostani quarter of Pera has destroyed a total of 500 dwellings and warehouses.

Pera is a suburb of Constantinople on the north side of the Golden Horn, and is the aristocratic section where most of the foreign embassies are located.

According to a German medical authority 15 minutes' exposure to the sun's rays during an airship flight at high altitudes will kill all the tuber-

THE GERMANS' POISON GAS

Exactly what chemicals are used by the Germans to poison their adversaries is not quite clear. Sir James Dewar, President of the Royal Institution, is convinced, however, that the poisonous gas consists of liquid chlorine. Sir James points out that for some years Germany has been manufacturing chlorine in tremendous quantities—practically supplying it, in fact, to the rest of the world.

"If several tons of the liquid are allowed to evaporate into the atmosphere—when it immediately evaporates and forms the yellow gas referred to in the official report," says Sir James, "it is the easiest thing in the world for the Germans to inundate the country with the poison miles ahead, if the wind is blowing in the right direction."

Chlorine gas is especially suited to the purpose of poisoning troops owing to the fact that it is heavier than air and drifts like a thick fog cloud over the surface of the ground. It produces violent nausea and faint pain, followed by an utter collapse. Men arrayed in a dress resembling the harness of a diver and armed with retorts or generators about 3 feet high and connected with ordinary hose pipe are employed to turn the fumes loose.

PLUCK THAT WON

First Dorsets Used Knapsacks in Place of Trenches in Turnip Field

The bravery with which the 1st Dorset Regiment fought against tremendous odds for three days and three nights at La Bassee is told by Private Cornelius O'Leary, who returned to his home at Reading, Lancashire. He said:

"We encountered the Germans when they were making one of their fiercest attacks in their efforts to get through to Calais. There were eight companies of us, numbering 120 officers and men, apiece, and the fight took place in a very large turnip field. The German artillery was in front of us, and the Maxim fire was on the right and left. It was impossible to make trenches, so we had to place our packs in front of us and do the best we could. We were often outnumbered by ten to one, as the Germans were almost continually being reinforced. But we defeated them with heavy loss.

"General Ferguson, the commander of the division, spoke after the fighting of the splendid achievements of the battalion, and said how pleased General French was with everything they had done."

FRANCE MOURNS GARROS

Capture of Wonderful Aviator by Germans a Sad Blow

The capture of Roland Garros by the Germans was a sad blow to France and the allies' cause. The idol of the world's aerodromes in times of peace, and the most popular pilot in the French Air Service after the war started, the loss of the amazing little Frenchman is mourned throughout France. Garros is just the type of hero to capture the public fancy. Strikingly handsome, immaculately attired, and absolutely fearless, he is one's mental picture of the ideal adventurer. As an aviator he is unsurpassed.

Born with the national French quality of daring, he was attracted to flying in the very earliest days of the science. From the first Garros favored the tricky high speed monoplanes which presented him with ample opportunities for his aerial acrobatics. For several months before his capture he flew an eighty horsepower monoplane, whose tiny wings and heavy engine enabled it to twist and turn in mid air with the ease of a carrier pigeon. It was on a diminutive high-powered monoplane that Garros four years ago sprung into prominence by breaking the world's height record, when he ascended to an altitude of 14,000 feet.

A rival aviator soon afterwards beat this record, but Garros a few days later took his monoplane to a height of 17,000 feet—over three miles—and regained the honors.

Garros' most remarkable achievement, however, was in his flight across the Mediterranean, a feat which has not been accomplished by any other aviator. He started from St. Raphael on the French Riviera, and landed at Bizerta in Africa. This flight was remarkable not only for the distance which the airman had to fly, but for the fact that he used a machine which could not land on water.

With his usual daring, Garros trusted to luck that his engine would not fail. Had it done so nothing could have saved him from meeting with a watery grave, for the Frenchman on starting on his hazardous journey stated that he could not be bothered to carry a lifebelt, or inflated device, to support his machine if it fell into the water. Garros has always been a dandy. After a hundred-mile flight in wind or rain he will climb from his machine as immaculate as though he had stepped from a band-box. In private life his thick black hair shines with pomade, his nails are always neatly manicured and his dress faultless. It was a sad day for him when, through engine trouble, he was forced to descend in the German lines, for Garros in a German concentration camp without the necessities for his detailed toilet will be in a sorry plight.

Although outwardly the most reckless of aviators, Garros is in reality a man who takes no unnecessary risks. He knows that as long as his machine holds together he can do what he likes if he is high enough in the air to recover from a dive, tail slide, or sideslip before he gets within a hundred feet of earth.

Before the Germans took him prisoner Garros accounted for a considerable number of German machines. He had many exciting mid-air duels with Taubes and Aviatiks, and on every occasion the Frenchman's skill as an aerial acrobat enabled him to literally "make rings" round his opponents who were soon crashing to their doom by well-directed shots from the imperturbable Garros.

Cures Biliousness Prevents Bright's Disease

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Should this case not be similar to yours, write to us for the statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousness, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique positions. By their combined action on these eliminating organs they prove effective in complicated ailments which defy ordinary treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

ONE-PIECE BIB APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

Every busy woman who undertakes to do her own sewing begrudges the time spent in making work aprons, however useful and necessary such articles may be. Her one aim and object is to get them done as quickly and easily as possible and then turn the attention to more interesting sewing. Anything on the one piece order naturally appeals. It saves in cutting out, in joining one thing to another, and very often in the amount of material required.

The apron shown here can be made in the shortest possible time because of its extreme simplicity. The bib and apron portion are cut in one piece, the bib extending around to the back, where one end buttons over the other. The lower part is cut just a little circular to give ample fulness and has a pocket at each side. Belt pieces extend from the bib to the back, fastening these with button and buttonhole.

The apron is very easily made. After it is cut out all the edges, except the belt edge, are turned under in very narrow hems. Then the belt sections are sewed on. They should be lined or cut double. Each pocket is turned under at the top in a hem and then stitched in place on the apron. If one has scraps of embroidery insertion they may be used to make the belt and to trim the pocket, as illustrated. Possibly one has also enough gingham or percale on hand to make the apron. It requires 1¾ yards of material, 27 inches wide. The pattern, No. 7,169, comes in one size only: [illegible]

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

It All Depends.

"What," inquired the psychological student, "do you regard as the chief end of man?"

"Well," answered Mr. Hiram, "it depends on what you want the man for. If you want him to do brain work it's his head, and if you want him to run errands it's his feet."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Small Change.

The plumber was carrying in his work when he met a man in distress.

"Have you seen anything of a twenty dollar gold piece?" asked the man breathlessly. "I lost one somewhere along here."

"I believe I did see one lying on the sidewalk back there a piece," replied the plumber, "but I didn't stoop down to make sure of it."—Buffalo News.

In Doubt.

"Won't you be very, very happy when your sentence is over?" cheerfully asked a woman of a convict in prison.

"I dunno, ma'am; I dunno," gloomily answered the man.

"You don't know?" asked the woman, amazed. "Why not?"

"I'm in for life."

Mad Nathaniel Lee.

When Nathaniel Lee, commonly called the "mad poet," was confined during four years of his short life in Bedlam, a sane idiot of a scribbler mocked his calamity and observed that it was easy to write like a madman. Lee answered, "No, sir; it is not so easy to write like a madman, but very easy to write like a fool."

Stability of Wax.

The stability of wax is well illustrated by the perfect condition of many mediaeval seals, some as old as the thirteenth century, in which no alteration can be found in the chemical and physical properties of the wax. These were made from pure beeswax or from beeswax and rosin mixed.—New York World.

Theatrical Sarcasm.

The actor was pleased with himself.

"I feel," said he, "as if the mantle of Booth had fallen upon me."

His rival in the profession smiled a sardonic smile.

"I should think you would," said he, "for if it didn't break your back falling from that height, it would be a wonder."—Browning Magazine.

Education.

"What are you studying now?" asked Mrs. Jobson.

"I hope you will be very attentive and practice constantly," said the mother. "I tried to get your father to wear one, but he could not keep it in his eye."—London Answers.

A Big Difference.

"I notice a great change in your little boy."

"As to how?"

"He used to dawdle and lag when you sent him in the morning to the store. Now he's off like the wind."

In Demand.

"See that man?" said one of the two people who were talking about success in life.

"Yes."

"Who is he?"

"Conductor of an omnibus."—Wisconsin State Journal.

Slow.

"Mamma, I'm afraid papa was pretty slow when he was a young man."

"Perhaps he was. He always paid his debts and used good English and knew nothing about cigarettes and never saw a taxicab and hadn't any clubs, and was able to support a wife before he married. I guess he was pretty slow."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Burdette and Riley.

Here is a gentle little story which Strickland Gillilan told. It concerns the late Robert J. Burdette and James Whitcomb Riley and happened during Burdette's last summer on earth.

Somebody said to Riley:

"There's one thing about Bob Burdette that particularly impresses me. When he says, 'God bless you,' he means it."

"Yes," replied Riley, "and God does it when Bob asks it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

STOP THE MISERY OF INDIGESTION

A Temperance Remedy That Ends Soreness, Belching, Heaviness, Heartburn and Dizziness.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been so successful in the treatment of indigestion, that thousands of former sufferers owe their good health of to-day to its wonderful power, and testimonials prove it.

It arouses the little muscular fibres into activity and causes the gastric juices to thoroughly mix with the food you eat, simply because it supplies the stomach with pure, rich blood. It's weak, impure blood that causes stomach weakness. Get good blood through the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you will have no more indigestion.

It is the world's proved blood purifier. Start to take it to-day and before another day has passed, the impurities of the blood will begin to leave your body through the eliminative organs, and in a few days you will know by your steadier nerves, firmer step, keener mind, brighter eyes and clearer skin that the bad blood is passing out, and new, rich, pure blood is filling your veins and arteries.

The same good blood will cause pimples, acne, eczema and all skin eruptions to dry up and disappear. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the helpful remedy that nearly everyone needs. It contains no alcohol or narcotics of any kind. It cleanses the blood and every organ through which the blood flows is benefited. Get it to-day at any medicine dealer in liquid or tablet form.—Adv.

Didn't Divide.

"Will divide to suit purchaser," read the man.

"Does that sign go?" he asked the real estate agent.

"It certainly does," replied the agent.

"Well, divide the price by four and we can talk business."—Buffalo Express.

Make It a Montserrat Circingle

"It is the favoured drink just now," said the host.

"It is made with a little Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice and a little syrup or sugar, in ice water. I tell you, it is a grand drink."

The visitor tried it.—"My eye, it is good," said he.

Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice can be had at all leading grocers.

TERRIFIC BATTLE NORTH OF ARRAS

FRENCH TRYING TO SURROUND GERMAN FORCE

ONE OF GREATEST BATTLES OF THE WAR NOW RAGING

Large Body of Germans at Bay and French are Fighting Desperately to Surround Them---Tremendous Importance is Attached to Conflict and no Official Bulletins Will be Given Out for Twelve Hours---Germans Showing Utter Disregard for the Lives of the Men as They Fight to Save Lens.

HEAVY LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 18.—On an eight mile front around Arras a furious battle over wrecked trenches and hillsides strewn with corpses, is proceeding. The French are fighting desperately to surround a large enemy force at bay in a ravine east of the Lorette Hills. From a hill near Souchez the heavy artillery is sweeping the enemy's lines with a semi-circle of terrific shell fire. All around Souchez the fighting is going on with the greatest intensity. Tremendous importance is attached to the conflict north of Arras by the military officials here. The war office this afternoon announced that no official bulletins regarding the progress of the battle would be made public for twelve hours. This announcement only increased the tension here. The Germans are counter-attacking with great fury. Bombs, hand grenades and bayonets are all playing their part in the great conflict. The loss of Lens would force a readjustment of the German lines from Arras to the sea, and for this reason the Teutons are throwing their forces into battle with an utter disregard for lives. No estimates of the loss of life have reached Paris but it is accepted here that heavy losses are occurring on both sides.

LONDON, June 18.—The official inquiry into the sinking of the Lusitania closed at noon to-day. A brief session was held this afternoon. It was understood that Captain Turner's testimony and the instructions the Admiralty issued to the Lusitania's commander, were discussed. There has been no announcement of the date on which the findings will be made public.

PARIS, June 18.—Eighty miles from the battlefield of Waterloo, where Napoleon was crushed by an allied enemy one hundred years ago to-day, another allied army is hurling itself against the Germans before Lens in one of the greatest battles in the present war. More shells are crashing against the German positions every hour than Napoleon used in cannon balls during the whole of that historic battle. Napoleon's army at Waterloo consisted of 71,947 men—a mere handful compared with the forces at grips around Arras.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 18.—The German war office admitted this afternoon that the French troops have penetrated the German trenches at four different points in the fierce battle now in progress north of Arras.

The war office, however, announces the almost complete annihilation of a small British detachment in the fighting north of Bethune-LaBassee Canal. The British launched a determined attack, apparently cooperating with the French in their drive around Arras. The British troops rushed forward to within a few yards of the German trenches. A terrible hail of artillery and machine gun fire was turned upon them and but few of the enemy's troops escaped.

The official statement frankly admitted reverses in the fighting north of Arras, but stated that at one point, north of the Lorette Hills, a section of trenches was evacuated by the Germans "purely for strategic reasons."

BERLIN, via wireless.—June 18.—In retaliation for alleged brutal treatment of German prisoners in tropical Africa, the government announced to-day that French war prisoners will be compelled to cultivate swamps in different parts of German Africa.

BERLIN, June 18.—A war office bulletin says the Germanic forces are now only fifteen miles from Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, and will occupy that place within one week.

OTTAWA, June 18.—The casualty list to-date: Total 8072; killed 1430; wounded 5803; missing 1839.

PROMOTIONS FOR WALLIS BROTHERS LIEUTENANTS NOW

Honours For Two Well Known Former Members of the 57th Regiment Who Have Been Recommended For Commissions.

ONE WAS WOUNDED

Word has been received by local relatives that two well known Peterborough boys, Lance Corporals Harold and Hugh Wallis of the 16th Battalion, C.E.F., have been recommended for commissions following the battle of Langemarck, and are now in training as lieutenants. The two boys were formerly members of the 57th Regiment and went to the front with the 79th Cameron Highlanders. Lieut. Harold Wallis was wounded at Langemarck, but has quite recovered. Their many friends in Peterborough will be glad to learn of the promotion of the two brothers.

Kawartha Chapter is Formed—Officers Elected This Morning

A representative meeting was held this morning at the residence of Mrs. (Judge) Huycke, at which Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt of Toronto was present and explained the objects, etc., of the organization. It was unanimously resolved to form another chapter in the city, to be called the "Kawartha" chapter, and the motto adopted was "Facta non verba" (deeds not words).

Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt was elected Honorary Regent.
Mrs. Huycke—Regent.
Mrs. W. H. Dunsford—1st Vice-Regent.
Miss Edwards—2nd Vice-Regent.
Mrs. J. A. Aylmer—Treasurer.
Mrs. John Allan—Secretary.
Mrs. A. A. Perrin—Standard Bearer.

It was resolved that the work undertaken be of a patriotic nature for the present.

It was decided (by kind permission of Judge Huycke) to hold a garden party in his grounds next week; admission ten cents, and at which refreshments will be on sale.

The entire proceeds will be given towards the purchase of sand bags, which are are urgently required by the soldiers at the front.

An open meeting will be held tomorrow (Saturday) evening at 8 o'clock in the art room of the Public Library to make final arrangements for the garden party. All friends interested in the Chapter will be cordially welcome.

Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt kindly donated $10 to the Chapter.

Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN STILL GROWING

$891.50 Yet Needed to Secure the Last Promised Five Hundred.

The hands on the Y.M.C.A. clock still continue to move, and yesterday's effort showed that the citizens are anxious to see the 12,000 mark reached. The receipts up to yesterday morning showed $10,389.50; yesterday's efforts brought in $699.00, the largest subscription being from Bonner-Worth Co. and Mr. A. P. McLean, amounting to $50.00 each. Mr. J. J. Howden's team were most successful, securing $168.00. The amount still needed in order to secure the last five hundred pledge, is $891.50. The workers are optimistic that this can be accomplished and the hands on the big clock shifted to the final notch.

Will Be Laid on George St. Where Traffic Conditions Are Much More Severe

Why the Council insist upon laying three blocks of concrete paving on George street is a mystery to more than one citizen who will be called upon to share in the cost of the work. In the first place the tenders for concrete paving to be laid on Hunter street where traffic conditions are much lighter and there are no street car tracks to contend with. As matters stand now the concrete paving will be laid on the main thoroughfare of the city where the traffic is heavier than at any other point. If the tenderer conforms to the specifications upon which the tenders for concrete are based, a pavement will be laid on George street that was intended for Hunter street, where traffic conditions are not nearly so heavy. Then again some of the aldermen who opposed the laying of a concrete pavement on George street foresee trouble when it comes to laying the brick between the street car tracks, as it is believed by them that the local contractors are not familiar with this part of the work. The same applies to the city, should the work be undertaken by the Engineering department. In short, the Council accepted a tender for street paving that was intended only for Hunter street and will attempt to have it laid on George street, where traffic conditions are much more severe.

MORE LIBERAL USE OF THE CHIMES

The Peoples' Chimes Are at the Service of the People

Rev. Canon Davidson has invited the city to make more liberal use of the People's Chimes for which no charge is made other than a fee of $1.00, which goes to the man who plays them The matter was discussed at last night's meeting of the City Council and it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the Mayor with power to act.

MORE CASUALTIES COMING

OTTAWA, Ont., June 18.—That the first Canadian brigade under command of General Mercer of Toronto, was included in the British forces which recently saw some hard fighting at Festuburt, is confirmed by private cables here. In this fight, according to the official report of Sir John French, the line of German trenches was taken, but the British forces in them had to retire to their original positions.

The First Brigade is made up of the first, second, third and fourth battalions, all from Ontario.

The only officers so far known to have been hit were Col. Becher of London, killed, and Capt. Willie O'Connor, of Ottawa, slightly wounded.

The casualty lists will probably come through within the next twenty-four hours and will be announced in the usual way as soon as the next of kin is notified.

Signs Must Be Raised

So As Not to Interfere With Pedestrain Traffic on George Street

It is claimed by Alderman Edgar that trees along some of the streets of the city are not trimmed sufficiently high enough to enable pedestrians to pass under with an umbrella up. The same applies to a number of signs on George street, particularly along the west side between Simcoe and Charlotte streets. As there is a by-law regulating the erection of street signs on the streets, this matter will be referred to the proper authorities with instructions to take such proceedings as may be necessary.

DECORATION DAY

L. O. O. F.

Members of Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges are requested to meet at the hall, corner George and Hunter streets, 2:30 p.m. sharp, Sunday, June 20th, for the purpose of decorating the graves of departed brethren. All visiting brethren cordially invited to attend. Per order, T. Sills, D.D.G. Master. 4d-140

CONTRACTS AWARDED

City Council Endorse Paving Proposal—Will Proceed With the Construction of 30,000 Square Yards—Features of the Session

DISCUSSION PRO AND CON

After a merry battle lasting four hours the City Council at a special meeting that was held last evening decided to proceed with the immediate construction of thirty thousand square yards of street paving. Of this amount fifteen thousand square yards will go to the Standard Paving Company and the remainder to the Warren Paving Company of Toronto. The latter will also include in their contract a couple of blocks of bithulitic paving to be laid on George street between Edinburgh and Smith streets. The original proposal as recommended by the Board of Works provided for forty thousand square yards. Ald. Stratton started the fireworks by objecting to this amount on the grounds that the cost would be prohibitive under present conditions. The bank had advised the city to go slow. He forestalled an attempt to pass the Board of Works' report providing for the larger amount and in this was assisted by a number of the aldermen. So strenuously did he object to the adoption of the report in its original state as to cause the Mayor to express himself in a manner which Ald. Stratton characterized as an "insinuation or suggestion." This precipitated a wordy duel and wound up by the Mayor threatening to have Ald. Stratton removed from the Council chamber. The threat, which did not materialise, was soon submerged in dense volumes of oratory, some of kindergarten calibre.

The Bone of Contention.

The debate raged around Clause seven of the Board of Works' report which in its original form, read as follows:

7. We received tenders for paving the streets on which pavements are authorized by By-law No. 1884, a synopsis of which tenders is attached to this report and also a report from the Engineer upon them. We recommend that the contract for the street paving be let as follows:

20,000 sq. yds. to the Warren Paving Co., all of asphaltic concrete except on George street from Edinburgh street to Smith street and that for this portion of George street the pavement be bithulithic. Contracts to be let according to the terms specified as to the contractors taking city debentures at par for the work and as to local labour, etc., with the option to the city to increase the quantities in each contract this year on the same terms.

Amount Reduced.

Ald. Stratton was successful in introducing a motion to have the amounts specified in clause seven reduced to two amounts of fifteen thou-

Another Russian Victory Over Foe Near Zaranvo

General Von Lensingen's Army Thrown Back in Disorder---9,000 Prisoners, Six Large Cannon and Twenty-One Mitrailleuses Captured---Fighting Between the Pruth and the Dneister.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, June 18.—The Russian victory over General Von Linsingen's army east of Stryj, was most decisive. The enemy was thrown back in disorder in a battle above Zaravno, abandoning six large cannon, 21 mitrailleuses and large supplies of ammunition.

In addition to nearly 9,000 prisoners reported to the war office, other bands of enemy stragglers have been brought in.

"Between the Pruth and the Dneister, the fighting continues," said the official statement. "Near Chotin, our troops are pressing the enemy's forces who penetrated into Russian Bessarabia."

The war office was silent about the progress of the new Austro-German drive on Lemberg.

LONDON, June 18.—The Russian victory near Zaravno is the second in a week. A week ago Thursday they defeated the Germanic forces there, the enemy losses being unofficially estimated at forty thousand. Later the Germans announced that they had recaptured Zaravno itself.

THE ENEMY'S GREAT LOSSES

PETROGRAD, June 18.—The losses of the Austro-German troops on a forty mile sector of the Galician battlefront alone totalled between 120,000 and 150,000 during the past month, said the official review of the fighting issued by the war office to-day.

WASHINGTON, June 18.— The Bryan "remedy" for war—mediation, arbitration and education—was announced by the former Secretary of State here to-day. It is the third and last installment in Bryan's discussion of a "causeless" war. Bryan divides his "remedy" like his whole discussion, into three parts. He advises, as the first step, joint and several offers of mediation by the United States, and other neutrals. Next, he urges the utilizing of the Bryan peace treaty plan—one year's investigation of international disputes—which would allow "passion to subside and reason to resume sway." At the third step, and most important, he sugests a world-wide campaign of peace education—"the cultivation of the spirit of brotherhood condensed into the commandment—"Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Formerly Resided In Peterboro

John Allan Roberts, age 65 years, a pioneer resident of Winnipeg, died on Monday last at his residence, 328 Cathedral Avenue, Winnipeg, after an illness lasting almost five years.

Surviving Mr. Roberts are his widow and two sons, Fred and John Roberts, both of Winnipeg. He also leaves a brother, Henry Roberts, of Durham, England, and two sisters residing in the Old Country. The funeral was held from the family residence on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock under Masonic auspices. Interment was made in St. John's cemetery.

Mr. Roberts was a cousin of the late Lord Roberts, and was born at Waterford, Ireland, Jan. 31, 1850, he being the youngest son of Lieut.-Col. Roberts, at that time in command of the 49th Madras Light Infantry, and also having sprung from one of the old Huguenot families. John Roberts was educated in the Portora Royal School at Inniskillen, Ireland. He emigrated to Peterborough, Ont., in 1867, and went to Winnipeg 10 years later. For some time he was manager of the large farm of Sir Lister Kaye at Shoal Lake, and in 1902 he went to Winnipeg, being made chief dairy inspector for the city. In 1910 Mr. Roberts was forced to retire on account of a nervous trouble, which ultimately resulted in his death.

Mr. Roberts married, soon after emigrating to America, Miss M. E. Jones, of Chicago, daughter of Rev. W. H. Jones of that city. He was a life-long Mason and also a member of Red River Lodge, No. 2, A.O.U.W.

Leslie Stevens Left To-day to Join the Aviation School at Toronto

Mr. Leslie Stevens, who has passed his preliminary examinations for entrance to the Aviation School, Toronto, left the city to-day to take up the study of aviation. For a few weeks he will learn the art of the aircraft, proceeding later to England for further study, then to the fighting line.

PRIMARY S. S. CHARLOTTE ST. HOLDS PICNIC

The Primary and Cradle Roll Departments of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church held their annual picnic on Tursday afternoon, June 17. The first thing on the programme was an hour's car ride, leaving there at Jackson Park, where over a hundred sat down to a bountiful lunch, prepared by the mothers and friends. This was followed by the races and the prize winners were as follows:

Cradle Roll, Girls — 1st, Dorothy Swanger, 2nd, Grace Jackson.

Miss Llyle's class—1st, Elsie East, 2nd, Viola McCrecken; 3rd, Helen McFadden.

Mrs. Carver's class,—1st, Clarence Jackson; 2nd, Roy Greene; 3rd, H. McFadden.

Fathers' Race—1st, Mr. Boshkow.

To prevent train pipes freezing there has been invented a container to be inserted in them and filled with rock salt.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1915

NO GERMAN PERIL HERE.

We Canadians of fearful mood, sometimes get anxious over the "German peril" from the United States. We are told that there are nine or ten millions of Germans in the United States, sitting up nights grinding knives to carve up Canada with. The foreign-born population of the United States is a great melange of races, but the foreign-born population is not, as is often supposed, predominantly German, or of nationalities at present allied with Germany in war. The foreign-born of these nations are almost two-thirds less than those of the nations that are fighting against these countries. The foreign-born population of the United States coming from the allied countries totals 7,705,393, while the total of the German, Austrian and Turkish populations is only 4,248,628. So that two-thirds of the foreign-born of Uncle Sam is in sympathy with the cause Britain and Canada, and the other allies, are fighting for. There is little talk now of German raiders from the United States. There won't be any raid in force. There may be a good deal of sneaking and spying—the favourite German militarist way—but nobody needs loose a wink of sleep in the fear of an armed invasion of Canada from the United States, by Germans, or German sympathizers.

EXIT BRYAN.

Mr. William Jennings Bryan, the seceding Secretary of State of the United States, or rather the President's, Cabinet, is getting a good deal more attention than his importance emrits. This is not distasteful to him; it is probably what he wants. He joys to be "in the limelight." He has sought it since his youthful days, when he won the sobriquet of "the boy orator of the Platte." He was always talked; and as the world, if polite, looks at the talker, Mr. Bryan has been happy. His talking has been his chief achievement; accomplishment his least. In 1896 he ran for the presidency — the superlative plum of the native-born of the United States; and was defeated by McKinley, on the free silver issue. He easily achieved defeat. He was again distanced by McKinley in the presidential race of 1900, and Taft administered the third defeat in 1908. When he became Secretary of State in the Wilson Cabinet Mr. Bryan had a chance to do something, and he did so. He signed in his official capacity, some strong protests against the monstrous methods of Germany, but got out when his chief, President Wilson, wanted his secretary to "talk business" to Germany. This kind of talk didn't suit Mr. Bryan, and he resigned to give himself full scope to talk in his own way—to talk pro-Germanism and win the favour of the eight or nine millions of Germans, by birth or decent, in the United States, whose friendship might be useful in case Mr. Bryan courted another defeat in a presidential contest. In this way, perhaps, can Mr. Bryan's retirement from the cabinet be explained. His post official talking through the press interviewer indicates that Mr. Bryan may have an eye to advertising, with a view to lecture platform profits. In this he doubtless shows wisdom. A man who has so effectively discredited himself as a statesman, need not look for much higher recognition than the "Chautauqua salute."

A GREAT ANNIVERSARY.

A hundred years ago to-day was fought the battle of Waterloo. Its winning was more than a mere military triumph; it was a victory for something similar to what we are fighting for to-day. It marked the end of Napoleon's ambition to subjugate Europe. This ambition was after all a less evil thing than the mad ambition of the Kaiser of to-day. All the same the principle was the same—the doctrine of absolutism in government, which involved, like Kaiserism, the dominance of force, and the suppression of the individual, and the impossibility of democratic freedom, such as we British at home and abroad have to-day.

Then—in 1815—Germany and Britain were fighting shoulder to shoulder against the tyrannical ambition of Napoleon. What she won at Waterloo by the help of Great Britain, she has wasted and lost. The liberty she gained then has been overlaid with the most oppressive, the most malign, the most systematic organization of tyranny the world has ever known, a tyranny not only over men's bodies, but over their minds. The German people have been schooled to be the instruments of their own undoing. In Germany's schools and colleges the children that have become the generation of to-day, have had ground into them the doctrine of force, been taught the lesson that force is the great thing; that the state is everything, and the individual nothing, or less than nothing—a mere tool for his own oppression.

Britain and the young nations that have sprung from her loins, have kept and bettered the heritage, won in part, for them at Waterloo—have combined, elaborated, and strengthened it. Since then Britain and her possessions have risen higher, Germany has degenerated. To-day the degenerate Germans are fighting to impose upon Europe and the world the spirit and principle of the tyranny they fought against a hundred years ago. Britain is fighting for the retention of the principle of freedom won at Waterloo. In that she is only consistent with the traditions of her splendid past—always the friend of the oppressed, individuals or nations. This is what makes the anniversary of Waterloo so great a day to be remembered. Even France is fighting for what she battled against a century ago, under the leadership of a brilliant but ambition-blinded Frenchman. The seeds of what was won at Waterloo, have been scattered far and wide, and have taken root in many a national soil. The far-flung British Empire flourishes under the benign growth of this germ. The great Republic to the south of us, with its hundred millions of people, is a fruit of the freedom, whose seed Wellington gathered on the field of Waterloo, June 18th, 1815.

BRITAIN'S SHARE.

Arm chair critics and faint-hearted patriots are dolefully shaking their pessimistic heads and moaningly inquiring what Britain is doing—because the censor won't let out all military information. These doubting Thomases do not know, or do not appreciate the fact that in effect Britain is doing, in her own way, more than any other nation in the quadruple entente to wage successful war. Britain may be short of other ammunition, but she is long on the "silver bullet." The armies that are in the field on our side are kept there and in effective condition, largely by the help of British money. Great Britain is helping finance nearly all, if not all, of her allies. With the other nations of the Franco-British alliance, the entry of a new nation into the war is a decided strength; but each entry only adds to the burdens of Britain. When Italy entered the fight Britain had to help finance her campaign; British financial aid determines Rumania's coming in, and if Bulgaria comes in also, the British money bags will be drawn upon. We all know, and remember, except some of the critics, that the British navy, by its command of the sea, has been a cower of strength to her allies in the matter of supplies.

It comes to this, virtually, that if Britain had not a soldier in the trenches she is doing, as much or more, perhaps, to wage successful war against Germany, Austria and Turkey, than any, or at least most of her allies. But in the matter of an army we must not forget what Britain has done in this regard. What she has done in a year in getting an army on its feet has taken other nations ten or twenty years' preparation, and with the help of conscription too, to accomplish. Britain pluckily went in the war on Belgium's behalf, on behalf of her pledge, against Germany—and a German army of three or four million men, armed cap a pie, by forty years of strenuous preparation—with only a handful of an army, a quarter of a million men. In the space of less than a year she has a million of men under arms—the best fighting force in the world — thoroughly equipped in everything but ammunition, and that is on the way. When Britain gets "good and ready" in this regard, there will be—German helmets "on the green."

We don't know much about this war. Under a seeming placid surface, tremendous activity is seething. If we could see behind the scenes we should see that Britain is busy, and busy in a business way, that, in due course, will have results that will surprise not only ourselves, but the enemy. We must have patience. There is much to be done, but we have the comfort that Britain—and her Dominions—are doing their duty, all round.

MANITOBA'S SHAME.

Hamilton Spectator: No longer can we cherish the hope that the leading members of the late Manitoba administration were not directly concerned in the villainy unearthed in connection with the construction of the new parliament buildings. Both Premier Roblin and Dr. Montague are known to have been really in delicate health for some time past. It seemed easy to credit their statements that because of physical inability they had not given close attention to the arrangements for the work in question, and were unaware, till the investigation revealed them of the irregularities of their subordinates. But even Premier Roblin and Dr. Montague, as well as Mr. Coldwell, are now seen to have been as guilty as any of the other factors in the conspiracy.— Hamilton Spectator (Conservative.)

British Valour Has Lost None of its Fire in a Century

A century ago to-day, upon the plains of Flanders, almost within sound of the great guns that roar around Ypres, British valor, aided at the eleventh hour by Blucher's swift-marching Prussians, pulled down Napoleon. From that day until the eager hands of Emperor William clutched at world-power a year ago, no British troops had been seen upon the fields of the Low Countries—the cock-pit of Europe. Looking back into the centuries it seems the fate of the Islanders once in a hundred years to die on the plains of Flanders and in the fens of Holland for some great cause. A century before Napoleon's time Louis the Fourteenth, the arrogant autocrat who, when someone spoke in his presence of the State, answered: "The State? I am the State," tried to add the Low Countries to his swollen dominions. British troops, under Marlborough, at Ramillies, Oudenarde and other hard-fought fields in the very region now the scene of still more Homeric struggles, beat back the legions of France. Another step into the past bring us to the Elizabethan era, when the stout captains of the English Queen not only singed the beard of the King of Spain in the Biscayan ports, but aided greatly in the struggle of the United Netherlands to maintain their hard-won freedom. Who does not know the story of the gallant and debonair Philip Sidney, poet and soldier too, who at Zutphen, a little over three centuries ago, turned away the cup from his parched lips as he lay on the field fatally wounded, and insisted that the precious water be given to a common soldier lying near who needed it more? Five centuries back Agincourt, fought in October, 1415, was the high-water mark of English power in northern France. And, again, at La Bassee and Festubert, as at Agincourt, the cry is:

"Once more into the breach, dear friends, once more.

* * * * *

Our dead to-day are no less heroic than those who died on the same fields five hundred years ago. What Knight of them all showed greater valor than young Warneford, the aviator whose death is reported to-day as the result of an accident in mid-air? While the history of the British people lives in song and story the tale will be told of how, alone in the mid-heavens, he fought the crew of a great Zeppelin and in the first decisive conflict between aeroplane and dirigible brought his giant antagonist crashing to the earth in shapeless ruin.

* * * * *

There is need to-day for all the heroism of the French and British troops who "stand like greyhounds in the slips, straining upon the start." The Germanic armies in the east press eagerly on the heels of the retiring Russians in the hope of dealing them a blow so deadly that they will not be able to resume aggressive warfare for months. If Mackensen succeeds in driving the Muscovites entirely out of Galicia the Germans will turn to the west with renewed vigor and seek a like victory there. To relieve the pressure upon the Russians the Allies of the west—British, French and Italian — are attacking the Germanic forces all along the line, and inflicting heavy losses upon them.—The Globe.

THE EVE OF WATERLOO

There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's capital had gather'd there
Her Beauty and her Chivalry and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men.

A thousand hearts beat happily; and when
Music arose with its voluptious swell,
Soft eyes looked love to eyes that spake again
And all went merry as a marriage bell—
But hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell.

Did ye not hear it? No! 'Twas but the wind
Or the car rattling o'er the stony street—
On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined
No sleep till morn when youth and pleasure meet
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet
But hark! that heavy sound breaks in once more,
And nearer, clearer, deadlier, than before,
Arm! Arm! It is the cannons opening roar.
And then and there were hurrying to and fro
And gathering tears and sighings of distress
And cheeks all pale that but an hour ago
Blushed at the praise of their own loveliness.—Lard Byron.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Message From the Grave.

WILKERSON'S fall from the trestle had not been noticed by his outlaws, and before any one in the camp could make sure that the man was dead a couple of the Mexicans had quickly slipped down the hill to him. They found him still alive. Without paying any attention to John Dorr's men who were still doubtful of the outcome of the battle, they dragged their fallen leader away and up into their own temporary camp.

It was not long before Wilkerson revived. He was terribly bruised and almost insane from physical pain and wild rage at his defeat. It was with difficulty that the unwilling outlaws restrained him. Their chief took upon himself the task of making it plain to Wilkerson that this was no time for rash and unorganized attack.

"They have beaten us so far, senor," he said quietly, "and you are very sick. Tomorrow we shall see."

The next morning's sun had scarcely touched the peaks of the mountains when Wilkerson stretched his stiff, sore limbs and began a fresh campaign. He made it clear to the leader of the Mexican outlaws that they must work quickly.

"It won't be long before the news of this fighting gets out and the authorities take a hand," he said. "But if we can just get this mine into our possession in the next three days I can hire you and your men as peaceable workmen and swear that Dorr and his gang are trying to take our property away by force. I guess my word will be as good as his."

"Very well," agreed the Mexican after thoughtfully considering the matter. "We can get back into Mexico in twenty-four hours from here. So long as you pay us and let us—what do you call it—loot, my men are with you."

Wilkerson covertly studied the desperado's impassive visage. Jose Vigas bore a renowned name on the border for daring, shrewdness and wickedness. He was known as "The Murderer." For five years he had had a price set on his head, yet because of the loyalty of his adherents and his own fearlessness he had escaped.

No man better fitted for a sinister purpose could have been found. Yet mingled with Wilkerson's satisfaction at having such a tool to his hand was a dread of the man himself, and his calm insistence on the privilege of looting the camp when it was captured gave him a sense of nausea.

After all, they were Americans down there in the "Master Key" camp. Through his binoculars he could see Ruth on the porch of the bungalow. Vigas, too, saw her. He took no pains to conceal the cruel interest in his eyes.

The next few days resulted in little advantage to either side. John Dorr would not reopen the mine nor even send in for much needed supplies because of the constant menace of the outlaws, who occasionally fired scattering shots down into the gulch as a warning that they were vigilant.

On the other hand, Wilkerson found it impossible to seize the camp without precipitating a battle, from which he shrank. Deeply involved as he already was in crime, he dreaded to cross the border line which would forever place him beyond the pale and make him an outlaw.

Instead, he used every method to put himself outwardly in the right. He sent plea after plea to the sheriff of the county to come and restore order, asserting that he had been driven from his rightful property by violence and that the situation was such that, without interference from the authorities, there would be serious trouble and very likely bloodshed.

These pleas availed only partially. The sheriff made a trip into the mine, talked with John Dorr and Tom Kane and then sought out Wilkerson.

"It looks to me as if this was a case for the courts," he said slowly when he had examined Wilkerson's forged deeds. "I knew old Gallon pretty well, and he thought a sight of that Ruth girl. Fact is, he told me he intended her to have the mine and left it to her in his will. Now you toddle along with these papers and want to take it away from her."

"Gallon and I were partners years ago," Wilkerson insisted. "We located this mine together, and when I came back he gave me over my share."

"But you want it all," the sheriff said dubiously.

"Sure; it's all mine," persisted the other. "Didn't Gallon use all the money he got out of it while I was away? And when we came to a settlement he found that the mine wouldn't pay half he owed me."

"I'm simply a peace officer," the sheriff said finally. "I don't know who's in the right. That's for the court to decide."

"Wasn't I in possession?" demanded Wilkerson. "Haven't I been driven out by force, me and my workmen?"

"From what I've seen of your workmen," was the curt response, "I don't like their looks. And there are tales going around that Vigas is in the country."

"How can I help who's in the country?" demanded Wilkerson, much injured. "That's your lookout, not mine. All I'm asking for is protection."

The sheriff departed without giving him any satisfaction, and Wilkerson determined that he would act. The Mexicans were getting restless, and the sardonic Vigas hinted sharply that he was impatient.

"All right," Wilkerson agreed. "We'll just go down to the road in the morning and then walk into the camp. Leave it to me. I'll simply say I've come back to take charge and you are my miners."

Vigas twirled his wiry mustaches. "And then?"

The men looked each other in the eye. That evil glance was sufficient.

John Dorr and Tom Kane, meanwhile, had been in constant consultation. One thing was constantly in their thoughts.

"Ruth oughtn't to be here," John would say dismally. "If it weren't for her we could quickly settle these outlaws; for that's all they are."

"I reckon nobody would cry at the inquest," the cook returned, "if we did get a few of them. But, as you say, the girl is here, and that puts fighting out of the question. Unless they start it," he added cautiously.

"Wilkerson is bound to make some kind of a move mighty soon," said Dorr. "He can't control these fellows of his for long."

Just then Wilkerson appeared at the entrance to the camp one morning with a motley train of followers. Dorr was at a loss to know what to do. Wilkerson was apparently peaceful and expected a peaceful reception. His boldness had almost carried him through when the ignorance and cupidity of one of Vigas' men gave John and Kane the surely wished for opening.

The Mexican peered into the window of one of the cabins and saw a gold watch on the table. Instantly he broke the glass with the butt of his carbine and reached in for his booty.

Dorr and Kane had warned the miners at the first appearance of Wilkerson that there might be trouble brewing, but that the first blow must come from the other side.

"Boys," said the old cook, "you know the sheriff. He's listened to both sides, and he don't rightly know which is the one to take. But one thing is certain—he's got to keep order and protect human life and our property. If those fellows make a wrong move we've got the sheriff on our side. See?"

They had seen the point, with many mutterings. They had quietly prepared themselves for just the occasion which the Mexican's act now gave. As the bandit pulled his arm back with the watch in his hand a revolver cracked, and the arm fell shattered to his side. And as Wilkerson glanced furiously about him he saw the camp ready. He cursed the maddened Mexican and grasped Vigas by the arm.

"Stop your men!" he implored. "Don't let them fire a shot or we are lost!"

It was too late. Passions long restrained now broke out, and within a minute a battle was raging between the walls of the gulch.

The miners had the advantage. They fought from the shelter of their own cabins, and they were united by a common purpose. Their attackers were scattered, were divided between lust for loot and thirst for blood and had no sure refuge nor rendezvous. Yet they would eventually have made the camp untenable had not the thoughtful sheriff prepared a surprise for both parties.

After consultation with his advisers in the county seat he had appealed to the governor on the ground that as one of the opposing forces was Mexican he felt that a superior authority should handle so delicate a situation. The governor had agreed and ordered a troop of cavalry to the "Master Key" to preserve order. It was just when Wilkerson had seen his chance for a grand coup that the troopers arrived.

Ruth, with some of the women, had taken refuge in John's house on the hill, with old Tom Kane as their bodyguard. Wilkerson knew that if he could capture Ruth he could make his own terms. He directed several of his men to make a detour around the hill and attack this. Meanwhile he set fire to a cabin below in order to distract the attention of Dorr and his men.

The ruse had nearly succeeded but for Kane's quickness. Though he had not used his gun for many years, he had lost none of his old time skill, and when the marauders made their final dash on the porch of the house the cook, with a single glance over his shoulder, shot from the hip. His man tumbled dead at Ruth's feet, and his companions sneaked back.

At that instant the cavalry rushed in, and before five minutes were passed their commander had separated the combatants and proceeded to disarm them.

He then called Dorr and Wilkerson to him and curtly stated that his orders were to see that there was no trouble. "What your quarrel is I don't know," he said.

Wilkerson tried to argue, but neither the officer nor the sheriff, who now arrived, would listen to him. They also turned a deaf ear to John Dorr's statement of Wilkerson's crimes, including the kidnaping of Ruth in San Francisco.

"If you have anything against Wilkerson," the sheriff asserted, "swear out a warrant for him. I'll serve it quick enough."

With this John must perforce be satisfied, but after a conference with Kane it was agreed that the latter should go to the county seat and make formal complaint and procure a warrant for Wilkerson's arrest on the ground of forgery.

"You and I know those deeds he flourishes aren't genuine," John said earnestly. "Let's make it an issue and try it in court. At any rate, we'll be rid of him for awhile."

"I know you're right," the old cook assented heartily. "I'll be off today. With these troopers around the greasers won't dare do anything openly. But keep your eyes open, John! They will sneak something across if they can."

"Trust me for that," was the reassuring response.

But when Kane had gone Dorr realized that he was in a nasty predicament. Wilkerson was desperately playing so bold a game that it would take every resource at his disposal to meet him successfully. Ruth must be protected in her rights. The "Master Key" mine must remain in her possession undisturbed. That would be impossible until Wilkerson was eliminated. And that man was after great stakes; otherwise he would never have ventured so far.

The Cook Shot From the Hip.

As he debated this inwardly John went over in memory all the events of the brief period since old Thomas Gallon had died, leaving his daughter in his charge. Before his mind's eye ran the pictures of the last scenes and then—

Like a flash it came to him! What was in that letter the old man had so carefully sheltered and handed him at the last? Had Gallon foreseen something like this and prepared for it? In his last days had his failing powers concentrated on his single aim and evolved a final safeguard for the "Master Key?"

Not to be opened until my daughter's eighteenth birthday or before then if her welfare is threatened.

Quickly he tore the envelope open. The inclosure fell out in two portions. He put them together, with a muttered ejaculation at his own carelessness and read the cramped script:

Silent Valley, Cal., June 20.

Little Girl—Read carefully what I write. On this depends your future welfare.

The "Master Key" mine discovered by me five years ago contained a mother lode of inestimable worth. The exact location of the lode is written on a slip of paper, which I placed in the head of an Indian idol in an old sea chest, which went down with the ship on which I was wrecked.

On the master key, the key to that chest, and which you wear on your neck, is carved the location where the vessel went down. Find that slip of paper and the wealth is yours. Your devoted father.

THOMAS GALLON.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Tis-It Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

PEOPLE OFTEN SAY

"How Are We To Know When The Kidneys Are Out Of Order?"

EASIEST THING IN THE WORLD!

The location of the kidneys, close to the small of the back, renders the detection of kidney trouble a simple matter. The note of warning comes from the back. The kidneys become overtaxed and fail to do their work at nature's call.

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed. Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble.

The danger lies in delay. Doan's Kidney Pills stimulate the action of the kidneys, and enable them to perform their duty perfectly.

Mrs. Greig Murphy, Lower Ship Harbor East, N.S., writes: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my family with great success, and don't think there is a better pill for the kidneys. I was very miserable with my back, and could hardly get about. I got a box, and tried them, and found that they were really good, so I took in all about six boxes, and soon found my back cured, and my kidneys as well as ever."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; for sale at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

A Business Built On Two Words

THIS great business—the largest of its kind in Canada—has been built on two words Quality First.

The first shoes that bore the name "Ames Holden" and the first made by "McCready", were good shoes. The first dealers, who sold "Ames Holden" or "McCready" Shoes, found them to be good shoes.

Through all the sixty years of their business life Quality First has been the guiding force which has brought increased prestige to these famous firms.

Many of the grandfathers and grandmothers of today took their first walks in "Ames Holden" or "McCready" Shoes, just as their grandchildren are doing today.

The builders of railroads; the founders of cities; the directors of national life; the substantial men and women in every section of Canada; the defenders of the Empire; have worn and are wearing either an "Ames Holden" or a "McCready" shoe.

And the reason is simple—they are most satisfactory in every point, style, fit, comfort, and practical economy. In other words—Quality First.

Baby's Eyesight.

A newly born babe shows in an unmistakable manner its aversion to bright lights, and for this reason it is always important to shade the infant from direct sunlight or bright artificial lights for some months or so after birth.

When an infant is born with inflamed eyes no effort is spared by both doctor and the nurse to cure this condition. There is no doubt that many cases have been saved from blindness. It is as well for a mother to bear in mind that an infant which has suffered from sore eyes may at a later period display some ocular weakness, and she should lose no time in putting the child in touch with medical advice.

Most infants under the age of three months, since they are not able to properly co-ordinate the eye movements, are liable to squint, but this is of no importance whatsoever. After this age the infant can be truly said to be able to look at things, but it is not until the sixth or seventh month that recognition of things seen is developed.

REPORTS PRESENTED TO EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Heads of the Woodmen of the World Here Last Evening ---Satisfactory Progress Has Been Made---Attended Meeting of Sherwood Forest Camp.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Executive Council of the Woodmen of the World was held in the Empress Hotel last evening, Dr. W S. Harrison of Toronto, Head Council Commander of the Order, presided. There were present, Head Advisor Lieutenant J. B. Gamble, M.A., M.D., of Brantford, Head Clerk, Clair Jarvis, of London, Head Banker, J. H. Saunders, of London, Head Escort, J. F. Miller of Brantford, Head Watchman, J. M. Patterson of Hamilton, John Manning, London, Rev. J. W. Hodgins, Stratford, and J. B. Hoover Guelph, composing the Board of Managers, and G. N. Gordon, Peterborough, member of the Executive Council.

The Reports.

The head council commander presented his report which dealt particularly with the organization branch of the Order, and which showed a net increase of new business of over 300 over that for the corresponding period of last year. He also drew attention to the work of the Order during the year 1914, and the result experienced through rate adjustment and congratulated the Executive upon the splendid position of the Order at the present time and also referred to the Actuary's report, showing the order to be fully 100 per cent. salvent.

The report of the Board of Managers dealt mainly with matters of routine and the satisfactory manner in which the statistical work of the Order was conducted.

Death Losses Less.

The Head Clerk's report, which was read by Bro. Clair Jarvis of London, showed the death losses to May 31, were somewhat less than for the corresponding period of last year and the Order had paid in death losses $1,354,139.65, and in accident benefits, $49,982.27 and referred to the fact that the valuation of both Departments have stood the test of actuarial solvency and that there was approximately $80866 above the amount required under the N. F. C. table of mortality to the credit of the Insurance Department, while the Sickness Department shows a surplus of approximately $6,000 under the same table. This was a very satisfactory condition to be reported to an organization at the expiration of less than a year under adequate rates.

Members Overseas.

He also referred to the members of the Order serving with the Overseas Canadian Forces and referred to two claims that have matured among those of the Order's members who are serving at the front, both of which were promptly paid by the Order. In addition to the two claims referred to four claims for sickness, benefits have been paid to members serving in the Overseas Forces.

Attention was also drawn to the financial condition of the Order, which showed the reserve in the Insurance Department to be $620,000, and the reserve of the Sickness Department, $37,000.

Attend Local Camp.

The members of the Executive, in response to the invitation of Sherwood Forest Camp, of Peterborough, attended a meeting of the local camp held in the Woodmen Hall, George Street, where twenty-five new members were regularly initiated into the Order. His Worship Mayor Buller, on behalf of the citizens of Peterborough, and of the Woodmen, extended a very cordial welcome to the Executive Council, and hoped their brief sojourn in Peterborough had conveyed a good impression of our splendid city.

The address was responded to in a very pleasing manner by the High Head Council Commander, Dr. Harrison, Sov. G. N. Gordon and Sov. J. H. Saunders, while addresses were also made by the other members of the Executive Council present.

Went on Excursion.

The members of the Executive Council attended the excursion of the Peterborough Camp, which was held to-day to Hastings, thus terminating a most successful meeting and a pleasant visit to Peterborough — Woodcraft's stronghold in Eastern Ontario.

ZAM-BUK AND OUTDOOR LIFE

Every tennis or ball player, every swimmer, every canoeist, every man or woman who loves outdoor life and exercse, should keep a box of Zam-Buk handy.

Zam-Buk is a purely herbal preparation, which, as soon as applied to cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, blisters, etc., sets up highly beneficial operations. First, its antiseptic properties render the wound free from all danger from blood poisoning. Next, its soothing properties relieve and ease the pain. Then its rich, herbal balms penetrate the tissue of healing. Barbed wire scratches, insect stings, skin diseases, such as [illegible] rashes, ringworm, babies' heat sores, chafed places, sore feet—are all quickly cured by Zam-Buk. It also eases and cures piles. All druggists sell Zam-Buk. Use Zam-Buk Soap also; 25c. per tablet.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

Was Not Carbide That Exploded

Accident in Toronto Was Due to Action of Compressed Acetylene Gas

"In our addition of June 14th we published an account of an explosion which occurred in Toronto. The article stated that carbide exploded. This was found later to be incollect, and we now wish to inform our readers that carbide was not in any way responsible for the accident. We are advised that the accident was caused by the explosion of a cylinder of compressed acetylene gas. In regard to the occurrence we have gathered the following information regarding carbide:

"Carbide is a safe article to store or transport when packed in steel sheet drums. It is not affected by shock or concussion, and transportation lines accept it for shipment as they do various forms of hardware. Thousands of drums and carbide are daily shipped in Canada as ordinary freight, and never has carbide, when packed in steel drums which protect it from moisture, been responsible for accidents.

"When carbide comes in contact with water, acetylene gas is produced, and the accident in Toronto on June 14th, was caused by a cylinder of compressed acetylene gas exploding. There was no carbide anywhere in the vicinity."

CITY IS NAMED AS DEFENDANT

Former Employee of Isolation Hospital Seeks to Recover Thirty Dollars

Florence L. Taylor is plaintiff in an action against the city to recover the sum of $30 for alleged wrongful dismissal from the defendant's employment as servant at the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital. The amount is made up as follows:

Wages for May, 1915..	$15.00
Board from the 16th to the end of May, 1915	7.50
Damages subsequent to the said last day of May in consequence of the said dismissal	7.50
Total	$30.00

Mr. J. Greene is solicitor for the plaintiff. The matter which was brought up at last night's meeting of the City Council, was referred to the Legal committee.

THE RED CROSS CAN NOW BOAST HOME OF ITS OWN

Through the generosity of Mr. George Morrow, President Toronto Loan and Savings Company, the Peterborough Red Cross Society have been enabled to secure a room over Messrs. Adamson and Dobbin's store on Simcoe street, wherein to carry on their various activities.

The branch ask that any who are willing to loan 2 large tables, a desk and some chairs with which to furnish the room, kindly to notify Miss Rush, Tel. 1392, who will be in charge of the room, and will have the furnishings called for.

The room will be open for the present on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday from 2 to 5 p.m. for the reception and distribution of supplies and other work connected with the branch.

SIMPLE METHOD OF SENDING BOVRIL TO MEN AT THE FRONT

A simple method of forwarding Bovril to the men at the front has been arranged by the Company and is now being employed by relatives of the soldiers. Two four oz. tins of Bovril in one package will be forwarded to any address in France and England at a total charge of $1.40. The goods are safely packed and should be very acceptable to the men in the trenches. McDermid and Jury are the local representatives of the Bovril Company for this scheme, any other details of which may be obtained from Mr. McDermid.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

"A prayer for the tempted. (Temperance lesson). Psalm 141.

Golden Text: "Keep me from the snare which they have laid for me." Psalm 141: 9.

1.—Verse 1. When we are sorely tempted, what is the best way to get comfort?

2.—What right have we to demand, or request, of God, that he "make haste," to answer our prayer?

3.—Is a loud cry to God when our souls are in agony, of any more avail than if we were to pray mentally, or in a low voice? Why?

4.—Verse 2. What kind of prayers are they that ascend to God as sweet smelling incense, and what kind are they that are an abomination unto Him?

5.—How may we make sure that our prayers are pleasing to God?

6.—Is there any reason to believe that it would ever be displeasing to God to ask Him to remove the temptation, or take away the trouble which may be causing us so much anxiety?

7.—Of what use, either in public or private prayer, are gestures, such as "lifting up of our hands?"

8.—Verse 3. What is the significance of David's prayer, "Set a watch O Lord, before my mouth?"

9.—About what proportion of family, social, national, and international troubles are caused by unwise words?

10.—Is there any infallible remedy against speaking words that hurt, or that give unnecessary offence to others, and, if so, what is it?

11.—Verse 4. What reason is there to believe that God does sometimes "incline our heart to evil?"

12.—To what extent, if any, should a Christian association with men that "work iniquity?"

13.—Do men generally commence to live immorally of their own inclination, or are they led to do so by the influence of bad associates? Give your reasons.

14. If the purchase of liquor for drinking on the premises were made illegal, to what extent would that reduce the increase of inebriates?

15.—If it were made illegal to drink alcoholic liquor in the company of others, how would that affect the sobriety of the people? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

16.—Verse 5. Why should we be anxious to have the verdict of truly righteous men on our conduct?

17.—If we are afraid of the opinion of a truly good, level-headed man on our conduct, after he knows all the facts, what would that indicate?

18.—Verses 6-10. What is the general influence of honest public opinion upon the conduct of men and women?

19.—Which are the better "judges" of public policy, or conduct, a few men who are well informed, or public opinion as expressed by the whole people at the polls?

20.—If the government should submit a nation-wide measure to the whole people for the total prohibition of the liquor traffic, what would be the probable result, and, whatever it may be, should the verdict be taken as morally right? Why?

Lesson for Sunday, June 27, 1915. Review. David, the Shepherd of Israel. Read Psalm 78: 65-72.

To prevent collision at sea two Englishmen have invented apparatus which collects sound waves and by electrical contacts lights lamps on the side of a vessel from which the sounds come.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

CAT-O-NINE TAILS HAS ITS TERRORS

Even to Husky 16 Year Old Youth —Held Up Boy Scouts.

The "cat o' nine tails" always has its terrors, but there is always also a difference in the party who handles it. And there is a difference when it is wielded by a burly policeman, but when Chief Thompson undertakes to handle it there looks to be 'something doing." A husky sixteen year old lad drifted into the police station this morning and said he was sent there by one of the detectives and that his name was "Rube" and he was the fellow wanted for shooting off a revolver.

The "Rube" seems to have a grudge against some local Boy Scouts and on one or two occasions has held them up as they were on their way home. He tearfully explained to the Chief that the boys fired at him first and nearly hit him. In fact the shot scratched his hand and knocked the peak of his companion's cap. He then fired, but the revolver did not belong to him.

The Chief has had the offender before him for a lecture on a couple of occasions before and he thought his time had come when the working of the "cat o' nine tails" was explained in detail to him this morning. He estimated that he had seen one in Toronto and when the Chief still proceeded to open the locker he emphasized the fact probably expecting physical demonstration, with himself as the main participator.

After dire threats had been made to him the lad was let go home with the promise that he would have the owner of the revolver at the police station this evening at 8 o'clock with the weapon. It did not take him long to get from the vicinity of the black horror which he saw the Chief carefully replace in the locker.

The County Council Is Paying $14,699 to War Tax and Funds

Many Items of Interest to the Business Already Transacted This Session—Grants for Repairs to Bridges—Dr. Clinton Costs $510 to County.

The war will have cost Peterborough County in part up to the end of this year $14,699.00. Four hundred dollars a month for November and December of last year, and until the end of 1915, totals $5,600. This has been divided between the Red Cross, Belgian, and Patriotic Funds. The Belgian Fund has been recently cut off and the money will go to the other two funds, to be distributed by a special Committee. What the Provincial Government terms a war tax, of one mill, amounts to $9,099, from the County.

Thus these war contributions reach $14,699, and are provided for by a tax of 1.616 mills on the dollar.

The Council listened attentively to John E. Atkinson, of Toronto, Mayor Buller and Ald. Dobbin, yesterday, regarding the need of larger grants to the Patriotic Fund. It was stated that County dependants in the city were drawing over $350 a month from this fund, while the County donated only $130, or $140, a month to it.

This morning Reeve Anderson, Chairman of the Finance Committee, decided to investigate the records at the City's distributing office and to report later to the Council. It was decided yesterday, before the deputation arrived to grant $400 a month, this year, alternately to two funds, and it is not likely that the Council will alter this decision at this stage of their session.

What Finance Committee Did.

In the Finance Committee's report the sum of $400 a month for the balance of 1915 was granted, to sufferers as the result of war, to be directed by Messrs. McKee, Shaw, Anderson, Darling and Kindred.

No action was taken with a letter from A. G. Carruthers, Capt. Q. M., and J. Ross Cameron, Lieutenant 36th Battalion, C.E.F., Belleville, who asked for a subscription toward a regimental fund, required for various necessities and conveniences.

Moved by Mr. McKee, seconded by Mr. Walsh, that a by-law to borrow $6,000.00 by debenture issue be read a third time.

The by-law was duly read and passed. The loan is to meet the present requirements for bridge and road work. The tenders for the debentures were opened and considered.

Moved by Mr. Walsh, seconded by Mr. Squire that the tender of Messrs. McNeill and Young, regarding debentures, be accepted, viz., $5,893.20 with accrued interest.

Ald. Green Met Council.

Ald. G. Walter Green addressed the Council on Thursday afternoon, regarding the advantage of Rural Radial Railways, also soliciting the members to have resolutions passed by their local Councils, and forward the same to the proper source to ask for engineers to go over the different routes in order to ascertain the possibilities of establishing such a railway.

Dr. Sutton asked the Council to consider the matter of better road construction.—Referred to the Road and Bridges Committee.

To Arbitrate City's Share.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Darling, that W. H. Cairment of Lakefield be appointed arbitrator to act in conjunction with an arbitrator from the city to fix the amount payable by the city regarding the Administration of Justice, and that a by-law be passed confirming the appointment, a copy of such to be forwarded to the City Clerk.—Carried.

This arrangement is made every five years and pertains to the city's share toward the maintenance of the jail, payment of juries, and other items towards which the city must contribute.

$510 to Health Officer.

The Council received a bill of $510 from the Provincial Board of Health, being Peterborough County's share to the salary of Dr. Clinton, District Officer of Health. The bill was paid. It was moved by Mr. Walsh, seconded by Mr. Cohen, that this Council request the members of East and West Peterborough to oppose the proposed change in the Medical Health Act, regarding the fees of the District Health Officers.—Carried.

Roads and Bridges.

The report of the Committee on Roads and Bridges was adopted as follows:

That the chairman (Mr. Cohen), Mr. McIntosh and Warden Kindred inspect Dunlop's bridge, North Monaghan and report at the November session.

That the Warden, Mr. Cohen, Mr. McKee and Mr. McIntosh inspect Darling's bridge on the 3rd line of Smith and report at the November session.

That the matter re Emismore bridge known as Shannahan's bridge, be left in the hands of Mr. Cohen, the Warden and Mr. Crough.

That the Warden, Mr. Cohen and Mr. Shaw inspect the North Squaw River bridge, Harvey, and report at the November session.

That the sum of $5 be paid W. J. McIlmoyle re account of Buckhorn Bridge.

That Gordon Reynolds be appointed caretaker of Dane's bridge at a salary of $6 per annum.

That the Committee re Dane's and Booth's bridges inspect Purdy's Bridge, Chandos.

That the Committee, re Wismore bridge, be empowered to change the site of the bridge, if such removal does not increase the cost to the County.

That no action be taken re the Auto Association's request, until further information is received.

S. J. Keyes had written asking that the Council join with other bodies for the purpose of putting the Port Hope - Peterborough - Lakefield road in better condition.

Little Bob Bridge.

That the claim re Little Bob bridge be paid.

This claim was received in a letter from J. R. McNeillie, clerk of Victoria County, who reported as follows:

Owing to the delay in the payment of the promised grant of $2,500.00 from the Dominion Government, on account of Little Bob bridge, it is deemed inadvisable to carry the amount forward as an asset. Your committee recommend therefore that this County's share of the Unsettled grant of $1,875.00 be added to the deficit which appeared on Jan. 1st, 1915, less that Peterborough County be asked to pay their share of the deficient grant, $625.00, with interest, on the definite understanding that when the sum of $2500.00 is received from the Dominion Government the amount paid by the County of Peterborough will be refunded.

The above report was adopted by Victoria County. Mr. McNellie further added in his letter to Peterborough:

County Council.—"You were so good as to remit me the amount of interest on your share up to Nov. 25, 1913. The amount now payable will be as follows:

One-quarter of $2,500	$625.00
	$673.25

That the provision adopting the recommendation of the Chairman re McNichol's Bridge, be rescinded, and that this Council pay 50 per cent. of the total cost up to $800.00.

That the Township of Belmont be granted $50.00, to be expended on the Trent River Road, on condition the Township expend a like sum on this road.

That the sum of $50.00 be granted to Harvey to be expended on the road from Gannon's Bridge to Buckhorn, on condition that the Township expend a like sum on this road.

That the sum of $50.00 be expended on the Boundary between Galway and Harvey.

That the Committee on Booth's and Dane's bridge inspect Coone's bridge, Burleigh; Chas. Cohen, chairman.

A Boost for Clark.

The Council recognized the hospitality of County Clerk Ed. M. Elliott by placing on record their appreciation and incidentally recognizing his efficiency. Mr. Elliott was host at a dinner in the White House on Wednesday.

Mr. J. H. Burnham and Mr. Killaly, Superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal, appeared before the Council in regard to Gannon's bridge. Mr. Burnham advocated that the Council present a resolution requesting the Government to make an approach on the Emismore side of the swing, thereby making it satisfactory as it is one of the reefs of the Government swing bridge.

Warden Kindred and Councillors Anderson, Walsh and Cohen were appointed to a committee to visit the bridge. The Committee went to Gannon's this afternoon.

Paint the Court House.

In session this morning the Council decided to do considerable painting and necessary repairs to the County Buildings. It was left to the Chairman to decide on the work.

Personnel of Council.

Police Magistrate Dumble Issues Warning To The City

Complains That the City is Fond of Quarrelling With Him—Trouble Originated With a Load of Ashes That Was Dumped in a Ditch on Edinburgh Street. Timely Notice.

Police Magistrate Dumble has been given until to-morrow to remove a load of ashes which if is claimed, was dumped in a ditch on Edinburgh street. The time limit which was fixed by the Board of works on Wednesday evening, was approved by the Council last evening. The following letter, which was received from Mr. Dumble, explains itself:

"In reply to your letter of the 29th of May, complaining that I put a load of ashes in a ditch on the south side of Edinburg street near Donegal street, I respectfully draw your attention to the fact that when the new channel was made for the Dowale street creek, the corporation closed that ditch which was formerly made by the Council to lead that creek around the three sides of the block by filling up the mouth on the east side, but did not fill up that ditch on the west side of the new channel, and as a consequence in the flood time, the water of the creek will be diverted by the ditch complained of westward and will flood over the garden owned by my son on lot 19, west of George street, and will probably sweep out the soil to the great injury of my son's property. I would ask that the western mouth be completely closed up in order to prevent injury, and to cause the water to go directly down through the new channel. I put those ashes there with a view of helping to block the mouth, and I would ask you to supplement it by completely filling in that ditch west of the new channel. I draw your attention to it now that there may be no trouble in the future. I would remind you that the garden of the late "Daddy" Burns at the corner of McDonnel and Reid streets was swept out by the flood in that creek, and the corporation drew back earth and filled up Mr. Burn's garden. It is easier to avoid trouble than to make it good afterwards. If by reason of that ditch not being filled up at the mouth, damages ensue, the owner will look to the town for compensation, and I now give you timely notice. You are fond of quarrelling with me about a load of ashes when you allow the proprietors of the Catholic Orphanage to occupy a part of Rubidge street by buildings, and you deliberately permit them to throw all their ashes on that street on the side of the hill facing McDonnel street, an offence to everybody of which I have complained to your Health Inspector, but no action has been taken to abate the nuisance."

LOCAL PEOPLE IN CAMPBELLFORD

Attended the Peterborough Baptist Association Meeting

The Peterborough Baptist Association met in Campbellford on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday o this week. Those present from Peterborough were Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Webb, Dr. and Mrs. Scott, also Miss Florence Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wearing, Rev. Dougall and Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Miss Lillian Eastwood and Miss Emma Aldridge.

On Tuesday evening, Rev. Mr. Webb preached the Association sermon. His text was "Christ and His Temple." Mr. T. F. Matthews gave an illustrated lecture on Wednesday evening and the church was crowded as it has not been for years. On Thursday evening Rev. Dougall Brown dealt with the "relation of the war to the pulpit", and Mr. Wearing with the "relation of the war to the pew." Miss Aldridge read a paper on "Mission circles." Miss Scott a paper on Mission Band work, and Mrs. J. R. Webb contributed one on "missionary publications."

GERMAN INTERESTS NO LONGER CONNECTED WITH ST. LAWRENCE SUGAR REFINERIES, LIMITED

For some time past a strong feeling has manifested itself in the community directed against persons of either German name or birth. As a consequence, the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries, Limited, has been adversely criticised because it numbered among its shareholders certain persons of German name or origin. The old St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Company, which was organized over forty years ago, included many Germans among its shareholders, several of whom resided in Germany. When the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries, Limited, acquired the assets of the old Company, nearly all of the former German shareholders disappeared.

With the retirement of Mr. A. Baumgarten and Mr. O. W. Donner, as announced last week, the last German of either name or origin has ceased to hold any interest as a shareholder and at the present time there is not one single dollar of German money invested in the Company, on the contrary, the entire Capital is now held by investors of Canadian or British origin.

The present officers and directors of the Company have taken every step necessary to place the Company beyond criticism with respect to the interests connected with it either financially or otherwise and, while malicious reports may be circulated as to the continuance of German interests in the Company, the directors are able to give an unqualified denial to any such statements. If these reports are made, it must be considered that they are made with the object of damaging the Company's business and injuring its name and reputation. The Company is therefore prepared to take such legal steps as are necessary to protect itself against the further circulation of any such reports.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF ST. JEROME'S COLLEGE, BERLIN

The celebration of the golden jubilee of St. Jerome's College at Berlin, on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, was one of the most important semi-public events of the year. The College is one of the leading Catholic educational institutions in Ontario, and in the fifty years of its existence has become known far and wide throughout Canada and the United States.

The festivities in connection with the celebration gained particular prominence through the presence of the Papal Delegate, Mgr. P. F. Stagni, from Ottawa, together with the Archbishops and Bishops from Ontario, and hundreds of priests, as well as very many of the Alumni of the College, some of them occupying the highest civil and professional position.

His Excellency the Papal Delegate reached Berlin on Tuesday noon, and in the evening was welcomed to the city by His Worship Mayor Hett. Later on a magnificent display of fireworks was given from the roof of the main college building. On Wednesday the celebration was continued by the solemnization of a Pontificial High Mass in St. Mary's Church, at which Mgr. Kidd of St. Augustine's Seminary in Toronto preached an eloquent sermon. A jubilee banquet in the college for the many guests and the Alumni, brought the festivities to a close. Over 300 participated in the dinner and toasts were given for the Pope, the King and the Alumni and Alma Mater.

A University of Pennsylvania explorer claims to have found much evidence that Christian Moors existed in South America, just north of what now is Brazil.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Mayor has been invited to send delegates to a special executive conference of the Union of Canadian Municipalities to be held at Niagara Falls on July 30th and 31st.

A Good Impression.

Visiting delegates of the W.O.W., Women's Council and members of the district gun clubs all of whom were largely represented at the Empress Hotel last evening, would have received an excellent impression of the size of the local police force had they ventured out on the corner of George and Charlotte streets about ten-thirty, where six members of the force were congregated. Four were in uniform and two in plain clothes.

Money for Sidewalks.

The Council passed a by-law at last night's meeting to provide for borrowing $14,235.80 upon debentures to pay for the construction of sidewalks throughout the city.

Will Remain As It Is.

Concession will not be re-named Armour Road, as was formerly proposed. A petition containing the names of forty persons, objecting to the change has been fyled away in the archives of the City Hall. It was considered sufficient justification for abandoning the proposal.

Will Construct Sidewalks.

The Council has signified its intention of constructing cement sidewalks on Aylmer street, west side, from a point 33 feet north of Edinburgh street to a point 87 feet north of Edinburgh street, and on Park street, east side, from King street to a point 36 feet south of King street.

Letter of Appreciation.

The Council is in receipt of a communication from the Peterborough Medical Society expressing thanks for the generous donation of $250 to help defray expenses of entertaining the Ontario Medical Association and Medical Officers of Health. A letter of appreciation has also been received from Dr. F. A. Clarkson, of Toronto, Secretary of the Ontario Medical Association, for the hospitality extended by the city towards the visiting delegates.

ed price so that the two contracts of fifteen thousand square yards each, practically represented one contract of thirty thousand square yards.

Both Ald. Duffus and Ald. Langford insisted on discussing concrete paving. The latter contended that it was cheaper, easier to repair and among other things would give more work to local labour. It was finally decided to pave three blocks on George street from McDonnell street to Edinburgh street with concrete and award the contract to John Carroll, 507 Bolivar street as his tender was the lowest for that class of work, namely, $1.47 a square yard. In event of him not accepting the limited amount offered the work will be undertaken by the engineering department of the city.

Price For Asphalt.

Ald. Dobbin was of the opinion that the prices quoted were reasonable. Both companies tendered the same, namely, one dollar and ninety four cents a square yard for asphaltic concrete with the usual extras for curb and gutter work.

Ald. Green as chairman of the Board of Works reviewed the situation commencing at the first of the year or when paving was first discussed by this year's Council. The contracts that have been let to the two companies, provide for the sale of five per cent. city debentures, the companies agreeing to finance the work until such time as the debentures are ready. Ald. Green reiterated a previous contention, namely, that it was better to provide work for the unemployed of the city in preference to charity. He had the assurance of the paving companies that they would not employ any more than fifteen men each who were non-residents. The remainder would be made up of local labour. The fifteen men referred to were indispensable so far as street paving was concerned and could not be duplicated locally.

A Minimum Wage.

Ald. McIntyre laid considerable emphasis on the local labour question. He expressed some doubt as to the number of non-residents that would eventually find employment on the work. He attempted to have a resolution passed demanding that the companies agree in their contracts with the city not to employ less than eighty per cent. local labour. The resolution was voted under. A second resolution to have a minimum wage clause of twenty-five cents an hour inserted in the contracts failed to get a seconder. The Council was of the opinion that it would be unwise to tamper with the contracts after the tenders were in. It was a case of asking the companies tendering to incur an expenditure which was not provided for in the tender.

The Division.

At Ald. Stratton's request the yeas and nays was taken in connection with the vote on the Board of Works report containing clause seven as revised. Following was the result:

Yeas — Saunders, Edgar, Dobbin, Green, Evans, Mayor Buller—6.

Nays— Stratton, Duffus, Langford, McIntyre, Weir—5.

The introduction of the by-laws confirming the vote taken on clause seven of the report was the signal for a combined oratorical assault. Three Aldermen rose to speak at once. Two of them retired in favour of Ald. Langford who candidly admitted that he was "allied with the idea" of concrete paving and that he would like to see a quantity laid this year. When the storm subsided it was found that both by-laws awarding the contracts of fifteen thousand square yards each to the Warren Paving Company and the Standard Paving Company respectively, had carried.

BIG DAY FOR THE LOCAL GUN CLUB YESTERDAY

Yesterday was a big day for the Gun Club, the annual tournament of the Trent Valley Trap-shooters' Association being held here. The following clubs were represented: Belleville, Cobourg, Stirling and Peterborough. The weather being very favourable, a most enjoyable afternoon was spent by all attending. A large tent was erected on the grounds, and chairs placed for the comfort of visitors, which included several ladies. Belleville making the first highest scores, were the winners of the challenge flag, Peterborough being second, Cobourg third, and Stirling fourth. The silver spoon, presented by the Du Pont Powder Co. for the highest individual score, was won by Mr. H. Day, of Belleville. The watch fob, presented by the Dominion Cartridge Co. for the second highest score, was tied for by Mr. R. Stafford, of Belleville, and Mr. C. Mills, of Peterborough. In the shoot off Mr. Stafford won out by one bird. Two boxes of cigars were also presented by one of the Peterborough members for the two highest scores. The next league shoot is to be held at Stirling, about July 22nd. Following are the scores at 50 birds:

INTEREST IN TO-MORROW'S CITY LEAGUE BATTLES

In to-morrow's City League game at Riverside park the Empires and East City will meet in the first game and the Classics and Thistles in the second. Mr. A. Quinlan will umpire both battles. The Empires claim to have a surprise in store for the East City team in the first game. They have a strengthened team, and with Flaherty on the firing line will take some stopping. In the second game the Classics tied with East City for the leadership, will hook up with the Thistles. The last time the teams met the Thistles won 5 to 0, but the Classics promise something different to-morrow. Whoever wins the fans should see two good games.

Well Known German Musical Director Renounces Allegiance to the Kaiser

NEW YORK, June 18. —Indignation over the sinking of the Lusitania and the use of chlorine gas by the Germans has caused Mr. Ernest Knoch, the celebrated musical director and Wagnerian expert, now in this country, to renounce his allegiance to Kaiser Wilhelm and become an unhyphenated American citizen. He took out his first papers yesterday.

"I am loyal to Wagner and to German music, but in all else I am a Simon Pure American from this time on. There is no string to my new allegiance and no mental reservation in favour of the Kaiser." Mr. Knoch's friends quote him as saying when he took out his citizenship papers.

The Century Opera Company brought Herr Knoch to this country last fall as Wagnerian conductor. He is at present wielding the baton for the "Gilbert and Sullivan Revue," an organization of sixty singers, which is to present at the Palace Theatre next week a composite offering containing numbers from several of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

Herr Knoch received his musical education in Karlsruhe, where he was a pupil and protege of the celebrated Herr Felix Motti, by whom he was introduced, as soon as his studies were completed, to Frau Cosima Wagner and Herr Siegfried Wagner. He assister for several years in the Bayreuth Wagnerian productions under Dr. Hans Richter, Herr Michael Balling and other noted German conductors, after which he was successively conductor in the opera houses of Strassburg and Cologne. Later he toured the world as director of the Quinlan Grand Opera Company.

His declaration of intended American citizenship will enable Mr. Knoch to accompany the Gilbert and Sullivan production into Canada without danger of molestation by the British authorities.

LOVE FOR A WOMAN FINALLY TRAPS A BANK DEFAULTER

WINFIELD, Kan., June 17.—W. H. Hume, the missing Arkansas City bank clerk, who, it is charged, carried away $15,000 of the bank's money, has been located and arrested at Jacksonville, Fla., according to news received by Sheriff Hoover. The Sheriff and Ross Hayden, of Arkansas City, cashier of the looted Traders' State Bank, have left to bring Hume back to Winfield, where he will be prosecuted for grand larceny.

Hume, book-keeper and director of the Traders' State Bank at Arkansas City, left suddenly on the night of March 13. On the morning of the 15th, Monday, officers of the bank learned that Hume had taken with him $9,000 of the bank's money and $5,000 which, it is alleged, will be a loss to the Wells-Fargo Company. Hume ordered the cash from the bank's correspondent at Wichita by telephone, timing it to arrive on Saturday evening, at which time he is said to have receipted for it and skipped. The bank officials allege Hume had no authority to order the money or a receipt for it. Wells-Fargo detectives have been after Hume as well as Burns's men since his disappearance.

His whereabouts was learned through the agency of a woman in Denver, for whom he left a wife and family. By intercepting letters which passed between them the detectives were able to keep close to the whereabouts of Hume, and the woman's telephone conversation with him led to Hume's final capture.

Hume is fifty-five and has a family of grown sons and daughters. He has resided in this county for twenty-five years. At the time of Hume's arrest he had in his possession a little over $9,000. The officers believe that he had hidden the rest of the money he took from the bank, and this cash may never be found.

Mrs. Florence Gibson was a stenographer, trained nurse and later the wife of Vernon C. Gibson, an employee of the Santa Fe in Arkansas City. She is more than twenty years younger than Hume, whose sons were in college and daughters in the high school.

Detectives learned Hume and Mrs. Gibson were in Wichita two days after his disappearance from Arkansas City. Mrs. Gibson was trailed to Stillwater, Okla., then back to Wichita and then to Denver.

Then came Hume's letter to her, detailing his plans to escape to South America. He asked her to join him in Jacksonville. But Mrs. Gibson lacked funds and she wrote to him. Hume called her on the long distance telephone. Detectives then called him by 'phone, impersonating Mrs. Gibson. His arrest by the Jacksonville police followed.

APPLICATION IS DENIED

NEW YORK, June 18. — Charles Becker's application for re-argument of case was denied to-day. The condemned man, who is awaiting sentence of death for the murder of Rosenthal, is resigned to his fate. He holds out no hope for clemency.

30,000,000 Cartridges Used Daily and 170,000 Shells

PARIS, Thursday, June 18. — The French press is now clamouring for more cannon and more ammunition with as much insistence as the English. They take as their text General Castelnau's declaration: "War must be waged not by the shock of men, but by the shock of ammunition."

A year ago the ammunition supplies for the three-inch field guns were only 1,200 shells per gun, with a reserve of 280. It had been increased from 700 per gun in 1909, after General Langlois had declared in the Senate that the supply then in hand would be just sufficient for a day and a half of battle. He asked for 3,000 shells per gun. Only 1,400 were granted, provision being made for the manufacture of 13,500 shells a day in the government arsenals.

The first month of war showed that all estimates as to needed ammunition were too low. French arsenals and private factories are now said to be producing 170,000 shells a day. Notwithstanding the continued demands of the press for more ammunition, this is supposed to be sufficient for current needs, besides creating a big reserve stock, careful estimates putting at from 100,000 to 150,000 the number of shells now being used each day.

The prodigality of the French army in shells has already been set forth in despatches. The intensity of the German fire is indicated by the actual count of 20,000 shells fired in an hour and a half upon a French position 350 yards in length and 600 yards in depth in the Bois d'Ailly.

It is estimated that more than 200,000 shells were used by them in the actions between April 5 and April 13 in the Forest of Apremont, while the French over a limited front near Souain in Champagne fired 100,000 shells of large calibre. The Germans are at present less prodigal with ammunition on the western front, while their artillery is making its great effort against the Russians around Permysl.

The consumption of small arms ammunition, though there have been no great pitched battles since the battle of the Yser, is also a great problem, due in part to the greatly extended use of machine guns. Fifty of these weapons, firing constantly at the rate of 300 cartridges a minute, use a million an hour. The number of cartridges used on both fronts, from the Carpathians to the North Sea, has been estimated at 30,000,000 a day. The equipment of the French army alone, not providing for the reserve ammunition, requires 300,000,000.

June Month of Battles, May Be Specially Distinguished This Year

NEW YORK, June 18.— The battle of Bunker Hill was fought 140 years ago yesterday, one of many memorable battles fought in the month of June.

Waterloo, the declaration of war between Great Britain and the United States in 1812, the Shannon-Chespeake fight in that war, the battle of Naseby, the storming of the Mamelon redoubts by the French in the Crimean struggle, Marengo, Friedland, Saab, Kolin, Plassey, the battle of Monmouth and the fight at Fort Moultrie all were in June.

Many of the most famous struggles of the civil war took place in this month. The Kearsarge sank the Alabama on June 19, 1864; Memphis fell on June 8, 1862; the Seven Days before Richmond began on June 26, 1862; the battle of Cold Harbour was fought from June 1 to 3, 1864; Winchester was fought from June 13-15th, 1863; Lynchburg, on June 17-18, 1864; Mechanicsville, on June 26, 1862; Gaines' Mill, on the following day, and the siege of Petersburg lasted from June 15 to 30.

The massacre of Custer and his men by the Indians on the Little Big Horn, the greatest disaster that has befallen United States cavalry in decades, also took place in June—June 25, 1876, a date that always will be kept as a day of mourning by the Seventh Cavalry.

KNIFE AWAKENS MAN IN TRANCE FOR TWO YEARS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 17. — Kenosha's "man of mystery," John S. Kepnedy, "died" on the operating table in a Kenosha hospital and from that same table a few minutes later arose Frank Van Wie from a "sleep" lasting almost two years.

Wednesday morning, May 8, 1913, Van Wie fell from a ladder while working on a building at No. 1078 Tenth Street. He sustained a fractured rib.

After that his mind was a blank; since then he was married and has a child; since then he has twice fallen and sustained injuries; has been beaten into unconsciousness by Chicago thugs, and has lived in Milwaukee, Chicago, Janesville, Medford and for the last week as "John S. Kennedy" in Kenosha.

The operation was comparatively simple once Dr. J. W. Klem had fully convinced himself what the trouble was. An examination showed that the victim of aphasia was suffering from a dislocation of the spinal column, several vertebrae near the base of the skull being out of alignment. This caused a pressure on the spinal column, and the result was Van Wie's complete loss of memory.

Doesn't Know Date.

"That was a tough fall I had this morning, "Doc." he said cheerfully. "Wonder I didn't break my neck. You see a cleat broke and the roof was slippery, and down I came."

"What date is to-day?" asked the surgeon.

Why May 7, or is it 8?"

"What year?"

"Why, 1913. What's the matter with you?"

"Nothing, only you're almost two years behind. This is the year 1915, Kennedy."

"Who are you calling Kennedy? My name's Van Wie—Frank Van Wie!" expostulated the man.

"It ought to be Van Winkle, because you've been doing the same thing as that old gentleman. Did you ever hear of John S. Kennedy?"

"No, I can't recall him."

"Well, ever since you fell and hurt yourself you've been going around the country as John S. Kennedy. Don't you recall any of his movements?"

"I never heard of Kennedy, and I don't remember anything since I fell off the roof this morning. I'm working for the Milwukee Roofing Company. I'm to be married May 24 to the prettiest little girl in Milwaukee —Clara Heine."

Engaged to Another Girl.

"I tell you your wedding day is past," said the surgeon, who, finally convinced the man of his lapse.

Van Wie said that he was to have married Miss Clara Heine. He had bought the license and the marriage was set for May 24, 1913.

"That's going to be me," said Van Wie. "Does she think I am dead? What of my family?"

On arrival in Milwaukee Dr. Klem told Van Wie he would take him to the home of his father-in-law. Van Wie protested that he was not married.

His wife's parents almost collapsed when he opened the door and entered the house. Van Wie will stay with them until he is fully recovered. Van Wie's wife and his two-year-old son, Francis, are living in Medford, where Van Wie's mother has a farm.

The Case Went to the Jury This Afternoon

Late this afternoon the case of Mahood versus Hayes, in which Frederick T. Mahood is suing John Hayes for $220.04, said to be the balance due for concrete work, went to the jury. The sum of $25 is also claimed for costs.

Many witnesses were heard for the defendant, for whom Mr. D. O'Connel is appearing. Mr. Ruddy is appearing for plaintiff. The case has occupied the attention of the court since Wednesday morning.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Saturday morning, at 8.45 sharp, the first war canoe trip over the lift lock will be held. The boys are requested to meet sharp on time, as small boats are only allowed over the lock at that time. The trip Saturday will be as far as Nassau. Bring your lunch and fishing pole.

Thirty boys have handed in their names for the Boys' Camp, which will beeld June 29th to July 10th. The list will be kept open for a few days longer to allow any boy who wishes to go to register.

Early Spelling Reforms.

Thomas Gatacre, rector of Rotherhithe from 1611 to 1654, seems to have been the earliest pioneer of spelling reform. This divine, who was a prominent figure in Puritan circles, started his career as a reformer by changing to Gataker "to prevent misealling." Gatacre published theological treatises abounding in repulsive looking words like "question" (for he regarded the "u" after "q" as superfluous) and other "un spellings," such as "better," "reason," "deal" and "tru."—London Chronicle.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT BELL.

At the family residence, Lot 7, Concession 4, of the Township of Smith, Emma Kimble, wife of Mr. Robert Bell, passed away, at the age of 57.44 years.

Mrs. Bell was born in Buckingham, England, but has been a resident of this country for a great number of years. She was married 18 years ago, and has resided in Smith Township since her marriage. She has been ailing for a period of six or seven years, but her death at an early hour this morning was very unexpected.

Mrs. Bell was a faithful member of Gilmour Memorial Church, and was highly respected by all those with whom she came in contact.

A sorrowing husband and one son, Raymond, survive. Her parents and one brother, residing at Bobcaygeon, and two brothers, residing on the Galway Road, also survive.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon, June 1, at 2.30 o'clock. Service will be conducted at the house by Rev. Mr. McLaren at 2 p.m. Interment in Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. J. T. CULVERWELL.

Mrs. J. T. Culverwell died yesterday morning at the age of 82, after a brief illness, at the residence of her son-in-law, G. A. Brayley, 92 Binscarth Road, Toronto. Mrs. Culverwell had been a resident of Toronto for over forty years. She was born in Yeovil, Somerset, England, and is survived by five daughters. Her only son, J. A. Culverwell, C.E., who was well known in Peterborough and district, died two months ago, and the grief of this bereavement is partly responsible for her death.

MRS. C. J. GAINEY.

A very sad death occurred this morning, when Mary L. McMann, wife of Mr. C. J. Gainey, the George Street barber and tobacconist, passed away, leaving to survive five children, the youngest of which is but two weeks old. She has been ill but two weeks, and passed away at the family residence, 464 Driscoll Terrace.

The late Mrs. Gainey was born in Peterborough, and was 34 years of age. Her mother, Mrs. David McMann, resides on Mark Street, East City.

Besides her mother, husband and children, three sisters and four brothers survive. The names of the children are: Margaret, Joseph, Agnes, Catherine and George; the sisters are: Mrs. Lorne Brooks, Miss Agnes McMann and Miss Margaret McMann; and the brothers, Messrs. Mathew McMann, East City, John of Douro, William and Frank, of East City.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

Who Was the Lady who Embraced The Policeman?

Who was the dame who encircled the brawny "bobby's" slender waist the other evening on Charlotte St.?

Passing quietly, in the steady plod of his beat, "Robert" was suddenly aroused to a sense of himself by an arm stealing around his waist, quickly withdrawn, and the exclamation, "Oh, it's not the one after all!" The pedestrians following smiled at the policeman's embarrassment.

ST. VITUS DANCE IN YOUNG CHILDREN

Can Only Be Cured by Enriching the Blood and Toning Up the Blood

One of the commonest forms of nervous trouble that afflicts young children is St. Vitus dance. This is because of the great demand made on the body by growth and development, together with the added strain caused by study. It is when these demands become so great that they impoverish the blood, and the nerves fail to receive their full supply of nourishment that St. Vitus dance develops. The remarkable success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in curing St. Vitus dance should lead parents to give this great blood-building medicine to their children at the first signs of the approach of the trouble. Pallor, listlessness, inattention, restlessness and irritability are all symptoms which early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demand upon them. Here is proof of the great value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. Mrs. Alfred Sochner, R.R. No. 5, Dunnville, Ont., says: "Our ten-year-old daughter, Violet, suffered very severely from St. Vitus dance. The trouble came on so gradually that we were not alarmed until it affected her legs and arms, which would twitch and jerk to such an extent that she could scarcely walk and could not hold anything in her hands steadily. She suffered for about five months before we began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but she had not taken these long before we found that they were the right medicine, and after she had taken nine boxes she had fully recovered her former health and strength. I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every parent having a child suffering from St. Vitus dance or any form of nervousness."

In troubles of this kind no other medicine has met with such success as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get these Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FORTRESS IS SILENCED

Austrian Fortress of Malborget Has Been Badly Damaged—Great Holes Torn in Outer Works.

DEFENCES IN RUINS

ROME, June 19. —The Italian artillery has silenced the Austrian fortress of Marlborget dominating important passes and peaks in the Carnic Alps.

Gen. Caderna reported to the War Office to-day that Italian shells tore great holes in the outer works of Malborget and sent part of the stone defences tumbling in ruins. The bombardment continued for several days, the explosion of ammunition magazines inside the fortress adding to the work of destruction.

Complete reports to the War Office to-day showed that the Austrian bombardment of Rano and other Italian seaports yesterday morning resulted in practically no damage.

LT. ACKERMAN IS REPORTED WOUNDED

Mr. B. F. Ackerman received word this morning from the Adjutant-General's Department, Ottawa, to the effect that his son, Lieut. C. H. Ackerman of the Second Battalion, First Canadian contingent, had been admitted to number two Red Cross Hospital at Rouen, France, on June 17, dangerously wounded. Lieut. Ackerman was one of the first to volunteer for active service in Peterborough last August when the war broke out. He was one of the most popular officers of the local regiment, and his many friends in this city will hope that he makes satisfactory progress towards recovery.

FRENCH ARMY IN ALSACE IS NEARING THE RHINE RIVER—BRITISH SUCCESSES

THIS MORNING'S WAR DESPATCHES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, June 19.—The British have won more trenches near La Bassee. The French army in Alsace is nearing Rhine River.

PETROGRAD, June 19.—The Russians have defeated the Austrians in Bukowina, but admit a further retreat towards Lemberg.

PARIS, June 19.—Roumania has definitely entered into negotiations with the Allies.

LONDON, June 18.—Two Zeppelins were sighted off the coast of Scotland this evening. They were driven off by British aviators.

PARIS, June 18.—Great crowds gathered in the streets to-night waiting for news of to-day's fighting, but the War Office merely said: "Situation satisfactory."

LONDON, June 18.—The War Office denies the German statement that a large number of British were annihilated at La Bassee.

LONDON, June 18.—On order-in-council to-day confers unlimited powers on Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions.

COPENHAGEN, June 18.—Heavy detachments of Russian troops are being withdrawn from Odessa as reinforcements for the battle near Lemberg. Grand Duke Nicholas says Lemberg will be defended at all costs.

LONDON, June 18.—There was a well established rumour in London, Petrograd and Paris to-day, that Bulgaria had reached an agreement with Russia to enter the war.

AMSTERDAM, June 18.—Berlin advices say prominent Socialists have addressed a public meeting in Berlin demanding a speedy termination to the war, BERNE, June 18.—Newspapers here, say authoritative advices, that four hundred thousand Germans have been killed in action to date.

KING VICTOR ON EVERY FRONT

UDINE, June 19—The Italian soldier seems imbued with the belief that King Victor Emmanuel is able each day to be on every battle front and that he always is where peril seems the greatest or where encouragement and succor is most needed.

As a matter of fact the monarch is a most energetic personage. In his gray automobile he dashes the flat roads of Friuli, appears on horseback in the hills near Gorizia, climbs on mule back the Carnic passes and ascends on foot, aided by an alpenstock, the heights of the peaks overlooking Rovereto.

Both the King and his first aid, General Ugo Brusati is famous for having accomplished the retirement of his forces after the battle of Addis Abeba, Abyssinia, when as a colonel he led his men along the crests of the Abyssinian mountains and succeeded in saving them from envelopment by the Abesinian tribesmen.

King Victor Emmanuel crossed the Isonzo south of Monte Nero on a pontoon bridge on Tuesday evening. After sunset an officer of the General Staff reported to the King that an attack by Austrians was expected during the night and that it would be unsafe for him to remain on the left bank of the river.

"If this point is dangerous for my soldiers, it is my place," the King is reported promptly to have replied to the officer, and he remained there the entire night, passing from position to position, encouraging his troops.

The soldiers admire King Victor Emmanuel for his modesty and simplicity and lack of affection. When the army retires to its tents at night the King studies the schemes of battle for the following day, or sends his daily report to his family. He always speaks of his "wife and children," never the "Queen" or "the Prince and Princesses."

To Crown Prince Humbert, who in one of his letters asked the King when he would return home to his 'boy," King Emanuel replied that he could not leave while thousands of his "boys" were risking their lives.

SUBMARINE SAW ANOTHER SHIP

As a Result the One is First Attacked Was Saved.

MILFORD HAVEN, June 19.—With a big list to port and all her pumps working at full pressure, the steamship Turnwell steamed into port after having surrendered to a German submarine, the crew of which had exploded bombs in her hold.

The escape of the vessel was due to the fact that the submarine, eager to sink another steamship, did not remain long enough by the Turnwell to make sure of the effectiveness of the bombs.

The Turnwell, which is a vessel of 4,264 tons, left Liverpool on June 15 for New York. She was overhauled by the submarine thirty miles off the Pembrokeshire coast on Wednesday morning and her crew ordered to take to their boats.

The Germans went aboard the Turnwell, exploded the bombs and then hurriedly put off from her, having sighted the British coasting steamship Trafford, a vessel of 234 tons, which they pursued and sank. The Turnwell's crew then returned to their vessel and plugged the holes made by the bombs as best they could, started the pumps and made all possible speed for the nearest port. On the way the Turnwell picked up the crew of the Trafford.

Some of the men of the Turnwell said although the Germans were in a great hurry they tarried long enough on board the vessel to ransack the cabins and take away everything valuable.

Antipon in Canada

Spreading the Fame of the Great British Specific for Rapid Fat-Reduction

The burden of obesity is so distressing and so unprepossessing, and is generally so difficult to get rid of with any degree of permanence, that the introduction to Canada of the famous British Specific Antipon will be welcome in many quarters. The preparation is not unknown here already, but the obstacles in the way of its supply to the general public were necessarily great. All difficulties are now removed.

Here the important discovery of Antipon the treatments usually employed for the reduction of weight included starvation dietary rules, sweating and purging, together with mineral drugging. All these things are weakening in the extreme, and, when obstinately persisted in, ruinous to the constitution. Antipon is diametrically opposed to such drastic methods.

To expel the superfluous fatty matter from the system is all very well, but the body must be amply nourished at the same time. Now, Antipon not only rapidly eliminates the excess of fat, but overcomes the unfortunate tendency to "run to fat." Ample wholesome food therefore becomes Antipon's strength-giving ally, and there is no need to dread then the extra nourishment taken will bring about a re-development of attractive fatty tissue.

Every dose of Antipon is a sure step in the direction of the recovery of beauty of form and vigorous supreme energy.

The decrease of weight is not a tedious process. Within twenty-four hours of the first dose there is a reduction varying, according to individual condition, between 8 oz. to 3 lbs. The scales will be the unerring recorder. The daily decrease is eminently satisfactory. When normal weight and symmetrical proportions are regained the treatment is no longer necessary.

Antipon contains only the most harmless vegetable substances in solution, the liquid being in appearance like a light red wine. It is palatable, refreshing and slightly tart, and never constitutes any unpleasant reminiscence" effects.

Antipon can be obtained at all drug stores, from stock or to order; or in case of any difficulty, a home cure will be forwarded direct from the Antipon Laboratories, Store Street, London, W.C., carriage paid, for Postal Note for 5 dols. 25c.

FAILED TO TAKE TRENCH

British Report Tells How Turks Made Gallant Attack in Gallipoli

TURKS FIGHT BRAVELY

LONDON, June 19.— British commanders do not fail to recognize the bravery of their Turkish foes on the Dardanelles as may be seen from the following official statement recording the repulse of the Turks in their attempt to recapture the trenches lost by them on Saturday, as made public here;

"These trenches were captured by us on the night of June 12. After a strong attack the Turkish positions were enfiladed by our machine guns from right to left. The Dublin Fusiliers attacked with the bayonet. When the trenches were occupied they were found to contain 200 dead Turks. Twelve prisoners also were taken. Our casualties were very slight."

According to reports from Athens news had been received there from Mudros, on the island of Lemnos, off the entrance to the Dardanelles, that a British submarine torpedoed and sunk three Turkish transports, loaded with troops, in the Dardanelles, above Niagara. The greater part of the troops and crews is said to have been drowned.

A despatch from Constantinople to Amsterdam, reported here, says that according to official announcement a Turkish aviator reports having observed a British warship of the Agamemnon type aground in Kefala Bay on the island of Imbros. The deck of the vessel was said to have been almost completely submerged. The British government, however, recently denied a rumour that the Agamemnon had been sunk.

MR. A. S. PIERS IS APPOINTED

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

MONTREAL, Q., June 18.—A circular under the signature of Mr. George Bury, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific railway announces the appointment of Mr. Arthur S. Piers as manager of real estate department, with office at Montreal. In charge of the company's real estate and buildings not used exclusively for railway purposes or administered by the general executive assistant at Vancouver, and the department of natural resources. Mr. Piers joined the Canadian Pacific as office boy in the freight traffic manager's office on Jan. 1, 1903, and was transferred to the freight department in 1904. Later he became secretary to Mr. David McNicholl, then vice-president, and in May, 1910 he was made assistant in the office of the right of way and lease agent, in August of the same year Mr. Piers was appointed assistant to the real estate agent, and he now assumes full charge.

Real Wonder-Worker For Wrinkled Faces

Those who have tried all sorts of so-called "wrinkle-removers" in a vain effort to lose those unwelcome traces of age, illness or worry, can scarcely find words to express their delight with the wonderful saxolite formula, once they have given it a trial. The success of this method is due not alone to its marvellous effectiveness—upon the deepest lines and crowsfeet, as well as upon the very fine ones—but also to its surprisingly quick action and its entire harmlessness. Its simplicity and its inexpensiveness are other commendable features, for one needs only dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, and bathe the face in this solution. At once a remarkable transformation is beheld.

It is not only the effect on wrinkles and creases that is so noticeable, but facial contour is remarkably improved and the face looks much younger. One should be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite. The lotion, being so refreshing, is particularly grateful to tired faces them warm, depressing days.

MUNICH RUNNING OUT OF BEER

MUNICH, via London, April 19. — Munich, the greatest beer drinking centre in Germany, has been compelled sharply to curtail the consumption of beer owing to the expropriation by the military authorities of a large part of the product of the breweries. The amount of beer now available for public use is only one-third of the ordinary supply. Many of the famous beer gardens are now closing at seven o'clock in the evening owing to the shortage of beer. Some of these places are encouraging their customers to call for lemonade as a substitute for beer.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

"But all this time there was lurkin' back in the inside of me the bitterness of my youth which I never had honestly faced and fought and I never did whip this out until after that little gel had come. She brought everything back to me as fresh as when it was new, and durin' that ride after her father, I fought it, and I think — I think I've got it plumb whipped out.

"Now(she hasn't any real home to go to and her father's not likely to have another chance at bein' as good a father as he might have been; so the little inside voice has told me to be a father to her. This'll be my greatest joy-blossom for a time; but I know 'at some day this same little voice'll tell me it's time for her to leave me, and that's goin' to be mighty hard, boy, mighty hard."

"Have I been wastin' my time on you?" sez the old hermit, glarin' at me.

"What do you mean?" sez I.

"You act as though I'd been claimin' to be a fortune-teller?" sez he.

"Well," sez I, "don't that little voice tell you nothing' about other people?"

The old hermit swallowed a few times, smoothed out his face, and sez: "I used to have a hot temper when I was young."

"I reckon you could still put out a purty fair imitation if you was pestered sufficient," sez I; "but I'm interested in this voice thing and I want to hear oll of it I can before tryin' it out."

"It's nothin' but instinct," sez he, calm and friendly as ever. "When a coyote flushes up a rabbit and the rabbit acts on instinct and heads over the brow of a hill at a thirty-mile clip, what happens if she sees more coyotes on the other side? Does she say, 'Well, my mind is made up and I'm goin' right on.' Does she sit down and weep because instinct didn't warn her about these other coyotes? She does not, she gets another little hint and changes her course in mid air, goin' in the new direction with all her heart the same as she had in the old. If she gets away she has faith that actin' accordin' to instinct was a good thing, and all her offspring inherit this faith. If she don't get away, why, she makes the best fight there is in her first, and when she does die her body is ! ingry for rest and her soul is full of self-respect, and this combination makes death like a gentle mother with soothin' hands."

Thot old hermit was chockful of wisdom, and when he was minded to, he could frame it up in words that a bird-dog could understand but it wasn't easy to get him started, and if you missed the point, why he'd snap his fingers and look off beyond the dip of the horizon. It was plain to see that before he had learned to drive himself with a curb-bit, his humanity had been ready to bite and kick at highty short notice.

Kate Gets Friendly.

Baldy Hagus had been helpin' out the Mexican at Big Jeff's, and Mandy, his long-nosed daughter, was workin' steady at Mrs. Dan Cooper's. Shorty claimed that Red was buildin' up to Manday, and it was plain to all that he never missed a good excuse to ride in that direction. The very mornin' on which I had had this talk with old Josiah, Red had brought in word that Big Jeff had come back with his arm tied up, and all the boys wondered how and what had happened to him.

A few days after this just as I was ready to start out, Baldy drove up in his chariot, pulled up in front of me and stared at me reproachful. The' was allus somethin' so comical about Baldy that the hardest thing in the world was to take him serious, even though he was himself all the time takin' things he wasn't in nowise entitled to.

While he was starin' at me, I was wonderin' if he had formed the habit of actin' on what his instinct whispered to him, and if his instinct really knew, 'at other folks 'd forgive him easy for lyin' and stealin'.

"Could I have a few words in private with you?" sez he, as sober as the recordin' angel.

I was mounted and the' wasn't any one else in sight, so I shook my head. "Nope," sez I, "I haven't any time to spare, but if you can bring yourself to speak before my hoss, why fire away."

"Did you shoot me, last night?" sez he.

"Let me see," sez I, scratchin' my head. "Nope, I haven't shot any one for over a week."

"Did you order me shot, last night?"

I had picked up a small memorandum book belongin' to Isaac that mornin' and had forgot to give it to him. I now took it out of my pocket and turned over the leaves examinin' each one careful. "No," I sez, "I never have give orders to have you shot. What's the matter with you?"

"I was shot last night," sez Baldy. still regardin' me resentful, "right splang in the middle of my silver watch."

He held that implement out for me to look at and, sure enough, a deep crease showed along the northeast corner where a bullet had glanced, but the machine was clickin' away the same as usual. "What made you think that I'd want you shot?" sez I.

"Well," sez Baldy, as crafty as an old settin' hen, "sometimes you have a look in your eyes as though you was plannin' to get some one and a body never can be sure, that's all. When I got shot in the watch last night, I saw that my evil ways weren't bringin' me no luck, so I'm on my way to the meetin's they're holdin' down at Elliot, and I wanted to get your forgiveness first."

"Well," sez I, "forgiveness is a thing I don't care much for myself, so you can have it and I hope you catch regular religion, too, 'cause the way you've been carryin' on at this ranch wasn't doin' your family any credit."

He confessed to as many sins as I had time to listen to and then he drove on to the meetin's, while I fell to wonderin' whether Big Jeff would be most likely to tame down or get worse after bein' shot up a little.

I rode on and the next thing I came to was Isaac about half way over to the hermit's, and not able to go any farther on account of his mule havin' balked. This mule had a mouth as callous as his hands, but his pride was still tender, and every now and again he'd get his feelin's hurt at a jerk and refuse to proceed. At such times Isaac would argue, plead, threaten, and as a last resort use his umberella — after which he'd sit quiet on the seat of his chariot and wait for the mule to get homesick. I listened to him for ten or fifteen minutes and then I rode up beside him, and asked polite what he was waitin' for.

"Where were you headin' to?" sez I.

"I was goin' over to Mr. Cornell's," sez Isaac. "But now the more good with [illegible] when any doctor ever did, and he is also an interesting man."

"You mustn't forget, though, Isaac," sez I, "that bein' interested isn't his regular business, so don't rest too heavy on him just because he's took a little interest in you."

"I think I know how to conduct myself," sez Isaac, "and I do not intend to spoil this opportunity of getting my health back."

"Certainly not," sez I, "but you should do the same as if he was a regular doctor, have a certain day to call on him and then only stay a certain time."

"Really," sez he, "you talk as though I was a child. He is a man of some edication and no doubt finds me a pleasant change."

"Well, you'd be some sort of a change to most any one," sez I. "What do you intend to do with your health when you finally get enough of it to satisfy you?"

He had a healthy colour and appetite, and all he did the whole day long was to play around with his dog and the mule, so I couldn't see why my heart should bleed for him, and I just pointedly didn't want him to be a bother to the hermit or his guests.

"I am thinkin' about that, myself," sez he, "and I intend to consult with Mr. Cornell this very afternoon. This mule is enough to try the patience of a saint!"

Isaac had some sort of a superstition that if he drank direct out of a stream he'd get full o' young lizards, so he allus carried along a tin cup to dip the water up in. He had this tool fastened to a thong and hung it on the side of his chariot, where it made a fittin' jingle as he rattled along. My eye fell on it, now, and I sez, "If you actually want the mule to go, why, I can fix that for you by tyin' that can on his tail."

"That would be a cruel act" sez he.

"It is when tried on a dog," sez I, "but I can't see where an old veteran stage mule would have any call to get hysterical about a little thing like a tin cup hung on his tail. Still, it's nothin' to me; so if you don't want to try it, why, I'll be joggin' along."

"He doesn't deserve any pity, that's a fact," sez Isaac, after he'd thought things over for a minuee. "Are you sure it would 'celerate him?"

MRS. MABEN WAS MADE WELL
By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Wants Other Suffering Women To Know It.

Murfreesboro, Tenn. — "I have wanted to write to you for a long time to tell you what your wonderful remedies have done for me. I was a sufferer from female weakness and displacement and I would have such tired, worn out feelings, sick headaches and dizzy spells. Doctors did me no good so I tried the Lydia E. Pinkham Remedies — Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. I am now well and strong and can do all my own work. I owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and want other suffering women to know about it."—Mrs. H. E. MANN, 211 E. Spring, St., Murfreesboro, Tenn.
This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
Why Lose Hope.
No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.
If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Give it Fair Play

VISIONS OF SOLDIERS

Ghost Led Serbian Troops Against Turks—Unstrung Nerves the Cause

That soldiers suffer from torturing nightmares as a result of the nerve strain of being continually under fire is well known, but few people are aware that troops in the field often have astonishing visions. The late Lord Roberts on several occasions stated in his despatches during the Afghanistan campaign that seasoned soldiers would at times declare that they could distinguish hordes of natives approaching. It often happened that a dozen recruits would swear that they could discern an army in the distance, whereas they were merely victims of nerves.

Experienced soldiers on occasions have extraordinary visions during the heat of battle, which are astonishing inasmuch as they affect whole battalions and not solitary individuals. During the Balkan War the Serbian army on one occasion won a brilliant victory which the men swore was given to them by a ghost who led them into battle. The Serbian infantry were stationed on the foot of the Mount of Prilip, on which stood the castle of the Royal Prince Marko, a fourteenth-century warrior, who was a national Serbian hero. The troops had to attack a Turkish force who held the castle, but they were cautioned against storming the fortress until artillery had broken down the defence. Before the order to charge was given, however, the Serbians, shouting wildly, dashed forward, and after a desperate struggle completely routed the Turks. When reproached by their leader for disobeying orders, the victorious soldiers shouted in a body, "Kralyetvitch Marko commanded us forward. Did you not see him on his Sharatz?" the latter being the great soldier's horse, famous in legend. "It was clear," said the officer who related the story, "that the tradition of Kralyetvitch Marko was so deeply engraved on the hearts of those heroic men that in their vivid enthusiasm they had seen the incarnation of their hero."

General Sir Alfred Turner tells the following story: Whilst at a séance one evening a man the famous soldier knew well suddenly rose from the table, saying, "I cannot stand more of this," and he left the room. Sir Alfred afterwards discovered that the man had seen a figure in khaki with a wound under his jaw standing beside him. The vision was that of a soldier who had been killed by his side in South Africa.

Napoleon, when languishing on Elba, is said to have been tortured by visions of his army retreating from the ruins of Moscow; whilst Dr. Brydon, the sole survivor of the Kabul massacre, was never wholly free from distressing nightmares, in which the frightful scenes he had witnessed were conjured up in his mind. There have been cases in which soldiers have been convinced that the ghost of a dead commander haunts their regiment. In the 'sixties a past leader of the London Rifle Brigade was said to haunt his old corps in spirit form.

The Norwegian Government has established at Stavanger a domestic science school to afford a complete course in housekeeping to young girls.

WILL WE EVER WALK ON AIR?

Train Of Thought Inspired By a Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. D. McLEAN

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 28th, 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. I tried several medicines, but got no results and my Headaches became more severe. One day I saw your sign which read 'Fruit-a-tives' make you feel like walking on air. This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. Now I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I cannot say too much for 'Fruit-a-tives', and recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends". DAN McLEAN.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" is daily proving its priceless value in relieving cases of Stomach, Liver and Kidney Trouble—General Weakness, and Skin Diseases.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Placing Him.

"So yo' am goin' to be mah son-in-law, am yo'?" inquired old Heathen Buckaloo.

"Yassah, dat's what it 'mounts to," said the colored swain. "But dat ain' what Ah'm a-marryin' Louella Maud foh. Yo' am purely incidental to de emergency, sah, purely incidental."—Ladies' Home Journal.

She Had Her Doubts.

"Now," said the teacher, as she cleared her desk for action, "we will take elementary science."

"By the way," she continued, "do you know what elementary science is, Dora Whates?"

"Come along!" said the teacher sharply.

"Well, miss," the little girl stuttered out, "I'm not quite sure whether it is the study of wild animals or the insides of us."—London Express.

ALCAZAR GARDENS OF SPAIN

Cottages Here Have Special Advantage for Lovers Who Begin Courting Early in Morning.

The best of the Alcazar is the Alcazar gardens. But I would not ignore the homelike charm of the vast court, says W. D. Howell in Harper's Magazine. It is planted casually about rather shabby orange trees that children were playing under, and was decorated with the week's wash of the low, simple dwellings which may be hired at a rental moderate even for Seville, where a handsome and commodious house in a good quarter rents for $60 a year. One of those two-story cottages, as we should call them, in the ante-court of the Alcazar had for the student of Spanish life the special advantage of a lover close to a ground floor window dropping tender nothings down through the slats of the shutter to some maiden lurking within. The nothings were so tender that you could not hear them drop, and besides, they were Spanish nothings, and it would not have served any purpose for the stranger to listen for them. Once afterward we saw the national courtship going on at another casement, but that was at night, and here the precious first sight of it was offered at 10 o'clock in the morning. Nobody seemed to mind the lover stationed outside the shutter with which the iron bars forbade him the closest contact; and it is only fair to say that he minded nobody; he was there when we went in and there when we came out, and it appears that when it is a question of love-making time is no more an object in Spain than in the United States. The scene would have been better by moonlight, but you cannot always have it moonlight, and the sun did very well; at least, the lover did not seem to miss the moon.

Clergyman "Doing His Bit"

"Deliver the goods," asked the British Government, and the request impressed itself so much on the mind of the Rev. J. Warwick Adams, vicar of Wall, near Lichfield, that he doffed his clerical garb, had in the overalls of an ordinary mechanic commenced work in a big ammunition factory at Birmingham.

Previous experience in his father's engineering works enabled Mr. Adams to take his place at the lathe, and he is now turning his knowledge of planing, machine drilling, boring, turning, filing and chipping to good account.

Useful Wives!

Equal suffrage has not yet penetrated Africa's jungles. A husband will send two of his wives out to plant and care for the cassava farm. Two more will be appointed to look after the rice farm, to plant, attend it, drive off the rice birds and animals, and finally to cut and harvest the crop. Two more will be delegated to the jungle to chop and bring home firewood. Another will be commissioned to carry water for the family. Another will do the cooking. Still another will shine her husband's sword, light his pipe and bring it to him, while he sits in the kitchen and talks any kind of palaver that his men friends care to quibble about. The husband works on the principle of "to every woman her work."

IDEALS.

Every man has at times in his mind the ideal of what he should be, but is not. This ideal may be high and complete, or it may be low and insufficient, yet in all men that really seek to improve it is better than the actual character.

CANADA AND THE WAR

Everybody can do a little.

Every man should do what he can.

Every woman should do what she can.

Improved production means increased production.

Canada's future depends upon our actions of to-day.

In serving the Empire we are serving ourselves.

Markets are not created, won and held in a day.

Now is the time to prove ourselves the Granary of the Empire.

We have the soil, we have the resources, we must have the energy to use them to the greatest advantage.

As we acquit ourselves at this crisis, so will be our prosperity and pride in the years to come.

With more than half of productive Europe engaged in war, and large sections decimated, other countries and especially those forming the British Empire, will have to make up huge deficiencies, both of foodstuffs and material.

STREETS OF CHRISTIANIA.

Christiania is probably the most tastefully laid out capital of any state in Europe, Paris itself not excepted. It owes its foundation entirely to King Christian IV. of Denmark, from whom it takes its name, who in or about the year 1623 decided to erect for himself a new capital on the opposite side of the river to Oslo.

The whole of the main streets of the city run at right angles and are extremely wide. Indeed, it would hardly be an exaggeration to call them squares rather than streets. For the most part the architecture is rather heavy in design, but the clear air that comes from the fiords tends to give the whole place a tone of lightness that it would otherwise lack.

The river Aker contains a wonderful series of waterfalls in the upper courses some little distance from the city, where practically the whole of the necessary power for the ever growing manufacturing quarter of the Norwegian capital is generated. This quarter is rather rigorously restricted to the suburb of Sagene, on the north side of the city, since town planning is something more than a mere name in Norway.

Vengeance.

"I wonder at your allowing Hix to marry your daughter. I thought you were mortal enemies."

"That's just the reason. Now he will have my wife for his mother-in-law."—Exchange.

She Got a New One.

Mr. Hornbill—Do you know, darling, I could pick you out of a crowd of women just by your style!

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two years!

Didn't Pass It.

A missionary in Trinidad once asked a negro sitting in idleness by the roadside how he managed to pass the time. "I sit in de sun, massa, and let de time pass me," was the quaint and philosophical reply.

DIFFICULTIES.

The more powerful the obstacle the more glory we have in overcoming it, and the difficulties with which we are met are the seeds of honor that set off virtue.—Molinos.

WORTH REMEMBERING

Braid of cheek material is best mended by using several shades of silk or thread in one needle.

Freshly-grated horseradish with a little whipped cream stirred into it, makes a nice sauce for boiled meats.

When making fruit pies damp the edge with milk instead of water. It holds better, and the juice is not so liable to boil over.

Eggs are best twelve hours after they are laid. They can be kept for months packed without touching, in salt, small ends down.

The proper way to make a mustard plaster so that it will not blister the patient is to use the white of an egg to mix with the mustard instead of water.

If a pair of shoes has become stiffened with walking in the wet, they should first be washed with warm water and then have oil well rubbed into them.

If aluminum ware is handled until full of dents, it can be hammered into shape again, which is one reason why it is the most economical ware a housewife can use.

The more coarse breads are used the better for the health of the family.

Summer need not be a Hard Time for Baby

It is not the heat of summer that is hard on babies. It is their food that is responsible for most summer troubles.

Milk is difficult to modify at home and, in the summer particularly, it is liable to contamination, infection and becoming sour. It is this that is mostly responsible for the epidemic diarrhœa and other complaints usually blamed on the summer weather.

The value of an absolutely dependable food is clearly proven at this season.

The "Allenburys" Milk Foods, Nos. 1 and 2 present advantages that are impossible with milk delivered to your door. They are prepared from the pure rich milk of carefully tended cows bred on splendid pastures—modified to resemble most closely healthy mother's milk. Packed in hermetically sealed tins, the foods are ready for immediate use with the addition of boiling water only.

Mothers who adopt this scientific method of feeding infants, which effectually replaces human milk and ensures steady, vigorous growth and health, are relieved of the many troubles and anxieties that attend the feeding of Baby during Summer.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

BOYS SHOULD LEARN

To run.
To swim
To carve.
To be neat.
To make a fire.
To be punctual.
To do an errand.
To cut kindling.
To sing if they can.
To hang up their hats.
To respect their teacher.
To hold their heads erect.
To wipe their feet on the mat.
To read aloud when requested.
To cultivate a cheerful temper.
To help the boy smaller than themselves
To sew on their own buttons.
To speak pleasantly to an old lady.
To put every garment in its proper place.
To remove their hats upon entering a house.
Not to tease boys smaller than themselves.
To keep their finger nails from wearing mourning.
To be kind and helpful to their sisters as to other boys' sisters.
To close the door quietly, especially when there is a sick person in the house.
To take pride in having their mother and sisters for their best friends.
To try to do anything, to take their mother into their confidence, and above all, never to lie about anything they have done.
When their play is over for the day, to wash their faces and hands and to spend the evening in the house.
Not to take the easiest chair in the room and put it directly in front of the fire and forget to offer it to their mother when she comes in to sit down.
To make up their minds not to learn to smoke, chew or drink, remembering these things are not easily unlearned, and that they are terrible drawbacks to good men.

LETTER WRITING.

Have you any unkind thoughts?
Do not write them down.
Write no word that giveth pain;
Written words may long remain.
Have you heard some idle tale?
Do not write it down.
Gossips may repeat it o'er,
Adding to its bitter store.
Have you any careless jest?
Bury it and let it rest;
It may wound some loving breast.
Words of love and tenderness,
Words of truth and kindliness,
Words of comfort for the sad,
Words of gladness for the glad,
Words of counsel for the bad—
Wisely write them down.
Words, the small, are mighty things;
Pause before you write them;
Little words may grow and bloom
With bitter breath or sweet perfume,
Pray before you write them.

Infidelity never raised a man or a woman from sin. It never took a drunkard from the gutter, a gambler from his cards, or the fallen from a life of shame. It never found a man coarse or brutal in life and character, and made of him a kind husband and father. It never went into heathen lands among the morally depraved and lifted them out of their degradation to a high state of civilisation. It has never written down languages, translated literature or prepared textbooks, or planted schools, or established seminaries and colleges. It has never founded hospitals for the sick or homes for the helpless. What discoveries has it made? Has it added anything to human happiness? Does it bring one ray of comfort to the chamber of death? The religion of Jesus has done this, and more, too. "The tree is known by its fruits."

BEE STINGS

It has long been known that bee stings are of great value in the treatment of rheumatism. The poison which a bee injects into your body when it stings you not only relieves the rheumatic pains and swellings, but makes a person more or less immune to further trouble from the disease.

This result is due, it is believed, to the formic acid which is found in large quantities in the bee's venom. Formic acid, as has been shown by experiments for the poisons in the system which stiffen the joints and muscles with rheumatism.

Now it has been discovered that bee stings are as effective a cure for inebriety as for rheumatism. This important discovery was made quite by accident in a British hospital.

Five men were being treated for chronic rheumatism. Four of them had been hard drinkers for years, and one of them was a confirmed drunkard.

Bee stings were applied to them and the rheumatic condition promptly subsided. When they were finally discharged they found that the treatment had done more than cure rheumatism—it had destroyed their taste for alcohol.

The hospital physicians, who were as greatly astonished at this unexpected result as their patients, have set on foot a widespread investigation into the effects of bee stings on drunkards to see whether they are an infallible cure for inebriety.

Facts already brought to light show that an intoxicated person is quickly sobered by a bee's sting, and that drinking men who take up work among bees, where they are frequently stung, soon lose their old craving for alcohol.

When potatoes are boiled in their jackets their skins should be thoroughly cleaned before they are boiled. A ring of skin about the middle of the potato should be removed before the potatoes are put in to the water so that the moisture on the inside may escape and the potato will not be soggy.

WHEN BABY IS ILL

When he is troubled with constipation, indigestion, vomiting or worms give him Baby's Own Tablets. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels and cure all these troubles simply because they banish the cause. Concerning them Mrs. Philias Duval, St. Leonard, Que., writes: "We are well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets, which we have used for our baby when suffering from constipation and vomiting." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Flavouring Fruit Desserts

When fruit is served for breakfast it is usually better without any flavour but its own; but a fruit dessert may be made more novel by a little dressing. To do it successfully one should know what fruits make a harmony—and why. Knowing that, one can make a dessert in a covered enameled ware baking dish that is delicious and healthful, and as pleasing in flavour as anything on Fifth Avenue.

Bananas, baked with a little sugar and some lemon juice or slive of lemon, are luscious and wholesome. Peaches may be improved by a touch of vanilla in the syrup. Pears are suited to the flavour of bitter almond, and if they are pealed, cored, and baked with a few pieces of preserved ginger and some almonds, they will taste like something delightfully foreign even if they were not very good native pears to begin with. If the fruit is hard and not very ripe it should be baked slowly for a long time, in a covered enameled ware casserole; tin cannot be used for any fruit dessert. If the sugar is put in before cooking, and plenty of it used, the fruit keeps its shape, but if you want sauce, add the sugar last. Green apples, cooked without any sugar at all, make a good sauce to serve with meat. So do tart apples cooked in the same way, to make a smooth puree. If they are cooked to a pulp and rubbed through a colander you need only core them, and the skins will add to the flavour. Cloves or nutmeg, and to some tastes, cinnamon are apple dessert that is other to apples with tart apples added, pared and baked in the covered dish with some sugar and water.

Exclusive Bread Diet Dangerous

We call bread the "staff of life," but it isn't. It used to be in the old days before the miller began making flour white and slightly at the expense of its nutritive qualities. Just now, however, it contributes very little to the nourishment of man.

No one, we are informed, could live for any length of time upon an exclusive diet of the white bread which appears upon our tables three times daily, although life is to be sustained indefinitely upon wheat. Indeed, it is the concensus of opinion among physicans that we would be the gainers, were it eliminated entirely.

Some late researches make it quite plain, too, that the death following a diet of white bread would not be a death of starvation so much as a death from terrible disease.

In studying a form of neuritis more or less prevailed on the coast of Labrador Dr. John Little concludes that it is in fact that awful scourge, beri beri. He furthermore ascribes it to be the diet of the people there, which is made up almost entirely of bread made from refined flour.

His conclusions have just been put to the practical test in a series of interesting and conclusive experiments in the laboratories of Harvard University.

For these experiments eight different pens of chickens were selected, and each submitted to an exclusive diet different from that of all the others. The first were fed on white bread made with the yeast and the second upon white bread unleavened. To the third whole wheat bread was given and the fourth had a white bread died to wich there was added, weekly, 75 grams of cracked corn and wheat.

The fifth pen had hominy; the sixth, whole corn; the seventh, when in the kernel, and the eighth, wite or polished rice—the ordinary rice that one buys at a grocery store.

All the fowls did fairly well excepting those in pens one, two, four, and eight. Every one of these soon developed symptoms of polyneuritis, and without a single exception died of the disease or were in mercy, killed. Those in pen four survived longer than those of any of the others for the reason, as the experiment would seem to show, that a small amount of cracked whole grain was added to their weekly diet.

The fact that the white bread had precisely the same effect upon the fowls as polished rice is interesting. It is now generally admitted that beri beri is due to a diet of polished rice. It would seem, therefore, that the polyneuritis affecting the fowls of the experiment was in fact beri beri, and caused by a diet of white bread as well as by the exclusive use of polished rice.

The experiments seem to support the conclusions of Dr. Little. It is quite evident that the Labrador sufferers whom he has been studying, are afflicted with beri beri. It is equally patent that their condition is due to an almost exclusive diet of white bread.

The elimination of the mineral constituents of the wheat effected by the modern miller has long been recognized and deplored. "White bread starvation" is a term with which we are more or less familiar. It is a term with a definite meaning. Little in Labrador, and the Harvard experiments which substantiate them constitute a new indictment against our milling methods.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

CHAPTER XX.

The Rival Wrecking Crews.

FOR some moments Dorr stared at this message from the dead. True, it was addressed to Ruth, but its message was to him, John Dorr. Now, he knew something of the tremendous stake for which Wilkerson was playing. So deep in thought was he that he did not notice that he was being spied upon. He must see Ruth and tell her. He slipped the letter into his pocket, not observing that the torn portion dropped to the table.

As he hurried out, fat with his news, a Mexican stole into the room and, after a keen glance around, picked up the bit of paper. He had seen the triumphant expression on Dorr's face. That writing must be valuable. He tried to decipher it, but failed. So he thrust it into his shirt and stole away.

Half an hour later the last few lines of that letter were in Harry Wilkerson's hands.

It was not until he had explained to Ruth the circumstances under which he had opened the letter and handed her the inclosure that John discovered that the last portion was missing, the part that told of the figures on the key. Together they sought it in vain.

"Well," said Ruth cheerfully, "at least I have the key and now we know what those figures stand for."

"Yes," he assented, "the latitude and longitude where the wreck sank. But I don't like the disappearance of that last part. It was rank carelessness of me. What if it should fall into Wilkerson's hands?"

Ruth laughed, dangling the key by its ribbon. "We have the master key!"

"Yes," John replied more cheerfully. "He won't know where the place is, anyway. But we must arrange to find that wreck and get the chest."

"But if the ship sank?" she said.

"Lots of people will remember the wreck," was the response. "And with this accurate position of where it went down a diver will be able to recover what we want."

They discussed this for some time and decided that as soon as Kane returned with the warrant for Wilkerson they would start out for San Pedro and proceed to locate the sunken vessel and find if possible the chest and its precious contents.

"With Wilkerson safely in the sheriff's hands and Kane on the job here all will be safe," John said finally.

But Wilkerson, with the torn scrap of paper in his hand, was planning swiftly and certainly. With Vigas he laid a scheme for that night. When the details were settled the bandit smiled crookedly. "I'll get the key myself," he remarked. "It will be a pleasure."

"No roughness," warned Wilkerson.

"With a lady?" demanded Vigas silkily. "Never!"

"All right," was the response. "But remember these troopers aren't overly fond of you."

The Mexican made his preparations to get the key that held the secret of the treasure with peculiar care. One would have thought he was going to a ball, so fanciful his dress, so careful his whole get-up. When he had completed his arrangements he presented a striking and gaudy figure, with silver bandied sombrero, heavy studded belt, embroidered shirt and flowing scarf.

Wilkerson contemplated him moodily. "You'd better wear a jumper and overalls," he snarled. "Any one can spot you a mile in that dandified dress."

Vigas kissed a dirty hand to the stars. "In honor of the lady," he said, with bravado. "Never shall it be said the Jose Vigas was ignorant of the niceties of demeanor, senor."

Finding his protests useless, Wilkerson subsided. Vigas departed, apparently for a stroll through the silent camp. He even stopped for a chat with a watchful trooper, who readily believed his casual statement that he was going on a lover's expedition.

It was just midnight when Vigas stood over the bed on which Ruth lay asleep. For a long moment he stood there in his gaudy finery watching her. He seemed almost on the point of awakening her in order to satisfy his overweening vanity. But the clank of a bridle chain outside warned him that he stood in great peril. With swift fingers he touched the ribbon, bent over and gently drew out the key. He cut the ribbon with one slip of his knife and looked at his booty. But the girl's immovable and lovely face drew his eyes again to her. With a sweep of his arm he lifted his heavy hat to her and passed out, silent as a cat of his native mountains.

With the key in his possession Wilkerson became suddenly his own nervous self. He must get away instantly, he knew. Kane would be back in the morning with a warrant. Already he was being watched by the suspicious troopers. He must escape this very night.

After a short conversation with Vigas and the appointment of a future rendezvous, Harry Wilkerson armed himself and started lazily down into the camp to see what was moving. Nothing stirred. He returned to the hill camp and thence swiftly and quietly made his way upward, taking advantage of every bush and rock that might afford him screen.

He was almost to the top when a sentry challenged him and stepped forward.

"Not allowed after nightfall," was the response.

Without further parley, Wilkerson leaped forward, grasped the man's rifle and tripped him. A moment later he was footing it up to the crest at top speed, with the sentry's cries for help urging him on.

Before he could reach the divide a bullet whizzed by his head, then another. He turned madly and fired rapidly down into the shadows at his pursuers. He cursed himself for his folly when a second sentry appeared above him, drawn by the flash of his shots to his hiding place. There was but one refuge, the mine shaft. He plunged obliquely downward for it.

Naturally enough, the troopers thought their quarry was cornered, but Wilkerson drove straight on downward to an old working, mounted again crossed by a disused gallery and finally emerged far up the cliff. On his way he had picked up a coil of rope, and when he found himself on the edge of the precipice and his pursuers gaining on him he made one end of the rope fast and speedily started to descend. But the distance was too great. Before he was halfway to the bottom he had been discovered, and he felt the rope being hauled up. In despair, with a madman's strength, he swung far out and then in, dropping on a flimsy ledge concealed by the overhang of the cliff.

Ruth Tried to Comfort John Dorr.

As the rope came free in their hands the pursuers realized that their prey had escaped them. They peered over. Surely he had foiled the law only to meet death on the rocks far below.

On his giddy perch Wilkerson heard their awed speculations and laughed silently. Then he crawled away. In the distance he heard the screech of a locomotive whistle, marking the passage of an express. The freight would be due in two hours. He must make it.

Tom Kane arrived early in the morning to find the camp in an uproar. The Mexicans had quietly vanished, Ruth was mourning the loss of the master key, and the sheriff, staring at the now useless warrant, was beyond words to express his chagrin.

John Dorr alone was serene, though he realized that Wilkerson had again checkmated him. But the immediate need of the hour was haste. He instructed Kane to take charge of the mine and directed Ruth to prepare for a trip to the coast that afternoon.

"Luckily I copied those figures," he said grimly.

Two days later John Dorr and Ruth were steaming up the channel from San Pedro in a launch fitted with diving outfit. The skipper of the launch remembered perfectly the burning of the steamer and, now that he knew the position where it sank, gave out great hopes of finding the hulk.

"The sea is shallow there, and the tides aren't strong enough to move her," he stated. "The only thing is, somebody may have been ahead of us."

Yet at noon his unspoken fears were realized. There was another powerful launch ahead of them which their captain identified as a diving and salvage boat from San Diego.

"Then they'll get ahead of us!" Ruth mourned. "After all our trouble!"

The launch captain and the diver both comforted her by stating that the given position was not far away, that it was sometimes a matter of days to find a wreck even if the approximate location was known and that at any rate they would soon be near enough to see whether the other craft was successful.

Two hours later Wilkerson's launch was swinging easily over the low swells not a mile from the bluff shore, and they could see his diver preparing to go down.

"I hope he doesn't find it!" breathed Dorr as he urged his own men to greater speed.

"They've struck the spot if those figures of yours are correct," was the reply. "But time will tell."

When the two boats were close together John saw that Mrs. Darnell was with Wilkerson. He could see the bronze glint of her eyes, her eyes filled with a mingling of triumph and hatred. And that look grew brighter and more malicious when the diver, coming up from his first descent, showed a large bit of wood, evidently from a wreck. Though they could not hear the words, those on Dorr's boat could understand the directions that were being given.

The captain and the diver glanced at each other doubtfully; then the former shook his head.

"No," he said gruffly. "They found it, and it's theirs by sea law. Anyway I ain't going to send my man down when there's danger, as there always is with two men working under water at cross purposes."

"But they'll get the chest!" cried Ruth.

"Wait and see," said the imperturbable diver.

Half an hour later John turned to Ruth and said miserably: "Well, they have got it. That ends this excursion."

"Is that your chest, missy?" demanded the captain.

"Yes, yes; my father's!"

"Well," he said slowly, "there's nothing to hinder us going over and seeing what it looks like, is there?" He signaled his engineer and put his helm over.

As they ranged alongside the other launch Wilkerson raised his face to Dorr's wrathful gaze and smiled. Instinctively John put his hand on his gun. A rough touch on his shoulder recalled him.

"This ain't any piratical cruise," the skipper remarked meaningly. "That man was hired the same as me, and we ain't got no fight with each other."

"Of course," Dorr agreed willingly. Then he made a leap for the deck of the other boat, intent on regaining the chest single handed.

For the moment Wilkerson was paralyzed by the boldness of this move, but a moment later strong hands had flung John back on his own deck, and his skipper, thinking that matters had gone far enough, soon put a safe distance between the two craft.

"Now or never," said Dorr to the captain of his own boat. "Don't lose sight of them. I must know where they land and what they do with the chest."

"They're hurrying some," was the response. "But I guess we can keep 'em in view, at least till night comes on."

While the moon was lighting up the smooth waters of the channel that night Ruth tried to comfort John Dorr. And as he listened to her gentle words and watched the loveliness of her face under the silver beams he forgot the bitterness in his heart and knew something of a happiness that Wilkerson, pawing over water soaked rags in raging despair, was never to know.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Tiz-It Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

Frugal Shakespeare.

Shakespeare was, unlike the drama dols of his time, somewhat like Dam Gillpin—he "had a frugal mind." When fortune shone upon him in London he kept retired and saved money, and it is to this self chosen obscurity that may be attributed the fact that so little is known about him. In about ten years from his coming to London—that is, in 1597—he was beginning to make purchases of property in his native town of Stratford, and a few years later he had withdrawn to live like a private gentleman in probably the best house in the little Warwickshire town. He quietly resumed the placid life he loved by the banks of the Avon of his youth.

Ably Defined.

A certain archbishop when asked whether it was a grievous lie for a woman to misstate her age replied:

"A lie may be defined as a statement made by one rational being to another rational being with the intent to deceive. Now, as no rational being would think of asking a woman her age with the expectation of being answered truthfully, one of the elements of the lie is lacking, and the woman's statement cannot, strictly speaking, be defined as such."—Judge.

Signal Flags.

Signaling by flags, as the form is now universally understood, was invented in the year 1854 by Surgeon Myer of the United States army. Before Surgeon Myer's invention the only flag signaling was by color; but, realizing the inadequacy of such a mode of conveying information, Dr. Myer studied out the system of "wigwagging," or talking, by making motions with the flag, a sort of deaf and dumb telegraphy, which has since been adopted by pretty nearly all the nations of the world.

Is 83 Years Old
And Her Heart Does Not Bother Her.
Thanks to MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. McLaren, Commanda, Ont., writes us under date of February 9th, 1914. "Sixteen years ago I took bad with my heart and nerves, and was not able to do anything. I tried a good many doctors, but they did me no good; in fact one doctor gave me up to die. I heard about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I thought I would give them a trial, and after using a couple of boxes I saw that I was improving. I kept on using them for quite a long time. I am eighty-three years old and my heart does not bother me at all.

"I am raising a little girl who was never very strong, and the doctor said that she had palpitation of the heart, so I started to give them to her. She is now twelve years old, and they are doing her more good than I can possibly tell you. I would advise anyone who has a weak heart to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they have done wonders for us."

LT. WARNEFORD WHO RECENTLY DESTROYED A ZEPPELIN FALLS TO HIS DEATH IN PARIS

PARIS, June 18—Lieut. Reginald J. Warneford, the young Canadian aviator who recently won the Victoria Cross and the Legion of Honour for destroying in mid-air a Zeppelin airship, lost control of a new aeroplane he was testing near Paris this afternoon, and the machine tumbled to earth from a great height. Lieut. Warneford was killed instantly.

Henry B. Needham, the American writer in Europe to get impressions from the war, was a passenger with Warneford. He, too, was killed.

The exact cause of the accident is unknown and will remain so, as the aeroplane and its engine are a mass of tangled wreckage. But the cause may be found in part, at least, by the fact that Lieut. Warneford remarked before leaving the Hotel Ritz for the testing ground this morning that he felt sick and dizzy and would not fly, although he had been asked to experiment with some new machines.

By the time he reached the aviation grounds, however, he had recovered his usual buoyancy of health and immediately set about to ascend in one of the aeroplanes to be tested. He took the machine up alone, put it through some of the customary manoeuvres and alighted without mishap.

Came Plunging Down.

Then he got into the second machine, which was of the same type as the first, and taking Needam as a passenger, soared into the air. There were a few spectators on the grounds and some of the men connected with the aerial corps. The machine glided from earth, but there was no hint of anything wrong, and the young lieutenant and his American passenger had soon become but a speck in the sky. It was a perfect day for testing work. The sky was clear, and there was no wind. There is no telling the exact height the aeroplane had attained when the mishap, what ever it was, occurred. But it was so high that nothing out of the ordinary could be detected by the spectators on the ground until the machine came plunging downward.

Lieut. Reginald J. A. Warneford joined the British flying corps in Great Britain only a few months ago. Previous to that time he had never operated an aeroplane. He proved so adaptable, however, that he had soon been granted a military license and was sent to Northern France.

On June 7, at 3 o'clock in the morning, while reconnoitring above German ground, in Belgium, he sighted a Zeppelin airship and immediately went into battle with it. By flying above the Zeppelin he was able to drop bombs on it. One of these struck it squarely in the centre. The resultant explosion tore the gas bag to pieces and the airship, with its crew of 28 officers and men, fell to the ground from a great height. The concussion from the explosion was so great that it bounced his aeroplane up into the air and turned it completely over. He was able, however, to regain control and to make a safe landing behind the British lines.

Two days later King George bestowed the Victoria Cross on the young aviator in recognition of his distinguished gallantry. On the following day Lieut. Warneford was decorated with the Legion of Honour.

On Tuesday of this week he was recognized in the Ambassadeurs Restaurant in the Champs Elysees and was wildly cheered as the hero of the hour by a throng of enthusiastic diners.

Stoney Lake Breezes

Opening of the Fishing Season Brings in a Rush of Visitors

"In genial spring, beneath the quiv'ring share,
When cooling vapors breathe alone the mead,
The patient fisher takes his silent stand,
Intent, his angle trembling in his hand;
With looks unmoved, he hopes the scaly breed,
And eyes the dancing cork and bending reed.
—Pope.

The fish in Stony Lake are no longer bottled up. The cork came out with a bang on Wednesday, when, by the kind permission of an all-wise government we were allowed to shoulder our rods, and angle for the "fish worth while."

Several good catches were made the first day. Mr. Robert Britton of Toronto, accompanied by Mr. Ira Lennox, of "Bellvidered," caught three beauties before noon. They hooked on over a dozen bass which were undersize. These, of course, they had to return to the deep. All were caught by means of the trolling line.

Those who still fished and used bait report having caught swarms of sunfish and perch, in between occasional members of the bass family.

Truly the black bass is a prince among the finny tribe. Luckily about this time of the season, when the spawning period is well over, he becomes less dainty about his bill of fare. From now on he begins to crave for the shining minnow and the elusive crawfish, and insists on everything ghoeing alive—no dead meats for his lordship, if you please—he prefers to kill his own prey. As minnows die quickly after being hooked it is necessary to change the bait often. They should be attached by putting the hook upward through their lips and close to their edges. This allows the "shiner" to act natural in the water.

Crawfish and small frogs are an excellent appetizer. An Indian hooks the former through the curved tail and the latter through one of the hind legs. Large grasshoopers are another delicate item for Mr. Bass' menu card.

Then we must not forget the old and ancient order of angle worms. The night before you hit the trail, sprinkle the lawn, borrow a lantern, and fill your can with worms, earth and Quaker oats. Pick out the big onese. It is the fat, plump wigglers that count.

If the weather man is kind enough to send us a warm spell, next week ought to see a big inrush of anglers.

Mr. J. W. McKinney took a few hours off from working on his bungalow and tries his luck with the rod. He succeeding in landing two dandies; but he is going to go easy until his brother arrives from Orange, N.J.; then woe-betide the fish.

—Monty La Rock.

BANISH BILE!

A bilious condition of the system is the result of inaction of the liver, often causing severe headache through the eyes and temples, culminating sometimes in nausea and vomiting, which is frequently followed by a bilious diarrhoea.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, when taken as directed, stimulates the peptic glands of the stomach and increases the contraction of its muscles from above downward. This action is communicated to the intestines and increases the flow of the intestinal juice, thus stimulating the ducts of the liver to pour out the bile, when it can be carried downward by the laxative action of the Salt, instead of remaining to clog up the liver and flow back into the stomach.

Thus, if a person who is subject to Biliousness and Bilious Headache will use Abbey's Effervescent Salt, the natural action of the Stomach, liver and intestine will be kept up and no bile can accumulate in the system.

JUNIPER ISLAND TELEPHONE CABLE LAID

Glenwood Open For the Season
Personals From Stoney Lake

The telephone cable from McCracken's Landing to Juniper Island was well and truly laid by cablemen R. Long and W. Childs, last Wednesday. Superintending the operations were Foreman Leach, District Plant Chief, C. Kelman and District Plant Superintendent A. A. Smith. They took a chaperone along in the person of Mr. J. S. Knapman.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Lowe of Cleveland arrived at their resort, "Glenwood" last week. They are busy getting every thing in readiness for a big season. Last year Mr. Lowe reports having done an excellent business, notwithstanding the run-down condition in which he found the place after an absence of four years. However, extensive improvements and additions were made last Spring, and a most liberal patronage was his reward. There is a possibility of Mr. Lowe opening a small store at Glenwood, which should prove very handy to the large number of cottagers who inhabit Boschink.

Mr. Wright, the Stoney Lake Tonsorial Artist, has again taken up his headquarters at "Glenwood." Last year Mr. Wright gave excellent satisfaction at Juniper Island. This year he will divide his time between Juniper and Mt. Julian, being at the latter point Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and at Juniper on Tuesdays Thursdays and Saturdays.

The steamer "Empress" with Capt. Wm. Robinson working the tiller, and Purser Fred Holland working the till, made her first regular trip for the season last Wednesday. From now till the middle of September she will be "Billy's Buoy Boat."

Mr. and Mrs. Clink returned to Toronto Wednesday. Their new cottage near Viamede will soon be ready for habitation. During July they expect a party of fourteen girls, and during August, ten of the sterner sex.

Mrs. Charles Munro of Wingham, accompanied by Masters Charles, Jr., John, and Rollie, and Misses Helen Cathaline and Ellen, have arrived at "Upsidedown" for a short holiday Mr. John Carlisle Jr., is master of ceremonies.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson and family came up on Friday and took passage in the "Gome" at Juniper Island, thus arriving at their cottage a couple of hours sooner than the steamer could land them.

Miss Ferriman of Toronto is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Nettleton at Col. Collins' island.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Henderson of Peterborough visited their cottage on Big Island last Thursday.

"Catamaran," the summer home of Mr. J. D. Collins, has been opened for the season.

The old visitors' register, which has done duty for many years at Juniper Island, was filled up last fall. A new one, no doubt, will be provided.

The mosquitos were a very slight crop this year, due to the fact that the water remained so high so long. We are now entertaining a small-sized pest in the form of blow flies.

Mrs. Theodore Crawford of Lakefield, and Mrs. Flynn of Havelock, returned to their homes, after having spent a short vacation with their parens, Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter.

PRIEST GIVES LIFE IN VAIN TO SAVE BOY

TRENTON, N. J., June 19 — In Crosswicks Creek, near this city, recently the Rev. Father Athasius French, a teacher in St. Francis' Catholic College, sacrificed his life in an attempt to rescue Edward Kackmarek, a student. The bodies were recovered and taken to the institution. Father French was 30 years old and the boy fifteen.

Father French and two other priests had taken twenty-five of the students, ranging in age from twelve to eighteen years, to the creek for a day's outing. All decided to go bathing. They had been in the water some time when the youth was strick en with cramps. Father French at once went to his assistance and both went down, in spite of efforts to save them.

Father French was professor of English at the college, which trains young men for the priesthood. The boy lived in Buffalo and had been at the institution two years.

ECZEMA WAS CURED TWELVE YEARS AGO

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

'Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

A SMART BOLERO WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

7150

This design for a bolero waist may be used either for a separate dressy blouse, or as the waist of a dainty summer frock. It has a perfectly plain underbody, which the skirt material should match if an entire dress is desired. Then the lace can be used for the bolero, or embroidery flouncing if preferred, and need not trim the skirt at all. The amount of flouncing required for medium size is only 2¾ yards, about 15 inches wide, which, being the only trimming needed, would keep the expense at a conservative figure.

As a separate waist, the design could be effectively copied in fine voile, with possibly a band embroidered bolero, or, as a dressy blouse for a tailored suit, it would look well in chiffon and shadow or Chantilly lace. Any number of attractive developments are possible. The underbody requires 1¾ yard of 36 inch material, for medium size. The pattern, No. 7,150, comes in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

ALLIES SMASHING HARD FROM ARRAS TO SEA

LIEUT. CHAS. ACKERMAN IS DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED

THE BRITISH, FRENCH AND BELGIANS ARE ALL ON THE OFFENSIVE

French Driving Towards Lens, the British Attacking at Labassee and the Belgians Have Launched an Assault Near Dixmude---Germans Trying to Stop by Terrific Bombardment But French Artillery Silenced Several of Enemy's Batteries.

RUSSIAN WAR OFFICE IS OPTIMISTIC

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, June 19.—Furious battles are now in progress all along the Franco-Flanders battle front, from Arras to the sea. Cooperating with the French in the Dieven-Arras drive, the British are smashing hard against the German positions in the brick fields east of Labassee. The Belgans have launched an attack in the region of Dixmude. The Germans are trying to break the force of the attack by a violent bombardment. For hours at a time the allied lines are being subjected to a terrific shell fire that holds the troops to the trenches. But the French artillery has silenced several of the enemy batteries and opened gaps for infantry charges at a number of points around Souchez.

RUSSIANS HOPEFUL

PETROGRAD, June 19.—Though the enemy forces have approached to within 15 miles of Lemberg, the war office took an optimistic view of situation in Galicia to-day. The country around Grodek, it was pointed out, offers a natural defence against the Austro-Germans, who must waste great supplies of ammunition and thousands of men if they are to succeed in breaking through. The Russian general staff attaches no importance to Lemberg as a military centre. It was stated today that should the Austro-German drive make it advisable for the Slavs to evacuate the city, it should not be accepted as a serious reverse. The whole scheme of the Grand Duke's defensive campaign in the Galician fighting is to compel General Mackensen to make progress only at a tremendous loss of life and heavy cost of ammunition. This was partigularly proven at Przemysl, where the Russians made a stand with comparatively light losses, and forced the enemy to a reckless expenditure of lives and ammunition.

FAVOURS A PROFITABLE PEACE

PARIS, June 19.—Extracts from a letter said to have been sent by Emperor William to a personage connected with the Bavarian Court and published in Spain, are reproduced by the "Matin." The Emperor is quoted as saying in part:

"Our only object is a peace profitable for the German states. This peace may be concluded sooner than thought. If it gave for the time being only an incomplete result it would at least serve as a preparation for the future. It could be signed to-morrow, if I wished.

"When my august grandfather placed the Empire on its present basis he did not pretend to have realized a completed work. The Empire always is susceptible of growth. What cannot be achieved to-day will be achieved later."

ROME, June 19.—The Austrian fleet bombarded the lighthouse at Tagliamento and attempted to set fire to the naptha reservoir at Monopoli. The Minster of Marine also announced to-day that an Italian dirigible had bombarded the Austrian depot at Trieste.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 19.—General Mackensen has launched a violent attack against the Russian positions at Grodek, 15 miles west of Lemberg. Once driven out of Grodek, the Russians will not attempt a serious stand at Lemberg, according to German military men, but will prepare to evacuate all of Galicia.

ROME, June 19.—Both Austrian and Italian fleets are raiding seaport towns on the Adriatic and harrassing the hostile shipping. An Italian flotilla last night drove off an Austrian squadron that bombarded the Tagliamento lighthouse, and early to-day bombarded the Austrian lighthouse at Salvore, 16 miles southwest of Trieste.

ROME, via Paris, June 19.—The assertion is made by the newspapers of Rome, that the Italian army now occupies 10,000 square kilometres (a kilometre is about two-thirds of a mile) of "unredeemed territory," or more than twice as much as Austria offered Italy for remaining neutral.

An attack is made in an official note issued to-night at the war office upon what are characterized as the Austrian methods of "destruction and vandalism" in the territory which has been evacuated because of the Italian advance.

THE UNITED STATES SITUATION

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The German military element is making a determined stand to keep the diplomatic element from making concessions to the United States. Both official and unofficial advices from Berlin indicated this to-day. The reason is declared to be a belief that if the United States secures all the concessions she demands a mistaken impression will get abroad that Germany fears eventual defeat. The conflict at Berlin is declared to be the first real difference of opinion that has developed since the war began. The military group is declared willing to concede that Americans are entitled to their government's protection under all circumstances, and that they and other neutrals have a right under international law to go anywhere they please. But group leaders are urging the government to put squarely up to the United States the proposition that, in as much as the allies are carrying munitions on passenger steamers, the government here should take up for serious consideration former Secretary of State Bryan's suggestion that the navigation laws be so construed to compel steamer owners to prevent the carrying of passengers on such vessels.

The suggestion is also made that the United States could easily withhold passports from American travellers who will not agree to take passage on vessels under the American flag.

MARRIED 60 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Curtis Celebrate the Sixtieth Anniversary of Their Wedding—The Foundation of the Curtis Bros. Brickyard.

A UNIQUE EVENT

An event of more than usual interest transpired to-day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Curtis, of Douro, the occasion being the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis, who are still active and who have promise of many years yet in which to enjoy life are to-day receiving the congratulations of a host of relatives and friends upon having completed three score years of married life.

The story which infolds the life of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis is one full of interest. Sixty years ago to-day Mr. Mark Curtis and his young wife started out in life to make a home together, and that they have been so successful in realizing their ambition and so happy in their marital relations, are matters upon which they now look back with considerable pleasure and satisfaction

A Long Voyage.

On May 29th, 1854, Mr. Curtis, then a young man 21 years of age left his native home in Wiltshire, England, for Canada. He arrived in Peterborough on August 16th, having spent the intervening 78 days on the trip. The ship upon which he took passage was detained for a number of days, which accounted for some of the time that was taken up in the journey. During the sea voyage, the supply of provisions became low an the passengers some times had to go on short rations.

The last stage of the trip was made from Peterborough to Dummer township, where an uncle of Mr. Curtis resided. At that time the greater part of the country was still unsettled and was covered wih heavy timber, except in odd patches which had been cleared and upon which settlers were living. Farming in those days was not the life that it is to-day and Mr. Curtis recalls having heard his aunt tell of having to carry on her back fifty pounds of flour from Peterborough to her home in Dummer, about fifteen miles of the road being so bad as to be impassable for a horse and vehicle. The flour was the gift of the government.

Parents Came to Canada.

In 1856, or one year after Mr. Curtis came to Canada, his parents followed. With them came the present Mrs. Curtis, then Miss Sarah Dunning, a daughter of James Dunning, who served at the battle of Trafalgar as a member of the marine service. Before Mr. Curtis left England, he became engaged to Miss Dunning, who was also a native of Wiltshire, where she was born in 1836. It was arranged that she should accompany his parents to Canada, where they would be married. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Curtis went to Millbrook to live where they remained for a number

PETERBORO' BOYS WITH 21ST BATT. IN ENGLAND

PTE. CECIL NEWMAN

CORP. FRED KELSEY

Two of the 57th Detachment in the Second Contingent. Corp. Kelsey, who came to Peterborough from Dorking, Eng., was employed in the transformer department of the C.G.E. and Pte. Newman, who originally lived in Winchester, Eng., was in the C.G.E. office. Both boys resided at 434 Reid Street.

LIEUT. ACKERMAN IS DANGEROUSLY HURT IN ACTION

Peterboro' Officer Has Been Admitted to Hospital at Rouen—His Parents are Officially Informed.

PARTICULARS LACKING

That Lieut. Chas. Ackerman, one of the 57th Regiment officers with the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., has been dangerously wounded in the recent fighting around Festubert, was the sad intelligence received by his father, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, of B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, this morning. The message from the Adjutant General's Department stated that Lieut. Ackerman was admitted to hospital at Rouen, on Thursday, June 17th, and his father has cabled to Rouen for further particulars as to his son's condition.

Lieut. Ackerman, who has been Acting Captain since the battle of Langemarck, in which his senior officer was killed, is one of the best known Peterborough boys at the front. He had been an officer of the 57th Regiment for a number of years before war broke out, and was for a time in charge of the Signalling Corps. He is a crack rifle shot and on several occasions shot at the Dominion Rifle Association meeting at Rockcliffe, Ottawa, and at the Ontario Rifle Association matches at Long Branch, Toronto, making a splendid showing. A keen, zealous officer he was one of the first to offer himself when hostilities began, and during the organization of the 57th detachment for the first contingent, carried out the duties of adjutant of the Company most satisfactorily. He has always been popular with officers and men alike and his many friends here will unite in wishing him a speedy recovery.

While in the same battalion as the rest of the Peterborough boys, Lieut. Ackerman is not an officer of the same Company, having been transferred to another Company of the 2nd Battalion in the re-organization at Salisbury Plain. He came through the first experiences in the trenches and the Battle of Langemarck safely.

Lieut. Ackerman has a brother, Sergt. Arthur Ackerman, in A Company of the 2nd Battalion, while his elder brother, Major W. C. Ackerman, is in comamnd of the local 24th Field Battery. Major S. T. Medd of B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., is a brother-in-law.

The wounding of Lieut. Ackerman, following the news of the death of Lt.-Col. Becker, and the wounding of Capt. H. Willis-O'Connor of Ottawa, the Adjutant of the 2nd Battalion, confirms the Examiner's despatch, yesterday, that the Ontario brigade has been taking part in the recent heavy fighting, following the British advance at Festubert.

Lieut. Ackerman was born in Port Perry, Ont., but has lived practically all his life in Peterborough.

Meteorological experts have discovered that clouds in certain positions, instead of shielding the earth from the sun's heat, actually increase its radiation by as much as 40 per cent.

ALL THE TALK OF COMPULSION HAS ENDED IN SMOKE

Period of Difficult Probation For New British Coalition Ministry is Over and All Trace of Dissension Has Disappeared.

LONDON NEVER CALMER

LONDON, June 19.—All political centres are schools for scandal and no legislative body in the world is more so that the House of Commons. All politicians, too, are surrounded by a cynical atmosphere wherein a certain number of men always place the most malignant interpretations on words and motives.

Never was there such an opportunity for the revelation of these elementary and inevitable parliamentary tendencies than during the weeks which followed immediately upon the creation of the coalition government. In addition to all other factors making for disquieting and cynical rumours there were a number of men displaced — men of disappointed hopes and strong party men honestly regarding the future of their political ideals.

From all these factors there grew up a great legend of Lloyd George and an intrigue to displace Asquith and put the brilliant Welshman in his place. The rumour advanced into the region of prophecy, manufacturing a brilliant future for Lloyd George. He was to be a new Joseph Chamberlain and build up a new political party, wherein the Tories would participate and all Liberal principals be abandoned, especially Free Trade, which would be replaced by a tariff against Germany made easier by the fierce hatred which will certainly last for a generation.

LLOYD GEORGE EXASPERATED.

No man was more exasperated or distressed by these ingenious rumours than Lloyd George himself, for he has an intense affection for Asquith and feels a gratitude for the consistent support which Asquith gave him even in the dark hours of the Marconi scandal.

Rumours of this kind die slowly, once they are started, and at the same time incautious words of Lloyd George, uttered during his brilliant oratorical campaign in munition centres, added new wings to the report. Some of his

PETERBORO'S YOUNG MEN MUST AWAKEN TO DUTY OF THE HOUR

More Recruits Must Come Forward and City Will Have to Continue to Bear its Share in the Fight for the Empire's Position---The Young Men and the Sports Question.

For the first time since enlistment for overseas service commenced in Peterborough, recruiting is at a standstill. The past couple of days have been blank as far as recruits for the new infantry battalion and the 8th C.M.R. are concerned, the slowest days since Jan. 1st, from which date recruiting has been continuous. It seems evident that the people of Peterborough are not taking the war seriously enough, and this applies not only to the men of military age, but to the wives and parents. Such a statement may seem strange in view of the 800 brave fellows who have gone forth from Peterborough since the war began, but nevertheless as applied to the great mass of the citizens it is perfectly true. People must see as they are coming to see in England, that this great struggle is only beginning; that great as are the sacrifices that have been, even greater sacrifice will be required before the Allies are triumphant. And in these sacrifices, the people of Peterborough must bear their share. Surely our record since the beginning of hostilities has been a glorious one. Over thirty officers and eight hundred men have donned the khaki; already many have laid down their lives in the fight for liberty. But the end is not yet.

CAN'T REST ON OUR LAURELS.

We can't rest on our laurels. Canada wants more men on the firing line, and generously as Peterborough has contributed, she must give again. Our adopted sons and a very large number of our native citizens have gone, but now more must come forward. Unmarried men with no particular home ties should be the first to offer. The Examiner knows of many who would be at the front now, were it not for parental opposition. Mothers must make the sacrifice—must not stand in the way if their sons hear the call of duty. Let our Canadian mothers take a lesson from the Spartan mothers of England—from the Scottish woman who raised her tear-dimmed eyes to her stalwart son as he left for the front and said: "Jock, you'll dae your bit."

THE APATHY OF YOUNG MEN.

The apathy of many of our young men in connection with the war is appalling. There are scores of sturdy young fellows who can tell you Eddie Collin's batting average, who don't know whether Lemberg is a city or a cheese, and who can tell you how many bases Ty Cobb has stolen, when they could scarcely name the countries fighting for the Allies. You will see dozens of young fellows on the street in the evenings, give a careless glance at a newspaper bulletin and walk on without reading the contents of the board, apparently indifferent to the fact that the greatest war in the history of the world is being waged, and that Canada's liberty, as well as that of Great Britain is in danger.

THE QUESTION OF SPORTS.

This indifference on the part of many young Canadians has led some prominent men to come to the conclusion that all athletic pastimes should be ended until the war is over. That is perhaps going too far. Sport is a very good thing, even in war time, but The Examiner does not think that baseball or lacrosse should occupy the leading place in the minds of our young men under present conditions. For that reason, sporting news, in which The Examiner specialized in normal times, has been more or less relegated to the background. There are more serious things than batting averages or lacrosse summaries for Peterborough's young men to think of just now, and it seems a travesty that scores of young athletes in Peterborough should be hammering a baseball or chasing one another around the lacrosse field, when across in Europe their fellow-citizens are laying down their lives to help save the Empire.

SOCCER PLAYERS GONE.

It is not long ago that local baseball and lacrosse men used to make good-natured fun of the soccer devotees. There is no football this summer because the soccer players have all gone to the front. Practically every player of the Nomads has responded, and other clubs have done as well. Now let us see the players in other lines of sport make as good a showing. The way is open to them. Recruits may enter the infantry, or there is still a chance to get into the Mounted Rifles. Peterborough doesn't want to start Lindsay's methods of raising recruits. Every quota asked for here so far has been secured and home-grown too. There is another draft going to Barriefield on Tuesday. Make it a big one. As the recruiting posters say in the Mother Country, "Roll up and do your bit."

LA GUERRA,

SOMMARIO PER GLI ITALIANI

Gli attacchi austriaci sono violentissimi, in Carnia, ma gl'Italiani mantengono tutte le posizioni catturate.

* * *

Gli Austriaci sono trincerati fortemente a sud-ovest dell'Isonzo, ma gl'Italiani si pongono al fatto delle trincee, le quali attaccheranno fra breve.

* * *

La Germania avrebbe deciso l'invio di rinforzi all'Austria minacciata dall'invasione.

* * *

* * *

* * *

* * *

Probably a man never realizes how golden silence is until he tries to buy some of it.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP IN LOCAL BUSINESS

A Successful Sale by Zacks Bros. to be Continued to the End of the Month

One of the successful sale events of the season is the dissolution of partnership sale, necessitated by the Zacks Brothers, dividing their business into two, and each taking over a distinct department under his own name. Very attractive prices were quoted on all lines of Ladies' and Gents' Clothing and Furnishings, as well as on the high-grade stock of furniture and house furnishings. The urgency of the call for immediate cash out of the stock has been partially allayed, but the firm are continuing the special sale offering till the end of the month, and to make it more effective, have made still further price reductions as will be seen in their large advertisement on another page.

After the 1st of July the old firm of Zacks Bros. will be dissolved, and, in future the Clothing, Furnishings, and Millinery Store of 338 George Street, will be conducted by H. Zacks, and the furniture store will be run by Harry Zacks, the two businesses being entirely separate, and under the individual firm names, as above.

INFORMATION FOR THE ENEMY.

Germany and her pals are anxious to get news of what their enemies are doing, and that's why the censor sits on the lid to keep information from getting out. There is, however, a little information that the censor is willing the enemy should learn. Canada is turning out 50,000 shells per day, with a prospect of increased rate of output, and another prospect is that we shall have a 250 million wheat crop. Germany and Austria, and Turkey too, are welcome to this information.

STREET PAVING.

If the materials for street-paving are as thoroughly mixed as the City Council is on the subject, the pavement should be as good as the other condition is bad. The city fathers are right in considering extensive street paving. Davy Crocket spoke big wisdom when he said—"Be sure you are right, then go ahead." The City Council can't very consistently go ahead, because it is not sure it is right or sure of anything. There is no agreement on paving material, and with the experience of a hundred cities to guide them, they are entering upon costly experiments. Apart from the violation of contracts and the bedevilling of specifications, the proposal to shift a concrete contract from Hunter street with light traffic, to George street with the heaviest possible traffic does not, to put it mildly, seem wise. Then the proposal to put down on northern George street three kinds of pavement with different wearing qualities seems like a man making a pair of trousers of three different materials — Scotch tweed, Canadian twood, and shoddy. In regard to materials, the Council is certainly not ready to spend thousands of dollars in paving without any settled problem or policy in regard to material. Nobody objects to the city doing a good deal of paving, but considering its great cost, it would seem wise for the city fathers to take to heart Davy Crocket's advice—"Be sure you are right, and then go ahead."

THE "STOP THIEF" DIVERSION

In British Columbia the newspaper friends of the McBride Government, are protesting against "the slanderous" attacks upon the government, and the consequent "injury to the credit of the province." They might go further and protest against the course and actions of the government that justified the attacks and deprive them of the character of slanders. In Manitoba the Roblin Government, before it acknowledged the corn, deplored the "slanderous attacks" that "traduced" the fair name of the province." Subsequent events have shown that the Roblin Government had some small share, by its extensive stealing, in injuring the good name of Manitoba; and for this, the government which robbed the province and acknowledged it by deserting the ship, is responsible, not the newspapers, which in "slanderous attacks" made public the government's wrong doing. A newspaper is blamed sometimes for injuring the credit of a family and paining a mother, by making public the crime of a son; but scant blame for breaking a mother's heart is put upon the son whose wrong-doing is responsible for it. If governments want to be free from the slanderous attacks that injure the credit of a province, they should think of its good name before they commit the wrong-doings that justify the attacks, and constitute the real injury to the credit of the province, the protection of all of whose interest—including the good name—should be their care. The pocket-picking rascal is not the only one who raises the "stop thief" cry.

CONSCRIPTION.

There are some who talk of conscription in Canada as means for securing the additional soldiers that, according to indications, will be needed. If conscription becomes necessary it will not be due to any lack of patriotic spirit upon the part of the young men of the country; it will more probably be due to unwise and injudicious application of the martinet spirit—to red tape entanglement. It has been evident that the rigor of medical examination has resulted in the rejection of many whom, in case of extremity, we may be glad to accept; of many who would probably be accepted under a system of conscription. Then, too stringent discipline, the punishment of slight faults on the part of recruits, by dismissal, has sent to the right about in the past, perhaps the numerical equivalent of two or three battalions. Cast iron rigidity of military regulations is not the best way to encourage recruiting. A strictness that might and would be necessary for soldiers under enforced service, will not work under voluntary service, especially in Canada, where the high average of intelligence, manly self-respect, and independence of spirit, contraindicate, a policy of martinet repression; the application of German methods to civilized Canadian citizens. Men rejected for trifling physical defects, not of capital importance; men dismissed from the service for trifling offences, tend to discourage others offering, to dampen the spirit of patriotic ardor, and necessarily tend to make recruiting slow. Common sense and sound judgment are as essential elements in a well-balanced military officer as perfection in knowledge of military drill and routine regulations.

BRITAIN'S MANY "BITS."

When some of us think and say that the armies of Britain are not taking their share in the war in Flanders with the French, we must not forget that the French themselves do not share this opinion. Le Temps of Paris, points out that Britain was thrown into "this titanic conflict" by the impulse of her honour and instinct of preservation, greatly unprepared in a military sense. This made it necessary to practically create a new army. It points out that by a prodigy of energy, a million of men are equipped, armed and provided abundantly with all the enormous material modern war demands. Le Tempe points out that a large part of the new army is already in Belgium and France, or fighting in the Dardanelles. British troops guard Egypt, and are fighting in Mesopotamia and South Africa. The French journal emphasises the point that Great Britain has achieved military preparation under voluntary service, almost as effectively as France has done under the regime of obligatory service. We must not look alone to Great Britain's share in the war in Flanders. Her wide Empire, represents a diversity of interests to be protected, and a corresponding dispersion of military effort in different parts of the world. She is measuring fully up to the limit of her responsibilities; and if she is not figuring flamboyantly with massed armies in France, she is doing her bit by bits, and doing it well. When we note how much Britain has contributed to the success of the Allied cause, by her navy, by her money bags, by her diplomacy, and by her army, we feel like consigning to the same place in the battle line, that David, the King, gave to Uriah, the arm-chair critics who grumble safely at home, and leave others to do the fighting, the sweating, the bleeding, and the dying. Nearly always in this queer world we get the most plentiful advice from those who don't know what they are talking about.

A General Sketch of the European War

Mr. Hilaire Belloc is one of the fortunate few to whom the war has brought wealth and reputation. A year ago he was known as a writer of charming books of travel, especially of travel on foot and in France. To-day he is easily the foremost military critic in Great Britain. His articles are endorsed by the War Office, read eagerly by officers in the trenches, by armchair critics at home and by soldiers in training, while his lectures are crowding the largest halls in England. That is what Mr. Belloc has achieved, and the more we examine his qualifications the more natural does his reputation appear. As a writer his talent is unusual and individual. Then his experience as a driver in the French artillery enables him to understand the qualities of the French army as no other English writer can. His minute knowledge of the topography of the French frontier was gained by personal contact—chiefly on foot, for Mr. Belloc is an enthusiastic pedestrian. At Oxford Mr. Belloc won honours in history, and in the House of Commons he served a practical apprenticeship to politics. It is obvious then that he has quite unique qualifications to explain the problems and the events of the war. His forthcoming book will be read with interest by all who feel the need for first-hand knowledge of the subject — and which of us does not?

The title of the book is to be "A General Sketch of the European War." It will be ultimately published in several volumes, and it is stated that No. 1, entitled "The First Phase," will be published in Canada by Thomas Nelson & Sons on July 1st. ar." It will be ultimately in :.f i m

THIS CENTURY PARALLEL TO "EARTH-SHAKING WATERLOO"

Three days ago we passed the seven-hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Magna Charter. To-day, the eighteenth of June, we remember another notable event in the history of the world for this is the hundredth anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. We all know or should know the story of the great epic of which it was the consummation; how in France the Republic had been reared on the ruins of the monarchy and how the First Empire had followed in its turn, how Buonaparte and his legions re-made the map of Europe, and how he was conquered by the Russian snows and forced into retirement to Elba. Then came his escape from that island, and the flocking of his veterans back to their eagles. His courage and skill was shown in organizing the French nation for a new war and his splendid audacity in his plan for smashing the armies of his enemies in succession.

Napoleon defeated the Prussians at Ligny on the fifteenth of June, the drawn battle of Quatre-Bras followed on the sixteenth and on the morning of the eighteenth the two greatest captains of their age, Napoleon and Wellington, faced each other on the rain-swept ridges of the field of Waterloo. It is an oft told tale how the French regiments smashed themselves to pieces on the steel girt British squares. It was a battle of heroes. Many a time previously had the soldiers of France and Britain met on the stricken field, but never was more splendid valor shown on either side than in this great struggle. The French did more than win a victory, they won the respect and admiration of their enemies and "the stern joy that warriors feel in foe-men worthy of their steel" paved the way for a good understanding, for peace, for the 'entente' and for the close friendship which knits the two nations to-day.

To-day, with France as our ally, we are again fighting for the freedom of Europe on French and Belgian soil. The old names, Waterloo, Mons, Brussels, Charleroi, Louvain, stand out again in relation to still more tremendous events. The circumstances of to-day and those of a hundred years ago have a strange likeness, and yet a stranger unlikeness. The armies engaged at Waterloo were a mere handful compared with the mighty hosts that now face each other. The battle line of Waterloo did not extend three miles, while the armies now front on a hundred leagues of territory. The Prussian tyranny and cruelty which we are fighting are a thousand-fold worse than the power of the terrible Corsican. But valor is the same now as ever.

We can imagine the rival leaders Napoleon and Wellington, together revisiting to-night "the glimpses of the moon" and heartening the soldiers for the struggle. We still fight, as Wellington said, for "the peace of the world" and look for its establishment on even a firmer base than that attained by the victory of "earth-shaking Waterloo.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Berlin Still Thinks That William I. Will Be The Kaiser Of All Europe

A Swiss lady who left Berlin late in May, writes as follows from Paris:

When I left Berlin early this week everyone was full of the approaching capture of Milan and Venice. The Berliners had made up their mind that war with Italy was inevitable, and their hatred for the Italians exceeded even that which they have for the English.

Apart from the fact that the city is shutting up earlier than usual, Berlin is just as gay as ever I have known it, and at places of entertainment any reference to Italy is greeted with as hostile cries as are directed against England.

"Russia is practically finished," said a wounded officer of high rank to me on the morning I left for Switzerland. "Von Hindenburg has not been so quick as we expected, but the Russians are absolutely and entirely annihilated for this year. They have no ammunition, and their troops are demoralised in consequence. Therefore a war with Italy is not worrying us at all."

Last week the American note was received (the first note in regard to the case of the Lusitania), and some of my American friends were very nervous at the changed attitude of the Berliners. A great many Americans have left Germany, knowing that in the event of war they would be immediately interned and that in the case of grave friction, as is expected, their position would be very unpleasant.

Two chief differences I noticed of late in the streets of Berlin. One was the increase in the number of wounded. Whereas two or three months ago one saw them in twos or threes, one now finds them in groups. The other difference is the vast number of people wearing the Iron Cross, chiefly that of the second order, which is worn in the buttonhole, whereas that of the first rank is worn across the breast. The Germans know nothing of foreigners' amused contempt for this lavishly distributed decoration, and if they did it would make no difference to them, they are so completely satisfied that everything German is best.

Kaiser of Europe.

I also observed chalked on the walls in one or two places words which, translated, mean "William, the First Kaiser of all Europe by August." That, indeed, is the spirit of the people. French and English friends I met this morning in Paris were disappointed when I told them the truth, but I must tell them the truth. There is absolute and unanimous confidence among all the Germans I met.

While I was in Berlin I was driven out by friends to call upon some people who are interned at the camp at Ruhleben. Ruhleben is an old racecourse, and except for the extreme boredom experienced there is nothing to complain of in the treatment of the interned civilian prisoners. I noticed some English playing football while I was there. Until I went I was under the impression that our party would be allowed to talk freely, but this was not the case, as the whole time we were in conversation with our interned friends officials were standing near enough to listen.

My conversation was confined to family matters, but in the course of remarks I learned to my astonishment that the prisoners at Ruhleben know absolutely nothing at all of the news of the outside world. Such happenings as the coming war with Italy and the sinking of the Lusitania were quite unknown to them.

A friend of mine told me something about one of the imprisoned officers who are kept in captivity as the result of the English treatment of German submarine prisoners, and it was not pleasant hearing. The officer in question is treated practically as a convict and is in absolute solitude. As far as I could learn he has two hours a day in the open air and for the rest he is only allowed to pace a little passage outside his cell. The Germans were extremely indignant at the English treatment of submarine prisoners and I am sure will relax no restrictions until that treatment is altered.

Plenty of Men About.

There still seemed to be abundance of men in Berlin. In the cheaper hotels men waiters have been entirely replaced by women, but in the larger establishments I was considerably surprised to find that men are still engaged, and apparently men of military age, who have not yet been called to the colours.

Food generally is quite cheap with the exception of meat, and my German women friends grumbled bitterly at the increased expenditure shown in the housekeeping books. Bacon is now at a prohibitive price, and even the commoner parts of beef are three francs (2s 6d) a lb.

The Germans are in an extremely [illegible] mood. The Germans know nothing of foreigners' amused contempt for this lavishly distributed decoration, and if they did it would make no difference to them, they are so completely satisfied that everything German is best.

ways are, and I did not air my pro-English and pro-French views very freely, and even when I expressed them at all I did so only among intimate women friends. The general impression in the circle in which I moved was that England will sue for peace some time early next year. She is considered to have begun an impossible task in the Dardanelles, and neither her soldiers nor those of France are thought to be in any way a match for the Germans.

Berlin, never a pretty city, is, however, at its best now, wearing its early summer foliage. The city is so much farther from the war than Paris or London that the conflict is really a thing apart from the Berliners. Were it not that every child all his life looks forward to being a soldier, and that every man is or has been a soldier, I do not think they would take any more interest in the struggle than the English do. What struck me when I left London some weeks ago was that the average English woman had no idea of that which is so thoroughly understood in Paris—that this war between the various nations is a war of extermination.

Trades and Labour Notes

(By the Official Scribe.)

The usual meeting of the Trades Council this week was not attended as well as it might have been. A glance at the calendar will show the date of last Wednesday, and "nuff sed" will be the concluding thought of the wise ones.

Nevertheless those delegates that were in attendance were not lacking in interest, and various questions were tackled with as good a sportsmanlike spirit as were the finny ones in the Otonabee by the absent brethren. The Transient Traders' By-law, the city paving contracts, Labour Day demonstrations and other questions were discussed till the usual hour for adjournment.

Next meeting, July 7th.

Enemy's Poisonous Gases Will No Longer Be Effective

LONDON, June 18.—Sir Hiram Maxim has invented "a very simple and cheap apparatus" which he believes will entirely counteract poisonous gas. Elaborate tests in the presence of military authorities are being made. Trenches have been built and a miniature battle was being acted wherein the attackers were to use gas, the defenders Sir Hiram's apparatus. Unfortunately, the mechanicians to whom the manufacture had been entrusted managed to spoil the entire work. Consequently the tests are postponed until next week. Sir Hiram said: "The idea is that when chlorine gas reaches the trenches it is very slightly heavier than air. When in a pure state at one atmospheric pressure it weighs 2½ times as much as air, but escaping from a high pressure to atmospheric the gas necessarily rises, mixing with the air until when it reaches the enemy there is one hundred times as much air as gas. My invention will force the fumes over the heads of soldiers in the trenches. This is the only way to neutralize the effects. Respirators are useless. I don't think the British could descend to use poisonous gas, and I am convinced when the Germans see how easily cheaper fumes can be dispersed they will discontinue its use."

Enemy's Fighting Strength Has Diminished One-Half

LONDON, June 18.—Hilaire Belloc, the military expert, estimates that the German and Austrian losses up to the present total nearer four million men than three million men, the bases this calculation on a careful analysis of the figures of the British casualties given by Premier Asquith in the Commons last week. Those figures, he points out, show one-fifth of a total of 258,000 are dead. The total British casualties, therefore, work out five to one for each life lost. The total enemy losses he estimates at six to one per man killed. Basing this multiple of calculation their losses have been greater than those of the allies. Mr. Belloc believes this multiple is low, for the German lists of killed are belated and the Austrians last enormously more in proportion in prisoners than the British. To the Prussian lists of killed must be added rather less than one-fifth for non-Prussian lists of the German Empire and further 80 per cent. for Austria and Hungary. Multiplying these by six, Mr. Belloc arrives at 3,160,000 enemy casualties before the great Galician effort. This, according to his estimate, cannot count for less than half a million; this makes a grand total of thre and three-quarter millions permanently out of the field. "The enemy's potential manhood for actual fighting within the first year." Mr. Belloc concludes, "has probably been diminished by nearly one-half from all causes."

City By-Law Is Unworkable

Department Favours Use of Receptacles of Specified Dimensions—New By-law May Be Prepared.

That the present existing by-law regulating scavengers is unworkable, is suggested in a communication that has been received by the Council from City Solicitor G. N. Gordon. It will be remembered that a conviction was registered against a local scavenger that was using cans that were said to be smaller than required by the by-law. The Police Magistrate imposed a fine of five dollars and costs. In order to straighten out the tangle which the case involved, enquiries were instituted by the City Solicitor. His efforts in that direction has brought out the following communication:

I beg to advise you that the Minister of Inland Revenue has suggested that the by-law is unworkable, relating to scavengers, and the amounts they can charge for removing night soil in the City of Peterborough.

The report as given me by the Inspector of Weights and measures is as follows: "Each scavenger shall use—barrels or receptacles of which the capacity has been ascertained by the said Sanitary Inspector, and on which has been printed or painted the capacity of each, which shall be done by the Sanitary Inspector."

The Weights and Measures Act does not recognize "barrels" or "receptacles" as measures of capacity, and cannot inspect or stamp such vessels any more than we can inspect or stamp cement and flour bags marked 79 or 89 pounds. In view of this fact, the affidavits sent in amount to practically nothing.

Mr. Howson could inspect when new, and stamp when correct, but in a week all these cans would be "false and unjust" within the meaning of Sec. 62 of the Act, and subject to seizure, and this Department has no authority to exempt a measure of capacity from periodical re-inspection and the provisions of the law pertaining thereto.

This by-law in question is unworkable, and my suggestion is that the City Solicitor be advised to change the 30-gallon clause and the marking of receptacles in gallons to a clause specifying that:

"Scavengers shall use receptacles of specified dimensions only, such dimensions, in inches, to be proved and permanently marked on each receptacle by the Sanitary Inspector."

Anybody can then take a rule and measure such receptacles whilst change in shape will not render them "false and unjust."

I have written the Chief Inspector of Weights and Measures at Belleville for some suggestion which I hope to have before this matter is passed before the committee.—G. N. Gordon.

JAMES K. HACKETT WELL KNOWN ACTOR INHERITS $1,179,383

The total of personal property, consisting of railroad and industrial securities, bonds and mortgages, silver and jewellery, is estimated at $1,466,755; realty at No. 72 Park Avenue, $106,000. The contents of No. 72 Park Avenue are valued at $42,037; jewellery in the vaults of the Guaranty Trust Company, $29,016; silverware and china, $7,173. Among the paintings are "Flowers," by J. Robie, $5,000; "Goats on the Farm," Eugene Verboeckhoven, $1,500; "Returning Home," Ridgway Knight, $1,750; "Girl in the Garden," Ridgway Knight, $1,800; "Arabian Cavalry," Adolph Schreyer, $3,500. Among the articles of jewellery are a diamond pendant, $500; diamond ring, $2,500; diamond earrings, $2,000; diamond sunburst, $4,000.

"Humanity's" Plea For Shop Servers

Some of the objects which the various women's clubs have in view are quite commendable, but there are many other things to which they could more profitably address themselves. One that must be apparent to everybody and elicit the solicitude of humanity is the thoughtlessness, if not selfishness, that actuates some shop-keepers in keeping their employees so many hours behind the counters from day to day, without any let-up or any attempt to relieve the monotony. Especially is it harmful to young girls who stand all day from eight in the morning until eleven at night and then wend their way home as best they can, it may be, for some distance in all sorts of weather, and at that late hour along unfrequented streets. Besides the best medical authorities tell us that any female employment that subjects them to long standing hours, will not only be harmful to themselves but detrimental to their descendants as well. The best services of employees can be obtained by their working eight hours a day, if they work faithfully and well.

Yours truly,
"Humanity."

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

King, Gunner Harry (546 Downie street) Canadian Field Artillary, 1st Canadian Division, Oaklaw Manor Hospital, Shrewsbury, London, Eng. (wounded.)

Mullin, Pte. Chas., 5th Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, St. Vincens Hospital, Paderborn, Germany. (Prisoner of war and wounded.)

CANADIAN NEWSPAPER DIRECTORY

1915 Edition of McKim's is Now Issued.

It is now nearly a quarter of a century since Mr. A. McKim, who established the first independent advertising agency in this country, completed the rather ambitious task of publishing the first directory of Canadian publications. The nine successive editions of this valuable work provide the most complete and detailed record available of the growth of Canadian periodicals.

The 1915 edition, of which we have just received a copy, shows that the great war has not seriously affected the newspapers of Canada. While the birth-rate of new publications has received a check, and the death-rate of the weak ones has perhaps increased a trifle, most of the leading papers, particularly the dailies, show very healthy increases in circulation. Three metropolitan dailies have reached or passed the hundred thousand mark.

A census of the papers listed and described in the 1915 Directory shows nearly 150 dailies, 7 tri-weeklies, 45 semi-weeklies, over 1,065 weeklies, about 40 bi-weeklies or semi-monthlies, 250 monthlies, 3 bi-monthies and 18 quarterlies—a total of over 1,575 publications.

This means approximately one daily to every 10,000 families, and one weekly to every 1,500 families. From this one would infer that for a comparatively new country, Canada is well-read.

A. McKim, Limited, report the usual keen demand for the Canadian Newspaper Directory, which sells at $5. Its red-banded, gold-stamped green cover has become a familiar sight on the desks of advertisers, publishers and business men everywhere who are interested in Canada.

Germany averages one practising physician for each 2,000 inhabitants, the proportion being higher in some of the cities and lower in the rural districts.

ITCHING RASH SPREAD OVER BODY

Could Not Sleep. Clothing Irritated. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Ten Days Well.

230 Dufferin Ave., Winnipeg, Man.—"I became troubled with a rash similar to hives on my face and arms. Later it spread over my body. This rash itched and burned. It got so very itchy I could not sleep. I sat many minutes at a time with clenched hands to keep from irritating the rash and give my skin time to cool. Every time my body became over-heated my clothing irritated the rash.

A Splendid Way to Reduce One's Weight

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat, because there is not enough oxygen ins the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

COUNTY COUNCIL REPLYS TO RECENT CRITICISM OF COUNTY

Have Not Received Credit for all That County Has Given to War Funds—Roads are Good in Spite of Mr. Burnham—Acting Warden Likes the Council's Methods.

OTHER LAST MINUTE ITEMS

In the words of Reeve Griffith of Belmont and Methuen, any criticism of the county's patriotic contribution is dismissed. "We know we are doing our best. I don't pay attention to that kind of talk. It's like water dropping on a duck's back."

The county's attitude is one of equanimity and fortitude realizing that they have done a great deal more work of a patriotic nature than they have received credit for.

Reeve Anderson of Otonabee—They don't consider what has been raised in Lakefield, Norwood, Havelock and other municipalities. It is not necessary that donations should come out of the county tax.

Reeve McIntosh of Monaghan— Of the city's fund $5,000 was raised in North Monaghan, but the township got no credit for it.

Throughout the county women have been most industrious raising Red Cross money and making supplies. Reeve Shaw stated that the county had not made an effort to total the donations from the various municipalities and societies.

Reeve Anderson said he had found that some persons from the county who had received money from the city's fund were not entitled to it. A few who were eligible did not receive [illegible] due to the lack of information in the committee's possession. It would be well for the township to assist in this respect as much as possible.

Painting of Bridges.

Reeve Walsh of Douro moved that the painting of all bridges which had not been contracted for be left over until next year.—Carried.

The bridges which evade this motion are four new ones and two old ones.

Reeve Anderson—The county is lax in regard to the painting of bridges. We do not spend $300 a year on them.

Reeve Walsh said that if there was to be any retrenchment this was one item which could be held over.

Unfair to Teacher.

Reeve Shaw spoke of a teacher in Harvey who had been sent home by Inspector Broderick who said he was not satisfied with her work. The girl went to her boarding house crying. It was understood that the Inspector said she was unqualified and he intended to have her non-professional certificate annulled. Neighbours felt that she should receive some consideration. The chairman of the Schools committee was authorized to investigate

Roads Are Good.

The Council took exception to Mr. J. H. Burnham's strictures regarding the condition of certain roads.

Reeve Shaw— We have some bad roads, as I always told you.

Warden Kindred —The roads we were over yesterday were first class.

A committee went over the very roads mentioned by Mr. Burnham.

Reeve Shaw — Mr. Burnham said that the road south from Buckhorn was abominable. I found it good as long as we stayed on it. In Enniamore and Harvey the roads are fairly good. In Smith they are very fair, but I would say that a certain ditch needs attention.

Reeve McIntosh— I was agreeably disappointed after what we had heard. The townships should be congratulated upon their highways. There were one or two exceptions, but the rest was pretty good considering. Reeves McKee and Foster agreed that the roads were in good condition.

It was moved by Reeves McKee and Lean that this Council express by resolution the opinion after going over them, that the roads in Ennismore, Harvey and Smith are in a fair and satisfactory condition—Carried.

Belmont Bridges.

Discuss Longer Term

A few minutes this morning were devoted to discussing the two year term for township Councils. Reeve Shaw made the strongest speech against the idea which he said was not a new one. By the present one year term ratepayers feel that they can elect a man for one, two, three or as many years as they wish. Any change would be to deprive them of that right. If a man gives good service he may feel that power will not be taken from him.

Reeve Anderson said that an Alberta practice seemed a good one. No man could be nominated unless his papers were signed by 25 electors who have paid their taxes.

However, the question was dropped as the opinion on it was divided.

Reeve Griffith Honoured.

When Warden Kindred left to catch the noon train Reeve Griffith, one of the new and young members of the Council was appointed chairman. The members [illegible] on a speech and Reeve Griffith replied pointedly. As a member of Municipal, C.P.R. Engineers and other committees he has received extensive experience with men. "I must say I never met with such an honourable and straightforward bunch of men as this Council. I like the way they do business. If they intend to do a thing they say they will do it. If something does not appeal to them they say so. They are outspoken. They say what they have in their heads and that's my idea of men. You know where you are at. I thank the members for the courteous way I have been treated. I came here to do the best I could for my municipality and I feel I got a square deal. I am pleased with what I got and I feel that I got it with the assistance of the Warden and the members.

J. A. JOBE.

Reeve Shaw—You hold a record. You're the first man who has sat in the Warden's chair with only six months' experience.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Judgment Has Been Reserved

Case of Mahood vs. Hayes Closed So Far as Jury is Concerned.

The case of Frederick T. Mahood vs. John Hayes, which has occupied the attention of the County Court since Wednesday last, came to a close last evening with the return of the jury's findings on a number of questions that were submitted to them. Plaintiff sued defendant for $220.04, said to be balance due for concrete work in which plaintiff's concrete mixer figured together with his own labour.

Mahood was represented by Mr. R. Ruddy, and the defendant by Mr. D. O'Connell. Argument on the findings of the jury has been reserved. His Honour Judge Huycke will determine the quantity of work performed by the plaintiff on the C. G. E. contract. Judgment will be based on the following findings of the jury:

How many days, at $7 per day, did the plaintiff work for the defendant, with his mixer on the Monaghan sidewalk contract, for which he could be paid, and what do you allow him therefore?

Jury's answer, 13 1-2 days—$94.50.

Was the price agreed on for the C.G.E. contract, $1 per cubic yard, or 4 cents per cubic foot?

Answer—$1.00 per cubic yard.

Did the plaintiff, by his contract, agree to smooth the upper surface of the cement work on said contract?

Answer—Yes.

If he did so, did he smooth it as agreed?

Answer—No.

If not, how much, if anything, do you allow defendant for such neglect or omission?

Answer—$22.10.

Was there or not at time of contract a custom or usage applicable to such work and contract as this, where defendant put up the forms, for the plaintiff contractor to be paid for all openings not filled?

Answer—No.

THIS ROOSTER HAS HORNS JUST LIKE A DEER

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 19.— At the Brookside Zoological Gardens, in this city, far from the maddening animal life of Winsted, Conn., there lives a rooster, by name, Joseph, that has horns. There can be no doubt of their formation, and T. J. Muldoon, one of the most easily recognized coop keepers in the world, asserts that they have grown nearly half an inch in three months' time. The unique ornaments are located on the rooster's heavy comb and a short distance from the brush.

All sorts of explanations of the phenomenon have been offered by the thousands who have been attracted to the rooster and who have observed the horns growing without even being watered. Some believe, that the rooster's parents were boneheads, in a sense, and others have voiced the opinion that the rooster is the product of crossing a horned owl and a hen.

"I think that Joseph is the product of environment," said Mr. Muldoon. "He is situated right near the deer cages, and the ambition to have horns may have become an obsession with him. He has concentrated his mind on the matter and being a very, very determined rooster has succeeded in a mighty effort to have what he wanted. If it is not that I have no idea what it is."

Which would seem to prove that Mr. Muldoon has no idea what it is.

CLEOPATRA'S SECRET DISCOVERED

Women have for centuries marvelled at the ability of the Eastern women to keep their complexion fresh and youthful. It is a matter of history that Cleopatra ruled by her beauty, but her method of retaining her beauty was always kept a close secret.

It was surmised that she used some sort of a skin food, but the nature of the latter was only recently revealed by an Arab who claims to be a lineal descendant of the Egyptian queen. He gave the secret to a Canadian traveller, with permission to prepare it for general use. It is available to the public at all drug stores under the trade name of "Usit." Usit Mfg. Co., Ltd., 476 Roncesvalles avenue, Toronto.

RECITAL BY PUPILS OF MISS B. ELCOME

The piano pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music staff gave a charming recital at the hall last evening. The ability displayed by these young people was the subject of much favourable comment and reflected great credit on the painstaking efforts of the teacher. Those taking part were Misses Frieda Jobe, Ruth Mann, Gwenyth Peters, Martha Kirn, Louise White, Annie and Gladys Sanderson, Alice Cocks, Jean Kidd, Marjorie Stenton, Florence Harrison, Jean Kelly, Jean Milburn, Alma Morrison, Helen Thompson, Grace Read, Ethel Buckham Olga Fowler and Masters. William Breyfogle, Jack Milburn, Alex. Elliott, Donald Sanderson, Campbell and Donald Jordan, Robert Breckenridge, Norman Foot and Gordon Lamb.

After the recital the pupils and their teacher were photographed.

W.O.W. Excursion Delightful Day

The Woodmen of the World excursion to Hastings yesterday provided a delightful sail down the Otonabee, Rice Lake and the Trent River. The Stony Lake could have carried more passengers, but as it was there was a pleasant crowd. Three of the Head Council members were present — Dr. W. S. Harrison, Head Council Commander, Toronto; Sovereign J. H. Saunders, Head Banker, London, Ont.; Head Manager Sovereign John Manning, of London. The picnickers waited for the lacrosse match. Tucker's Orchestra provided dance music, especially on the return trip, during the four hours from Hastings up. Mr. Arthur Vass had charge of the dance programme, and everybody had an enjoyable time. Local officers present were Asd. Graham, past council commander; C. J. Hicks, Council Commander, and E. W. Waterman, Clerk The boat crew was very considerate.

words were misunderstood as meaning an immediate demand for military conscription and labour compulsion.

The Liberals, Labourites and Irish, already peevish because of the substitution of the coalition for the Liberal government, became dangerously restive. Thus it was such a small incident as the proposal to appoint James Campbell the Irish Lord Chancellor, which created a grave Ministerial crisis and, if persisted in, would undoubtedly have destroyed the new Ministry.

It is evidence of this atmosphere of alarming and senseless rumour that the proposal to appoint Campbell was described by parliamentary cynics as a deliberate trick to procure Asquith's resignation and Lloyd George's Premiership.

JOHN DILLON'S SPEECH.

John Dillon brought things to a head by an impassioned speech, denouncing either military conscription or labour compulsion. The speech, which was resoundingly cheered, revealed the abyss of violent and hitherto unexpressed hostility by the Liberals and the Irish. In the meantime there were ominous warnings from the Labor leaders that any attempt to apply compulsion to workingmen would bring disastrous results and would defeat Lloyd George's patriotic desire to speed up ammunition making.

I describe this most recent approach to a ministerial crisis to bring into greater relief the extraordinary transformation which this week shows in atmosphere and temper. The Lloyd George myth has vanished in unsubstantial air and the debate on the new war credit of £250,000,000 gave Asquith an opportunity for explaining the genisis of the coalition government. We seized the opportunity by delivering a magnificent speech, which not only convinced but deeply moved the House of Commons. There were several passages of an intimate personal note which brought out his sense of his enormous responsibilities and revealed his torture at parting from his old friends. Once even he almost broke down as he spoke mournfully of his ambition, more than satisfied, and replaced by a weariness at his burden.

SUPERB ORATORY.

Once more Asquith's superb oratory saved the situation and conquered the entire House with the exception of one or two members, who uttered carping criticisms regarding the past. Dillon, intervening happily for the second time during these momentous days, seized upon the occasion by declaring the perfect confidence of the Irish party in Asquith. He announced that as much as he and every member of the Irish party objected to the disappearance of the old Ministry and the creation of the new — especially with Sir Edward Carson as one of its members—the entire Irish party was determined to give the Ministry its full support to carry the war to a successful issue.

His declaration was received with universal applause. Even Bonar Law, his most ardent enemy in the old days of the Home Rule fight, joined in the cheer.

The net result was that Asquith was again supreme and the whole House determined to stand by him as the one man whose tact and intellect can maintain the unity of the House and nation.

PERIOD OF PROBATION OVER.

The period of difficult probation is over for the new Ministry. All fear of dissension has disappeared, and in the meantime all talk of compulsion in any shape, either of labour or recruits, has ended in smoke. Lloyd George, with his characteristic common sense, is negotiating with the trade union leaders and finding common ground for action, whereby the working men will give a maximum of labour to the production of ammunition with unforced good will.

There is also the feeling that Lloyd George's tremendous energy and power is inspiring the people with his contempt for red tape and that he will send our troops shells and ammunition in such abundance as will make it possible to drive the Germans out of France.

This mission of Lloyd George's marks a new epoch in the war from many points of view. It comes, also at a time when there is evidently a deeper feeling of the difficulties of the gigantic task of beating Germany. John Bull is not more resolute than he was but is more serious. All the easy optimism of the early days of the war has disappeared, and has been replaced by the deeper realization of what war demands.

A CRY FOR NEWS.

There is a cry for more news, whether good or bad. Everybody has nerved himself to hearing the worst and unpleasant news brings only the comment that the war will be longer but that the result will be the same.

Quotations from German newspapers show the creation in the German mind of an imaginary England, trembling under the terror of the Zeppelins.

As a matter of fact London was never calmer than it is to-day. It pursues its steady way in perfect oblivion to the Zeppelins. To us it is clear that England must destroy Prussian militarism or abdicate from any claim of being a great nation.

Great Britain and her peoples will shrink from no sacrifice rather than see Germany triumph over her free civilisation. She has been able already to begin to count the cost, both in lives and in money, but realises that the task is but begun and that the cost will mount steadily until the final overwhelming blow which will crush Prussia.

It is a curious fact that the House of Commons can not honour its members who have died in battle as does the French Chamber of Deputies.

When I was in Paris recently I was taken, of course, to the meeting place of the Chamber where, around the seats of more than one deputy there was a garland of the tricolour with crepe intertwined, marking the death on the field of battle of the deputy who had turned soldier.

MEMBERS KILLED.

Two members of our House of Commons have been killed at the front, nine have been wounded and two others are prisoners in the hands of the Germans. It is impossible, however, to follow the example of the French in honouring them, even if British national characteristics permitted such public demonstration of our innermost feelings.

The difficulty is that it is hard to say what particular seat in the House belongs to any member. The House of Commons is perhaps the only legislative chamber in the world which does not make an allotment of seats.

Aside from the matter of honouring the members who have fallen in their country's service, the question has come up in another form. Owing to the fact that there are, roughly, only two seats for every three members, the House has in the past established the rule that presence at prayers preempts a seat for the rest of that day. The member, however, has to repeat the process every afternoon unless he happens to be one of those ancient parliamentary figures to whom respect allots unusual privileges.

There is one class of member who does get a lease on his seat—the members of the existing or of the preceding government. They are entitled to sit on what are called the Front Benches. The distinction is valued highly. When you speak of a Front Bench man you indicate that he is a man who has "arrived." Apart from the advantage of having a fairly secure seat without the trouble of attending prayers at the early hour when they are said, he has the greater advantage of being more certain of being called by the Speaker.

CONSIDERABLE RIVALRY.

It will be understood that there is considerable rivalry for the seats on the front Opposition bench. Now the Speaker has had a new difficulty, for the leaders of the Opposition have ceased to have a separate existence; they have become merged in the National Ministry which has recently been established. The Speaker has solved the problem to a great extent by allowing Privy Councillors, whose claim to places on the Front Benches have been longest recognised, to take seats on the Front Opposition Bench irrespective of party. As all sorts and conditions of political opinion are represented among the Privy Councillors, it is a new and unprecedented experience, and every one is looking forward eagerly to see its results.

The elevation of Sir Stanley Buckmaster to the peerage is regarded as a merited reward for one of the hardest workers in Britain since the war started. When F. E. Smith was relieved of the chief censorship Sir Stanley, who is now Lord Buckmaster of Cheddington, was assigned to the difficult work. This was followed by the place given him as High Lord Chancellor in the coalition cabinet, which is the highest judicial position in England.

THE GREAT AMERICAN PECKSNIFF—How the "New York Sun" cartoons Mr. William Jennings Bryan. "Mr. Pecksniff wore his apostolic look. His unruffled smile proclaimed: 'I am the messenger of peace.' If ever man combined all the qualities of a lamb, with touch of dove, and not a dash of the crocodile or the suggestion of the serpent, that man was he."—Martin Chuzzlewit.

Crop Situation Is Improving

Conditions Seldom Better in Peterboro' County—Grain Crops Show High Average.

At the present time the world at large is more interested in Canada's wheat production than ever before, and crop reports concerning both eastern and western Canada are receiving considerable attention. In Peterborough County the crop situation is excellent. In fact many of the older residents of the district declare it was never better than it is to-day. Rain is frequent and abundant enough to ensure sufficient moisture, while on the other hand the weather is warm enough to produce the desired development.

Condition of Field Crops.

Measured in percentage of a standard of 100 representing a full crop, all the grain crops were reported as showing a high average, the points being as follows: Fall wheat, 94, spring wheat 96, oats and barley 92, rye 91, peas 93, and mixed grains 91. Hay and clover with 96, pastures and alfalfa with 87 are not so good, these crops having suffered from cold and frosty nights during May. Converting the points of standard condition for the principal grain crops into a scale of 100 representing the average of the past five years 1910-1914, the result—assuming conditions between now and harvest to be equal to the average—is an anticipated increase in the yield per acre of 15.6 per cent. for rye. For oats and barley the indications are for yields slightly below the average, or to the extent of 1.5 per cent. for oats and 0.7 per cent. for barley.

Damage From Drink is Worse Than Submarines

"Drink is doing us more damage than all the German submarines put together." Who said that? Lloyd George the English Chancellor of the Exchequer. He is no temperance fanatic, but a cool-headed statesman speaking from broad knowledge and inside information. And what he said is literally and statistically true of England, and the same principle applies to our own country. The submarines are limited to the sea and to a narrow range within the sea, but strong drink goes everywhere over sea and land through the air and steals into all the resorts of men and into the homes of the people. It can slip into the most hidden and secure recesses where a mother thinks she has her boy safe and stab him as a torpedo slips under the sea and explodes against the side of a ship. Submarines are secret and stealthy enemies, but not half so subtle and deceptive as strong drink. Submarines can destroy only a few ships worth a few millions of dollars, but strong drink destroys more property than all the battleships and fires and floods of the world. Submarines can kill only a few men, but strong drink slays them by countless thousands and has filled more graves than all the wars of history. England cannot stop German submarines but Russia has stopped strong drink. What Russia can do Canada can do, and if we are as wise and progressive and courageous as the land of the Czar we will clear our coasts and country of this enemy that is doing us more damage than all the submarines of the world could do us put together.—H. Arnott, M.B., M.C. P.S.

HEN RAISES CHICK TO BE A SAUSAGE.

One of thirteen chicks hatched in a setting at Elizabeth, N.J., yesterday, has a tail like a French poodle. It also has four legs, two of which seem to be those of a dog. John Lauterbach, in whose rear yard at No. 520 Spruce street, the freak was born, has a muzzle ready the minute the strange animal starts to bark.

The hen which hatched this oddity is under suspicion. However, Mr. Lauterbach and his friends have been unable to find a French poodle in the neighborhood.

DETECTIVE RICCI HAS LIVELY CHASE

VANCOUVER, June 19—It was not without considerable trouble and excitement that Detective Inspector Jackson and Detective Joseph Ricci rounded up a gang of alleged copper thieves, who it was said, had raided a junk dealer's establishment, on Railway street and had "stripped" several hundred pounds of cable. The men, who were all Russians, gave their names as John Frepinv, John Hainischew and George Crouschek.

Inspector Jackson and Detective Ricci were informed that suspected "junk pirates" were in the vicinity, and went in search of them. They found the three men with a large quantity of copper telephone cable, and placed them under arrest. The patrol waggon was sent for, but before its arrival one of the Russians made a dash for liberty. Detective Ricci at once started in pursuit while Inspector Jackson stood guard over the other two and effectually secured them from escape.

The man tore down Railway Street to Gore Avenue, up Gore to Alexander and along Alexander to Jackson Avenue, then down on to the railway tracks. He had a long start at first, but the detective soon closed up on him, and drawing his revolver, fired into the ground. This only caused the Russian to increase his speed, and again the distance between them widened. Again the officer shot, but his quarry only increased his speed. Off went Ricci's coat and then he dropped his heavy baton and handcuffs, keeping his revolver and increased his speed. Dodging and turning the Russian led the detective in and out around piles of lumber and machinery, but still Ricci gained on him. Then the man took to the railway track and finally dodged and tried to scale a bank, and here came to grief, for the detective grabbed him by the leg and hung on, finally pulling him down into the dust, where the Russian surrendered. Gathering up his scattered property Detective Ricci brought his captive back where the inspector was standing guard over his prisoners.

Detective Ricci, referred to above, is married to a granddaughter of Mr. James Sutherland, 323 George street, who was formerly Miss Mary De. Long of this city.

ANCIENT RELIC SELLS FOR ONLY FIFTY DOLLARS

New York, June 19.—Wet grounds and coy bidding illustrated an attempt to sell Glen Island at auction yesterday, together with all the buildings and amusement places thereon. Sale closed when the museum went for $7,347. It cost the late John H. Starin about $100,000, and was recently appraised at more than $100,000. Then Joseph P. Day adjourned the auction sine die.

It was clear that Glen Island and the properties thereon were to go at an amazingly low figure if at all. For the real property, carrying a heavy mortgage, no bid was made.

When the grand casino and cafe was offered there was no sound to interrupt the auctioneer's voice. Offers of the Little German Village and the Starnbur Castle were greeted by grave silence. The bathing pavilion, with old fashioned, air cooled suits and a great number of uncertain padlocks, aroused no attention and the band stand was useful only as an auctioneer's rostrum.

But when the museum was offered Glen Island rang with voices bold and merry as of old for everything was there, from a collection of assorted nuts to a Phillipine swordfish or a carload of Confederate money.

When the auctioneer reached the number of an Egyptian Princess (332 B.C. and a perfect peach) bidding became active, and A. B. Morse, a Coney Island showman, offered the top price, $50. Then some one bought a cannon used by General Sherman on the march to the sea for $45, and it began to look as if some business would be done. Along toward the end, though, when a piano made for John Jacob Astor in 1795 and an autograph letter from Mr. Astor ordering it made went for $5 it began to look threatening without.

At the end of the bidding Harry Haggerty, of No. 180 East 111th street, offered $7,347 for the entire museum as a single parcel and the bid was accepted.

By saturating the bodies of animals with certain essential oils a German university professor has found that he can study their internal structure even better than by using X-rays.

REEVE SHAW SLIGHTLY INJURED IN A MISHAP

Reeve Shaw, of Harvey, received a cut in his upper lip and several abrasions on his face in an automobile mishap last night returning from Buckhorn. He was one of the committee appointed to visit Gannon's Bridge. Coming through Smith on their way back to the city their automobile took to the ditch. No serious damage was done, and Mr. Shaw was the only one who received an injury.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Peterboro' Lacked Offensive Strength Against Hastings

The Peterborough Lacrosse Club got rid of enough ragged play in Hastings yesterday to hold them for the rest of the season. The score of 12—2 in favour of Hastings scarcely represents Peterborough's share in the game. If Johnnie Sutherland's boys had scored first in the second quarter the result might have been different. Hastings had notched three in the first quarter and Peterborough went out to even up, but the attack lacked direction. The range-finders couldn't locate the Hastings net and the determined attack fell short.. McCoy had difficulty in finding the nets and when he did locate them Rivard was always there. Todd was a little more fortunate and shaped up as a find, but there was not enough support to the inside and outside home attack. To the weak attack was added a lot of sloppy passing that fooled many an attack on the Hastings goal.

Flemming stopped a bunch of hard shots, several times relieving when Hastings got right inside. A few of those that got by him looked easy.

At the outset Hastings was all over the Peterborough defence. Flemming stopped a couple right off the reel. Todd went in close but mussed the play. After Scriver had scored, Halpin muffed on a play near Hasings goal. Todd fell when he was within striking distance and his shot from the ground missed. Reynolds went in toward the end of the quarter, but Rivard blocked nicely.

Second Quarter.

Todd got in close but was bodied by Power. At the other end Flemming blocked a shot. The play went up and down several times. Scriver and Clapper shot wild and Hastings' home was in the air. McCoy's shot went wild and a few minutes later missed another. Flemming stopped a hot one. Kennealy and McCoy got inside but Rivard was there. Todd got by the defence but missed an easy chance. Just then Hastings decided that Peterborough did not want the game and Fred Dodd recommenced scoring.

From that on there was nothing to it but Hastings.

Peterborough felt the absence of Robertson, Hamilton and Harold Dunford. The defence worked well until half time, when the failure of the home to get goals took the jump out of them. Jack Crough played a useful game throughout.

Hastings team worked well together. Scriver on the home buzzed around a lot. Bert Dodd and Joe Power on the defence were conspicuous.

Referee— T. P. Lancaster, Havelock.

The goals were scored by the following: L. Scriver, Doonan, Harry Dodd, 2nd quarter, F. Dodd, F. Dodd, Scriver; 3rd quarter, F. Dodd, H. Dodd, [illegible], Scriver, H. Dodd.

Todd scored both of Peterborough's goals.

The Up-to-date Box Score in Baseball

When are they going to stop adding new columns or new underlines to the baseball box scores and summaries? To what are we tending? What will the scoresheets look like in a few more years? A separate score for the umpires, reading something like this, might make a hit:

	*C.D.	I.D.	Pct.
Smith (plate)..	121	29	.807
Jones (bases)..	24	10	.706

*Correct decisions.
Incorrect decisions.

Or a department table, showing number of kicks by each player, with a 50-point handicap for every man put off the field.

Or a special table for the ladies to register their "impression scores" showing how the different players looked to them, the table containing spaces to set down the headings "Handsome," "Perfect Darling," "Awful Ugly," "Caveman," "Very Polished," etc.

A New York paper, just two or three years ago, added a column for bone plays in the box score; but it don't last. After each score came out there would be insistent inquiries for the fellows that wrote it, and it would take Jess Willard to keep a full score along those lines, with Jim Coffey as assistant statisician. Still, the world is all for progress and novelty these days— let's have some more column in the box scores!

The Features of the Big Show Next Week

We always enjoy an old-fashioned one-ring circus, with all the old-time features that are the favourites with both young and old, such as the Dog, Pony and Monkey circus of the H. T. Piersons Canadian Shows, coming to this city all next week at the Exhibition grounds.

The many startling surprises that are in store for you at this tent will make you more than a pleased spectator. You will enjoy the antics of the clowns, the various acts, etc., that all help to make this little show one of the classiest and best entertainment that you have ever had the opportunity to witness.

A complete circus of captiviating pets indescribable in their beauty, are the performing dogs, comprising of Praying, Laughing, Reading and Speaking dogs also dogs which do the somersault sing act the clown and do tumbling acts. These dogs are of every well-known breed and species. It is truly a great show and you will agree with us yourself after you have witnessed the performance.

The trained goats and the ponies are a marvel in theirself, and the entertainment is for the grown-ups as well as the little folk.

The management has secured one of the best trainers in Canada, Mr. Malmconson, of St. Catharines, who is known throughout the continent as the foremost in his line, and he is to be complimented on the result of his long and patient training.

Numerous other features help to make this the biggest and best show of its kind that has ever paid your city a visit.

BEAUTIFUL BECKONING HANDS.

Beckoning hands at the gateway to-night,
Faces a-shining with radiant light;
Eyes looking down from yon heavenly home,
Beautiful hands they are beckoning "come."

Beckoning hands of a mother whose love
Sacrificed life its devotion to prove;
Hands of a father to memory dear
Beckon up higher the waiting ones here.

Beckoning hands of a little one, see!
Baby voice calling, O mother, for thee;
Rosy cheeked darling, the light of the home,
Taken so early, is beckoning "come".

Beckoning hands of a husband, a wife,
Watching and waiting the loved one of life;
Hands of a brother, a sister, a friend
Out from the gateway to-night they extend.

Brightest and best of that glorious throng,
Centre of all and the theme of their song,
Jesus our Saviour, the Pierced One stands,
Lovingly calling with beckoning hands.

(Refrain)
Beautiful hands, beckoning hands,
Calling the dear ones to heavenly lands;
Beautiful hands, beckoning hands,
Beautiful, beautiful beckoning hands

Scout News

All members of the Boy Scouts are asked to meet to-morrow (Sunday) afternoon at 1.45 p.m. at the armouries, and march to the Little Lake cemetery to decorate the grave of Scout Allan Foster, who died last June. No staves, drums or bugles required.

All Scouts are asked to meet at the armouries on Monday, June 21st, at 7.30 p.m. in full uniform.

The Scouts are going to run an excursion on Monday, June 28th to South Beach by steamer Geneva.

WEALTHY YOUNG PEOPLE IN THE ROLE OF THIEVES

SEA CLIFF, L. I., June 19.— Soon after Mrs. John Conlin and Donald Clapham, two of the most prominent persons in the north shore colony, had been arrested her husband said today that he had caused the arrests because he believed that she was injuring his family's name. The arrest of Mrs. Conlin, better known among her friends as Ruth Taylor, and Clapham caused a great sensation, particularly as the charge is burglary. Mrs. Elizabeth Watson is the complainant.

Mr. Conlin, son of Daniel Conlin and a large property owner, said he had been following his wife for a year and had obtained sufficient evidence to warrant the arrest on a charge of burglary.

Mrs. Conlin, who is only twenty-two years old and known as one of the prettiest girls on the North Shore, left her husband about a year ago and sent formal announcements to her friends that thereafter she would be known as Ruth Taylor, her maiden name.

She was held for the Grand Jury but was released on bail furnished by her mother, Mrs. Lucinda B. Taylor, one of the largest property holders in this section. She is her mother's only heir.

Mrs. Taylor also provided a bail bond for Clapham. Both he and Mrs. Conlin had been sent to calls before her mother appeared. Clapham, who is twenty years old, is the son of Alfred Clapham, one of the most prominent residents of this village and now head of a family holding large property interests.

For a year the village has talked about the fast automobile rides of Mrs. Conlin and Clapham. They usually were seen together and were on the roads at all hours of the day and night.

During the winter numerous cottages, closed between seasons, have been [illegible] and robbed. The police have been unable to find the thieves. Clapham and Mrs. Conlin even volunteered to aid the police and in their automobile hurried from one place to another in the county, ostensibly seeking burglars.

"I still love my wife and want to do everything I can to save her," said Mr. Conlin, "but she will have to give up her companions. I have been following her for a year and it was upon the information I obtained that she was arrested, accused of breaking into and robbing Mrs. Watson's summer cottage.

"We have found where articles taken from many of these cottages have been sold in New York. In several instances the amount obtained was a large sum. I have pleaded with my wife but she would not give up Clapham, and therefore I caused her arrest, believing it the only thing to do."

New York Stocks

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

NEW YORK, June 19.—Trading was very light during the first half-hour and practically all of it was in industrial list with Baldwin Locomotive Co. and distillers receiving much more than their usual share of attention. In connection with the rise of 1 3-4 in Baldwin to 86 attention was directed to the fact that the directors at a meeting in May only deferred action on dividend and did not definitely decide to pass it. When the subject was considered the conditions in the locomotive industry were much depressed, but now there is a substantial improvement and it is predicted that a dividend will be acted upon and paid later.

Supply of Distillers seemed to be small and price advanced easily to new high record at 28, a net gain of 1 5-8.

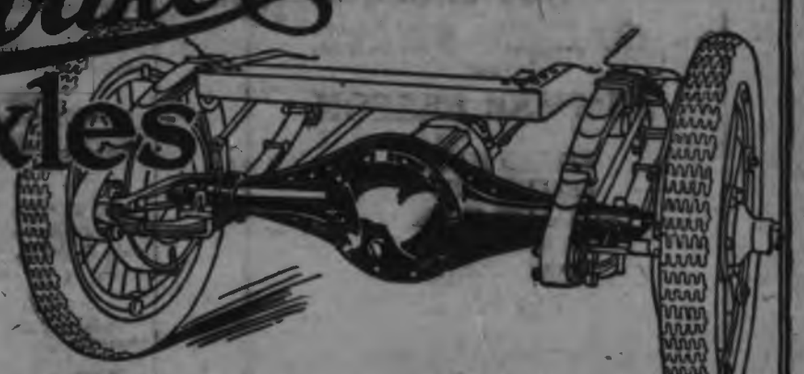
Studebaker axles



—not what they call a floating type but a REAL full-floating axle

You take one of the semi-floating types of axles and the axle shaft not only turns the wheels but carries the weight of the car and also has to take up the side-thrusts. It has THREE tasks laid on that one slender shaft of steel. And if that shaft breaks — off flies the wheel.

Two minutes to remove shaft

This Studebaker FULL-floating Axle, on the other hand, frees the shaft of everything except the one task of turning the wheels. The axle housing runs thro' the hub and with TWO Timken Bearings in each of the hubs, it rids the axle shaft of the car's weight and the side-thrusts, too. You can take the axle shaft out — and the wheel stays on. You can tow the car along with the shaft out of the housing.

Take one of the so-called "floating types" of axles, and to remove the shaft, you have to take the wheel off. It's a messy job. But if you happen to have to remove the axle shaft from this Studebaker FULL-floating Axle, you simply unscrew 8 nuts and draw the shaft out. Two minutes and a common wrench — that's all.

—and a STRONG steel housing.

Take the axle housing of the two types. The "semi-floating type" always has a malleable casting. Now, you know castings are weighty —and, also, they can break. Doesn't take so much to break them, either.

But Studebaker uses a steel stamping for the axle housing — with folded edges to re-enforce it. And it is not only LIGHTER but VERY much stronger.

But you can't begin to compare the two axles. For the simple reason that the FULL-floating Rear Axle is admittedly so much better that every high-grade, high-priced car uses it. Salesmen for other cars will say: "Oh! yes! we have a floating axle — but look at our motor here a minute." Or else they'll try to brazen it out and say that they have so many thousands of cars on the roads and haven't had the slightest trouble.

That's just a matter of salesmanship, if you like to call it that. The FACT, as any mechanical engineer will tell you, is that the earlier types of axles, that they call "floating types," are NOT as strong, durable or as accessible.

And the thing to do, when you go to look at some other car and the salesman tries to dodge on the matter of rear axles, is to —ask him if his car has a FULL-floating Rear Axle like the Studebaker has, and make him show you.

Must Return To Lindsay

Sentence Imposed on Woman Who is Accused of Being a Vagrant —Known in Peterboro'.

TORONTO, June 19.—Sarah Carter was accused of being a vagrant in yesterday's police court. She is a married woman and was picked up by Acting Detective George Young.

"It seems," said Mr. Corley, "that she was married to a man who deserted from the troops at Lindsay, and then took her to Peterborough and joined a regiment there. He deserted there and came to Toronto. I think that she should be sent back to Lindsay, and the man kept until the military authorities are notified."

The young woman was then remanded for a week.

Scaffold Broke With 15 Workmen

On Monday last a bad accident occurred on the farm of Mr. Wm. Moher of Douro while his new barn was being erected. The scaffold on which fifteen men were standing suddenly broke, and the men fell to the floor of the barn, a distance of eighteen feet. About two thousand feet of lumber which was on the scaffold at the time, fell among the men. Mr. W. J. Little, who had charge of operations, received a severe cut on the inside of his right leg and was badly bruised and shaken up; J. McMurray received severe injuries to his head. Wm. Miller, W. Hayes and a number of others were severely shaken up and bruised. The man had a very narrow escape from being killed.—Lakefield News.

Special Meeting Of City Council

City Engineer Will Not Recommend the Laying of Concrete Pavement on George Street.

A special meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday evening to consider the following communication which is signed by City Engineer Parsons. The communication is self-explanatory:

June 18th, 1915.

Gentlemen.—In connection with the action of the Council last night in recommending that George street from McDonnel to Edinburgh be paved with concrete, I wish to draw your attention to one or two matters.

1. This street is not among those which were considered for concrete according to the instructions of your Council when the specifications were drawn up.

The traffic on this street is much heavier and is concentrated on each side of the Street Railway tracks. For this reason I would draw up much different specifications for George street than for the streets considered. The pavement should be thicker and a richer mixture used for the wearing surface.

2. There are car tracks on this street. In view of the experience of Toronto and other cities which have tried to use concrete in the track allowance, where it has been a failure. I cannot recommend its use in this place. It would be necessary to use some kind of block in the track allowance.

3. This street not being considered for concrete until last night, the contractor's were not asked for prices for block pavement. This complicates the letting of a contract as this price would have to be arranged with the contractor. Unless he could make arrangements with the other contractors to get his blocks from them, he would be at a great disadvantage.

4. The street will have to be closed to traffic for from ten days to two weeks after the pavement is finished. This applies both to vehicles and street cars, as traffic must be kept off the concrete until it has had time to set thoroughly.

If the city did the work by day labour the same objections would hold good. If the specifications are changed as they should be for this street the estimate of cost will be increased by fifteen (15) cents, making the cost $1.70 per yard.

Under any circumstances I do not recommend the laying of a concrete pavement on this street.

Yours truly,
R. H. PARSONS,
City Engineer.

Inspector After Illegal Fishing

Alfred Lefevre was this morning fined $5 and costs at the Police Court when it was proved that he had a pole and snare in his possession on May 24th last. Ex-Mayor Rush, in the absence of Magistrate Dumble, occupied the Magisterial chair.

Fishery Inspector Watt stated that he visited the place, suspecting illegal fishing. He did not see Lefevre using a snare, but he found one there, and there were scales on the snare.

The Inspector said that he has had a suspicion of Lefevre for some time. He never spoke to him directly as he was waiting for evidence.

James Colquhoun, a young lad from Matthews-Blackwell Co., was the next witness. On May 24th he was at the George Street Wharf and saw Mr. Watt there and had some conversation with him. He also saw the accused who had a pole in his hand. He threw the pole down before Mr. Watt came up. Witness saw Mr. Watt take up the pole but he did not see him take the snare off it. He could not say positively that Lefevre was fishing with a snare.

The accused went into the box in his own defence, and told his story, denying that the pole belonged to him. He found the pole on the wharf and picked it up and laid it down again.

To Chief Thompson he said he never bought any wire of the kind used for the snare.

Another man pleaded guilty to having three bass in his possession out of season and was fined $5 and costs.

of years. They then removed to Douro near the place where they now live, and it was there that the nucleus of the business, now known as the Curtis Bros.' brick yards, was laid, being established by the elder Mr. Curtis, father of Mr. Mark Curtis. Upon his death it came into the possession of his son. The business was first established on the farm just north of that upon which Mr. Curtis now resides, and the initial output was about 200,000 bricks per year. Thirty years ago Mr. Curtis purchased from Mr. John King the property upon which he now lives, and erected the house which now constitutes his home.

Mr. Curtis conducted the business until nine years ago, handing it over to his sons, three of whom are engaged in the business. Of late years the output has been about 40,000,000 bricks a year. A few days ago the plant was partially destroyed by fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis have five sons and one daughter. Their names are Charles, Albert, George, Edwin and David, and the daughter, Ada. One son, James, died a few years ago.

This evening a family gathering is being held at the home of the bride and groom of sixty years ago, and the second wedding celebration which they have had since the event itself is taking place under most pleasing circumstances. The first celebration was ten years ago to-day, when their golden wedding was celebrated.

SOLDIERS WIVES AND MOTHERS CLUB WORKING

The Soldiers Wives and Mothers Club, which was organized some months ago, by Adjutant McElhiney, and who hold their regular meeting every Friday afternoon in the Temple, packed a good-sized box of necessities for the wounded soldiers at the Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, Eng. Among the articles sent were 600 yards rolled bandages, 114 handkerchiefs, 24 hospital sheets, 12 linen towels, 13 pair socks, 3 rolls of linen, chocolate, tobacco, gum, writing paper and envelopes.

Inside each parcel was an appreciative verse to cheer and comfort those in distress and pains, accompanied by many prayers.

The women have worked hard and long, and with good results.

The Club has already started to get another box ready, and Adjt. McElhiney, who is Honorary President of the Club, has promised them a concert to aid in getting the material to make up for the boys.

The women have done well.

British and French Making Splendid Progress

Austro-Germans Are Closing in on Lemberg, Says Vienna

British and French Have Cut Into Enemy's Lines At Several Points

Great Optimism Prevails in Paris and London---Germany to Discuss Whole Question of Naval Warfare With United States---This Morning's Despatches.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

(By Carl W. Ackerman.)

BERLIN (via The Hague) June 21.—Germany intends to discuss several points, covering the whole question of naval warfare, with the United States before making a definite statement of her future policy concerning submarine operations. The next communitcation sent to Washington probably will open this discussion.

Germany's reply is still in the conversational stage. I learned to-day that thus far there have been no formal exchanges between the American Embassy and the German Foreign Office, such as prefaced the reply to the first American note.

The Kaiser is still at the Galician battle front. It is possible that he will not confer with Dr. Anton Meyer Gerhard, Ambassador Bernstorff's special envoy, until after the German reply is sent to Washington. This circumstance confirms the previous reports that the next German reply will not be final, but will call for further interchanges.

PARIS, June 21.—The French have cut into the enemy's lines at several points. There is marked optimism here and in London.

ROME, June 21.—The Italians have won their first general battle, the heights of Plava having been captured with terrible losses to the Austrians.

LONDON, June 21.—It is stated here that Canada's second division may go to the Dardanelles.

ATHENS, June 21—There are fierce riots in Constantinople and the forts of Adrianople have sent garrisons to secure order.

VIENNA, June 21.—It is officially stated that the Austro-Germans are closing in on Lemberg on three sides.

A Tribute to Pte. Dean

The Examiner has received the following letter from Mr. Alfred O. Tate, of New York, 2nd vice-president of the Tate Electrolytic Water Proofing Company:

Editor Peterborough Daily Examiner,

Sir,—Your issue of the 7th inst. records the death in action on the battlefields in France on the 18th day of May last, in his 23rd year, of my nephew and namesake, Charles Alfred Weller Dean, who enlisted and went to the front with the 79th Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, and refers with generuas appreciation to the lovable personal characteristics which endeared him to all of those who knew him during his school days at the Peterborough Collegiate Institue.

I desire for the information of those who, like myself, cherish his memory—the memory of one who typified the strength, the bravery and the patriotism of aCnadian youth, to supplement your article with a few words concerning his later career. When "Barker" left Peterborough he entered my employ with the object of becoming proficient in a special branch of the electrical industry. The training necessary to achieve this result was unusually severe. It involved the education of the hands as well as the brain and reuired the complete abandonment of all conventional routine. The technique of the work demanded there should be neither day nor night. Al hours of the 24 were equal in relative values. The efficient fulfillment of the onerous duties imposed by these conditions required the exercise of superlative degrees of pluck, persistence and endurance, which are the associates only of rare ambition—and Barker never flinched!

At any hour of the day or night he was not alone ready but eager for tse call to duty. His constant alertness, unchanging amiability and irrepressible buovancy were an inspiration to all of his associates. His rapid grasp and mastery of technique revealed all the qualities of latent genius, and the work of his hands as an artisan complemented fully the activity and breadth of his mentality. At the end of a period usually expended to instill the mere rudiments of this profession he was thoroughly fitted to assume postions of responsibility and authority for which his youth alone disqualified him. Had he been spared his career must necessarily have been a brilliant one. His breadth of intellect, unwavering determination and irreproachable habits, must inevitably have led to a realization of the objects of an ever-present and ardent ambition. His quick, unhesitating response to the call of his country was dictated far more largely by a conscientious conception of duty than by a youthful spirit of adventure.

The supreme sacrifice that he has made on the altar of his country's needs—the high and sacred debt that man is sometimes called upon to pay to God for the blessings of freedom—has not been made in vain. His life and those of his brave young compatriots given up on the soil of France, have not been wasted. They have died in war that those they loved may live in peace, and their example wil inspire and stimulate future generations of Canadians to the fulfill ment of the highest aims and duties of patriotic life.

It is in the presence of an intense and ineradicable personal grief for a loss which never in this world can be replaced, overlaid and rendered talerable by the sense of an exultant pride in the fine achievements of his short life, that I pay this loving tribute to the memory of the best, the dearest, and the noblest boy I have ever known.

ALFRED O. TATE.

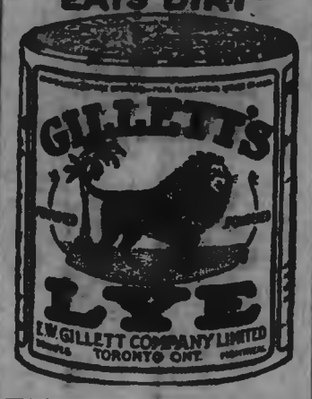
Mr. Asquith's Sons Soon Return to War

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 21. — Lieutenant Herbert Asquith, who returned to London recently fro mthe Dardanelles, where he was wounded, is expected soon to return to the fighting line. His wounds consist of contusions of the face, made by a splinter of a shell, which also knocked out several of his teeth and cut his lips.

Lieutenant Arthur Asquith, another of the Premier's sons, who was wounded in the leg in the Dardanelles two weeks ago, is convalescing in Cairo, and expects to return to active service within a fortnight.

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT



Men Fell Out of the Machine

Warneford Thrown First, Then Needham, When Aeroplane Tipped

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, June 21.—French and British aviators who were present at the Bue aviation field seem to disagree as to just what caused the accident which resulted in the death of Lieut. Reginald A. J. Warneford, the daring aviator recently honoured for his defeat of a German Zeppelin and its crew single-handed and Henry Beach Needham, an American writer who was making a flight above the aviation field. While British officials are inclined to the belief that the propeller broke, the French aviators, who witnessed the accident, declare that Warneford was imprudent and was "steeplechasing" when the machine turned turtle, as an examination of the motor showed that it was in first class condition. It is reported that Warenford spoke of feeling dizzy a few hours before the flight was made, but the British airmen declare that Warneford was feeling well when he made the flight.

It was a perfect day for flying. There was no wind and neither man was strapped to his seat, as it was only intended to make a short flight. While the men in the aviation field were watching Warneford and his companion, they saw the machine suddenly tip and Warneford thrown from his seat. Needham didn't fall until fifty feet from the ground. He struck the propeller shaft a nd was instantly killed.

The bodies of Needham and Warneford remained this afternoon in the English hospital in the Trianlon palace at Versailles. Warneford's body was decorated with a Union Jack while the Stars and Stripes covered that of his companion.

Warneford, at first reported to be a Canadian, was born in Cooch, Behar, India, in 1892. His parents at present reside in India.

Allied Troops Hold Ten Square Miles of Territory On the Gallipoli Peninsula

Russians Are Making Progress on the Lower Nizow River, Says Petrograd War Office---Austrian Statement Says Grodek, Near Lemberg, Has Been Taken by Germans

Special Cable to The Examiner:

VIENNA, June 20.—The official Austrian statement says Grodek, near Lemberg, and Komarno have been taken by Teutonic allies.

LONDON, June 20.—Allied troops who landed at Seddul Bahr hold about ten square miles of territory on Gallipoli Peninsula. The Turks are pressing hard, but have been repulsed at all points.

LONDON, June 20.—The British have occupied [illegible] yards of trenches north of Hooge from which the Germans have been driven out by artillery fire. The artillery duel is continuing with great vigor.

PETROGRAD, June 20.—Russian troops are making progress on the lower Nizow River. At other points the position is satisfactory.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The Governor of Sonora, Mexico, says he will resist with all forces any attempted landing of United States marines in Mexico.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 20.—Lieut.-Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., Fifteenth Battalion and Lieut.-Col. Meighen, Fourteenth Battalion, whose regiments were decimated at St. Julian, will return to Canada to instruct at training camps.

PARIS, June 20.—After a battle ten thousand feet high, a French aviator defeated a German who fell to earth in his machine dead.

PARIS, June 20.—An official statement to-day says there is nothing to add to last night's official statement, which mentioned steady progress being made along the entire front, despite stubborn resistance by the enemy, also the destruction of the railway station and munition depots at Munster.

CAPE HAITEIN, Hayti, June 20.—Cape Haitein was captured yesterday by Government forces, marines having been landed from the French cruiser Descartes.

....PARIS, June 20.—A French torpedo boat captured a small Greek sailing ship between Cape Matapan, Greece, and Crete, navigating with false papers and carrying the mission of Turkish officers sent to Enver Pasha into Tripoli.

LONDON, June 2[illegible].—Servian troops assisted by the British Naval Brigade, have occupied Burazzo in Albania.

Plant Working on Uniforms For British Army Is Wrecked at Detroit

Attempt Also Made to Destroy Armoury at Windsor But Dynamite Was Discovered in Time—Work of a German Spy it is Believed.

Special to The Examiner:

DETROIT, June 21.—A terrific explosion, alleged to be due to bombs set by German sympathisers early to-day, wrecked the overall manufacturing plant of Peabody & Co., Ltd., and the Leather Label Overall Co., in Walkerville Ont., just across the river from here. August Frank, a German-American, 23, was arrested in connection with the explosion, but denied any knowledge of it.

The plant had been working overtime on a million dollar order for uniforms for the British Army.

The entire front of a three-storey concrete and steel building was shattered. Early estimates place the loss at $10,000.

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP ARMOURY.

DETROIT, Mich., June 21—Attempt to blow up the Armoury at Windsor, Ont., was made early to-day, simultaneously with the wrecking of the overall manufacturing plant of Peabody & Co., Ltd.

Two hundred Canadian soldiers were asleep in the Armoury when the guard accidentally stumbled across twenty-six sticks of dynamite, with the fuse partly burned.

It is believed on the Windsor side that a German spy smuggled himself across the border during the night and set the bombs.

NEWS TRAVELS SLOWLY IN AFRICA

News travels slowly to East Africa, according to army officers arriving here from remote posts.

At the start of the war one officer received a wire:

"War declared; arrest all aliens," the telegrapher having omitted the word "enemy" before aliens. Three days later he wired:

"Have locked up seventeen Frenchmen of a scientific expedition, nine Belgians, a Russian botanist, four American hunters, two Chinese cooks, and six German traders. With whom are we at war"

Weeks after the war began a telegram filtered through with news from a place called Petrograd. In a musty old atlas an officer found Petrograd described as an unimportant hamlet in South Dakota, U.S.A.

"So the Yankees have come into it," he observed.

It was not until weeks later that East Africa learned that the name of St. Petersburg had been changed to Petrograd.

Without any means of protection against the pressure of the water a Greek sponge fisherman recently made a dive to a depth of 262 feet, believed to be the world's record.

It's a good thing for a man's peace of mind that he doesn't know what other people know about him.

For street cars which at times run through gas filled tunnels there has been invented a compressed air operated atomizer to spray a disinfecting solution ahead of a car.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

Wants Dead Burned On the Battlefront

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 21.—The French Chamber of Deputies to-day adopted a measure proposed by Mr. Lucien Dumont to burn unidentified bodies at the front and to bury those which had been identified.

Mr. Dumont said the question was an urgent one on account of the heat the military authorities not being in a position to bury all bodies promtly during heavy fighting. He discussed the religious and sentimental reasons against incineration and cited precedents established in other wars. To-day the sole effectual measure of tvoiding contagion, he said, was to burn the dead on the field of battle.

STRONG PROTESTS

Special to The Examiner:

"Newspapers of all shades of opinion are protesting energetically against the capture of the Swedish steamer Torsten and the sinking of the Swedish steamer Verdandi, both of which carried certificates that they had nothing aboard which the Germans could consider contraband. Some of the newspapers are discussing the question whether, in addition to protests, the Swedish Government should not consider adopting some form of reprisal."

The British steamship Ailsa, of Leith, was sunk by a German submarine to-day off the south-east coast of Scotland. The crew was saved. The steamer Ailsa was of 876 tons gross.

WAS SUNK BY AN AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

VENICE, via Chiasso and Paris, June 21.—Details have been received here of the recent remarkable engagement between an Italian and an Austrian submarine, in which the Italian craft was vanquished. This is the first time in the history of naval engagements that an encounter between submarines has been recorded.

The Italian submarine Medusa, with a displacement of 300 tons, a speed of fourteen knots submerged and a crew of fourteen men, was lying submerged, and the Austrian craft was not far away, also under water. Neither one had any intimation of the presence of the other.

The Medusa came to the surface first, swept the horizon with her periscope, and, finding the way clear, she emerged. Soon after the Austrian craft decided to come up. She sent up her periscope and saw the Italian not far away. Recognizing an enemy, she immediately attacked, and one torpedo was sufficient to send the Medusa to the bottom.

One report has it that an officer and four men of the crew of the Medusa escaped and were made prisoners by the Austrians.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"I've never been overly intimate with mules," sez I, "so I wouldn't be able to tell the symptoms if one was 'celerated; but I'm suspicious it would speed him up considerable."

"Go ahead, then" sez Isaac, clampin' his jaws. "It will be a lesson to him, and he sure needs one."

Red had made the shaves long on purpose, so I didn't think the'd be any risk, and I got off to try the experiment with some hopes of bein' entertained. When that mule was engineerin' a balk he never seemed to be out of humour, and he'd give you free leave to try anything you was of a mind to in the way of shiftin' his harness and such like. All I did was to pass the loop around his tail, and slip the cup through. When I pulled it tight, the cup fell just to his hocks. I told Isaac to be ready with the reins and then I let the cup swing gentle and stepped to one side

The mule raised his right foot and gave the tin a careful kick. When it swung back again' the left hock, he kicked it mild with his left foot, and he kept this up, first with one foot, and then with the other, until finally Isaac sez to me: "I'd full as soon have him stand quiet as go through such foolishness as this. He hasn't made ten feet since you tied on the cup."

"He's pickin' up speed, though, if you notice close," sez I, "and he's likely to get under way at any moment."

Presently the mule lost a little patience and began to kick with both feet and to back between kicks. "He is goin' the wrong way," cried Isaac, "he's actually losin' ground!"

This seemed to come as a complete surprise, and the mule gave a jump forward, the cup bouncin' from one hock to the other. No one ever knows why a rude runs away; but after one gets started, no one ever knows what stops him. This old mule started in the direction of the Pacific Ocean as if he had his mind all set for a surf-bath before sun-down, and Isaac sawin' away at the bit didn't attract his attention one half so much as that tin cup rappin' out a tune on his hocks.

I swung aboard the pinto meanin' to rope the mule at the first soft spot but, truth to tell, old Mr. Ptaint-hoss found his work cut out for him, and we chased that outfit for a mile before I could get placed right to lay a rope on that cussed mule's neck, and then I was scared to try it because the ground was rough. The' was a smooth place ahead which I decided would do, even if Isaac did get tossed purty far, but just as we struck it, for the first and only time durin' my acquaimance with the pinto, he stepped into a prairie dog's hole, and for about fifteen seconds I led that race by a neck.

The paint-hoss was tough and he got to his feet before I did, but by the time we were ready for action again, Isaac and the mule were at least a quarter ahead of us and the mule was lettin' out a little more lightening at every jump.

The old hermit had rigged him a fence out of split logs and tangle across the square of the Horseshoe, with only a gap through, and the mule dashed through this just as I reached the tail of the chariot. I glanced to the right as we passed the cabin, and there sat old Josiah, puffin' away at his pipe as though that was what furnished daylight for the rest of the human race; and the next minue the mule had plunged off into the deep pool near the bath-oven, and I had pulled up the pinto on the brink.

The flarin' sides of the chariot kept it afloat and Isaac sailed across the pool as dry and comfortable as Moses in the bulrushes. "Isaac," I called, "the mule can't kick while he's swimmin'; reach over and pull off the tin cup." Isaac did so as niftly as a ten-year-old boy. "Now hang it around your neck," sez I, "for if he hears it rattle, he'll just keep on a-goin'."

When the mule came out on the other side and found he had soaked off the pesterin' tin cup, he let Isaac swing him about and came back across the ford as meek as a caterpillar. Before Isaac returned I explained to old Josiah that I had expected the mule to go in the opposite direction, but the hermit said the girl was wise by nature and gettin' crafty under his teachin'. "And besides which," sez he, "this little man is a curious specimen which amuses me a lot and which I wouldn't wish to do without."

"Well, I'm glad to hear ya say it," sez I, "for it's done him a world o' good to be turned out to pasture this way, and I'd kind o' hate to drive him off. He's as harmless as his own dog, and, truth to tell, they're more alike than any two critters I know of."

When Isaac got back I sez to him: "Isaac, you have this day taught that mule a mighty useful lesson. In the future when he gets rebellious, all you got to do is to fasten that tin cup to your goad and let it bounce again' his hocks a time or two, and I'll warrant you get somewhere."

As soon as Isaac and the hermit had grabbed opposite ends of an argument and begun to jerk and tug, I slipped off and found Kate. She was lookin' a sight better'n when she had come, though at that time I had thought her one of the top-notchin'est gels ever I'd set eyes on; but now the hunted look had all left her eyes, and while the sorrow still hind in the shadows of 'em, the light of courage shone so bright that this was all you saw unless you looked mighty close. Them, too, the colour in her cheeks was softer and deeper, her lips were redder, and you could see that she was as full of health and go as a young antelope.

"What do you think of this curious old hermit by this time?" sez I.

"He's the best man in the world!" sez he. "He teaches me how to read all sorts of signs, and what all the little, still noises mean, and why the leaves hang different on the trees at different times and how to ride and breathe and see and feel—and live! And yet all the time he makes me feel that he is the one who is bein' benefited instead of me."

"I bet he's right about it, too," sez I. "Some guests are like a dose of medicine, and some like a drink o' whiskey. What I wish you'd do is to tell me how he knows when anybody is comin' to this blessed old Horseshoe, and how he gets his house-keepin' done?"

"I will," sez she, "I'll tell ya that and all his other secrets—just before I put poison in his coffee."

This was one thing I liked about that gel; she didn't hang her own woes around her like a mourain' veil and pretend to be shocked every time a feller hove a sober little joke at her. What she did was to catch the joke and fling somethin' back at you, and she'd do this even when her heart was goin' worst.

"I have always tried to do my duty to my father as he saw it; but many times it was all wrong. Now, I treat him just as I feel at the moment, and though he frowned at first and though he still frowns at times, it nearly always as been exactly the right thing for me to do. I thought that because he so yearned for my brother it would be wrong for me to be playful with him, and so I have always been dull and gray when around him; but now when I come in from a ride with my blood all a-tingle, I rush up to him the first thing and try to tell him a little of how I feel; and yesterday his lips trembled and the tears came to his eyes, and he said: 'Kate, child, since you've been out here you have grown to be like your mother.' Oh, it was worth all I've been through to hear him say that!"

Then she covered her eyes and shuddered. Now, she had gone all through the fight up at Big Jeff's cabin and the grind of the ride back, purt nigh without a mugmur; but it had cut into her mighty deep, and for a long time after that, every once in a while the thought of it would sweep over her and flatten out the joy on her face as from a blow, and it would be all she could do to keep from cryin' out.

"Do you ride much?" sez I, to swing her back to the open again.

"Every evening," sez she, "and that is a good joke, too. Uncle Josiah had a beautiful fawn-skin suit which just fits me, and he made me wear it before he would take me riding—I ride astride and without any saddle the same as an Injun. Well, the first time I wore it, I would not let my father it, and I felt mean about it; but the next time, I went right in to tim as soon as I had come back. He looked at me with his face all grim and hard, but the little voice told me way and then it whispered to me again and I wrapped a blanket about me for a long skirt, stood before him with my chest sunken and my cheeks drawn in, and said: Thus will I ride to-morrow, father.'

"For a moment his face got even sterner, and then it broke into a perfectly friendly smile. 'Your mother was a madcap girl, too, Kate,' he said, 'Old folks cling to old ways, but, perhaps after all, that suit is the best to ride in out here, and you may wear it. When you came in just now, your cheeks were full of the roses that I never expected to see bloomin' in this world again.'"

ASHAMED OF CHRIST AND HIS BRETHREN

Those Who Truly Belong to the Lord Are Brethren of Christ.

God Desires Sincerity of Heart—Repentance an Evidence of Honesty—Consecration of Life a Further Evidence — How We Become Brethren of Christ—Walking In His Steps—Celestial Training Bestowed Upon the Members of God's Family — Transformation Work — Character-Likeness to Our Elder Brother, the Lord Jesus.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Denver, Colo., June 20.—Pastor Russell is here to-day. We report his discourse from the text, "He that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me." (Luke 10:16.) He said in part:

By nature we are all children of wrath, sinners under sentence of death. God indeed tells us that He purposes to bless the world by and by, through the great Messianic Kingdom, that will rule the world for a thousand years to help mankind up out of degradation, sin and death to full perfection of human nature; and that He has appointed Jesus Christ to be the Mediator between Himself and the world during those thousand years. Meantime, He has also purposed to take out of the world some who will have the same mind as was in Christ Jesus, and to associate this class with our Lord in the work of blessing the world. Jesus Himself will be the Head over this company, and they will be the Body of Christ. Whoever desires to become a member of this Body which God is selecting must comply with the required conditions.

Evidently the one quality for which God is looking is honesty, sincerity; He desires really true and really loyal hearts. One might be very careful to a penny in respect to money obligations, and yet not be strictly and thoroughly honest. He might overestimate himself and underestimate others. Some people are born with an honest disposition. All whom God is now receiving are of this honest-hearted kind. If He has thus favored us with the Truth, it is for us to maintain this honesty; for unless honesty enteres into the affairs of life, it will be impossible to maintain our relationship with the Lord.

We cannot be too careful with our conscience; we cannot be too honest. We cannot think of the Lord Jesus as being dishonest or of the Apostles as giving misinformation. Therefore it is evident that they did not believe in Hell fire and eternal torment; for we cannot think that they would have omitted preaching about eternal torment if they had believed it. We love to think of the Apostles as being honest men, in favor with God.

There is a tendency on the part of all mankind to say, "I am all right." But everybody who is not an idiot knows differently. "There is none righteous, no, not one. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God."—short of that glorious condition which God approved when He created our first parents. We all come short of that perfection of human nature. But if we confess our sins, we demonstrate our honesty; and He who arranged for the forgiveness of those sins is faithful to forgive us. If we assert that we are not sinners, we make God a liar; and the truth is not in us—we would be dishonest. We should be honest enough to tell God that we desire to be right.—1 John 1:9, 10.

Whoever would become a member of the Body of Christ must first turn away from sin and turn toward God. To those who have taken that step and are desirous of progressing, the Lord Jesus says, "Sit down and count the cost." The Bible never urges anybody along this line. (Luke 14:27, 28.) People who do not understand the Bible work upon one's emotions in urging others to give themselves to God. They do not understand that God's way is to think everything out carefully; that God's Plan is very cool and calculating, and that everything concerning it is to be determined intellectually.

There is only one way of becoming a Christian, and that is by entering into a covenant with the Lord. This covenant is a positive agreement, in which we give ourselves in sacrifice—to renounce everything of an earthly nature. This is the kind of covenant which our Lord Jesus made; it is the only kind to be made now. (Psalm 50:5.) Jesus made His Covenant of Sacrifice at the beginning of His ministry, as it is written: "Lo, I come (in the volume of the Book it is written of Me) to do Thy will, O God." (Hebrews 10:7.) Whoever would be a follower of the Lord must make this same covenant.

It did not take our Lord long to count the cost; for He had such a high appreciation of the privilege that He delighted to give Himself to God. He manifested loyalty to that consecration throughout His lifetime, even unto the death of the Cross. "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, * * * and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."—Philippians 2:9, 10.

The Church are to be joint-heirs with Christ. "If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him. If we be dead with Him, we shall live with Him." (2 Timothy 2:11, 12.) It is no wonder that there are terms attached to so high a calling! These terms we have in Jesus own words: "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me."—Matthew 16:24.

The first step is to will to be Christ's disciple. The next step is to deny himself—to give up his own will and to take the Lord's will instead of his own. The will represents the man. If we deny ourselves, if we give up our own wills, it carries everything absolutely that we possess. But do not give up your will to anybody except the Lord. This does not mean that we shall not be considerate of others and not try to yield to others. The people of God should be ready to favor our preferences in matters of no importance. But it is another thing to give over what we shall think and what we shall do. Whoever does so would not thereafter have control of his body.

This is exactly what the evil spirits endeavor to have us do. They desire to get control of the human will, and thus to have control over the human body. When a person becomes thus possessed, the evil spirits get control of his mind and he cannot think for himself, because his will is gone. This is also true of a person who has come under the power of hypnotism. But it is an altogether different matter to yield the will to our Lord Jesus Christ. God has tried and tested our Lord Jesus, and has set Him to be the Head over the Church, which is His Body; and all members of that Body must give up their wills to their Head. The Spirit of the Head, the mind of Christ, must operate in every member.

From the time one becomes a member of the family of God a great work of transformation is in progress. As members of the Adamic race all are imperfect—mentally, morally and physically. But this class who feel their condition and are honest about the matter come meekly to the Lord and accept the riches of His grace in Christ Jesus. When they receive their change in the glorious First Resurrection there will be nothing ignoble about them, as there is now. Just as surely as they are seeking to know and to do the will of the Lord, in that same proportion will they come into harmony with that will, and thus be blessed in their minds and their bodies. The peace of God, that passes all human understanding, will rule in their hearts and in their lives.

Fear and worry constitute a great part of the trouble that is upon the world, bringing all kinds of disease to mind and body. But when we cast all our care upon Him who cares for us, the load of care rolls away from us. Although the Lord has not promised His Church earthly blessings of any sort—neither earthly riches nor health nor any of these things—nevertheless in His providence He has granted to us many physical blessings. Whoever is with the Lord and His Word and in the company of His children is sure to be benefited; for He shows us the way we should take. As whoever associates with cultured people is sure to absorb their ways, no matter how humble the condition in which he has been brought up, so whoever is associated with the Lord Jesus Christ is sure to be blessed.

The point we desire to make is that whoever is in company with God must be right in heart. No matter how imperfect that person may be by nature, their is something right about him; else God would never have recognized him as being of His people. Therefore "whosoever receiveth you receiveth Me, and whosoever despiseth you despiseth Me; and whosoever despiseth Me, despiseth Him that sent Me."

Our Lord is still present in the flesh—the flesh of His consecrated members; and the world still despises Him as at first and as He foretold, saying, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own." (John 15:18, 19. The world is still ashamed of Christ. Nominal Christians, nominal Spiritual Israelites, are as much ashamed of Him to-day as were the Natural Israelites eighteen centuries ago.

When we consider that our Lord is represented in the flesh by the members of His Body in the flesh, we see that love for the brethren means love for the Lord. Hence the Apostle declares that love of the brethren is one of the great tests of our relationship to our Lord and to the Father. "He who loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God, whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20.) "Love one another as I have loved you," is, therefore, the recognized test of discipleship; and whoever is ashamed of the brethren is ashamed of the Elder Brother, who counts all the younger brethren as Himself.

It may be a new thought to some that in despising the brethren they are despising the Lord; that in being ashamed of the brethren they are being ashamed of the Lord, and that thus they are demonstrating that they are not fit for the Kingdom, that they have not reached the mark of perfect love, that they have not only not learned to love their enemies, but not learned to love those who are striving to walk in the footsteps of Christ. How our Lord's words sift and test our very innermost thoughts!

On the other hand, we are not so much astonished that we should be despised. By nature we were children of wrath, even as others of Adam's family, and we had no preeminence above any others of humanity. But it surely does surprise us to learn that our Lord Jesus should be despised! We remember the record that He was perfect—perfect to that extent that He could say "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." No human being can see a spirit being. But since Adam, who was created perfect, was in the image and likeness of God, whoever would see a perfect human being would see the earthly representative of the Heavenly Father.

Since our Lord Jesus was a perfect man while on earth, in full harmony with the Father, whoever saw Him saw the Father in the only way in which it was possible for humanity ever to see God. As the Apostle says, "No man hath seen God at any time; the Only Begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, He hath revealed Him"—our Lord has made the Father known to us. Hence the Church, in seeing Jesus, were becoming acquainted with the Father. We can very well perceive, then, the purport of our Lord's words that whoever despised Him would be despising the Father who had sent Him.

To us it seems a very different matter when He said, "He that despiseth you despiseth Me." How poorly we represent our Lord! How imperfect our representation of Him! It is very wonderful that our Lord should consider us as His members in any such way as this. It implies that He confers upon us a great honor, especially when we consider how imperfect we are. "There is none righteous, no, not one"; hence for our Lord to say that whoever receives one of His little ones is receiving Him, and that whoever despises one of His little ones is despising Him, seems very wonderful. Herein is an important lesson for us.

As we realize, then, that we are down near to the close of the Gospel Age and that the time is at hand for the rendering of our accounts, let us be faithful in confessing the Lord, His Truth and the brethren. Then when we shall have finished our course with joy, we shall hear His "Well done, good and faithful servant! Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

The Lord's will concerning all His followers is that they should love one another as He loved them. St. John amplified the statement, saying that as Jesus loved the Church and laid down His life for the Church, so also His followers should lay down their lives for the brethren. (1 John 3:16.) If this is the standard which our Lord has set for His people, how sorely disappointed will some be who have ignored this requirement! If, instead of loving the brethren and laying down their lives for them, some have said all manner of evil against them, what then? Then those who do those things are surely false brethren!

It is well that Christians note carefully the insidious canker which gnaws at the root of brotherly love, which tends to poison the disposition and to bring forth the evil fruitage of anger, malice, hatred, envy and strife. The wrong spirit is a growth, a development. Apparently, in some cases, the spirit of pride, the spirit of sectarianism, the spirit of ambition, are the leading incentives to the wrong course, which, if permitted to affect the heart, will develop a bad fruitage—which will produce false brethren, persecuting brethren, heady, high-minded, blind to the real spirit of the Master.

Whoever would be found worthy to be forever with the Lord to share His glory and be associated with Him in His future work must be transformed in character, must be renewed in heart, must become not only pure in heart intention, but so far as possible pure in word and deed.

Oh, how much the true followers of Jesus should seek to impress upon themselves the great lesson that love does no ill to his neighbor, that love is sympathetic, suffereth long and is kind, is not puffed up, vaunteth not itself, seeketh not its own interest and welfare merely, but the interest and welfare of others!

The supreme test of our loyalty to God is our love for Him; and this love is manifested by our desire to do those things acceptable to Him. (1 John 3:3.) There is little that we can do for the Almighty. He is so great and we are so small! But if we have His Spirit of love, then we shall love all those who love Him, and our conduct toward them will demonstrate the real sentiments of our hearts. Thus seen, we are daily making our record in the Lord's sight, daily showing Him to what degree we are worthy or unworthy of His great reward which will go only to those in whom love abounds — in whom the Spirit of Christ abounds.

Let us then be more and more on guard against the encroachments of the Adversary upon us as New Creatures! Let us more and more show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light! And in no way can we better show forth these praises than by exemplifying in our daily conduct the lessons which we have learned of Him. "Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." According to the riches of His grace He will "do exceedingly abundantly above all that we can ask or think."

The Kaiser of Course.

An Alsatian has just been sentenced to imprisonment, it is reported, for "lese Majeste," the accusation being that he had disfigured the Kaiser's portrait. Perhaps the best instance of that terrible crime on record is that of an Englishman who expressed his views rather freely in a Berlin cafe, and was pounced upon immediately by a police spy. He pleaded that he had been referring to the Emperor of Austria. "No, no, that won't do," said the spy. "In this country, when anyone says 'the Emperor is a d——d fool,' we know he means our Emperor."

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of the various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc., and the only treatment you can use is some sort of a good blood cleansing remedy which will put the blood into a perfect condition, and thus eliminate all the different poisons from the system which cause these different eruptions to occur.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters. All we ask you is to try it and be convinced. Thousands have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but praise for its curative powers.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Plantagenet, Ont., writes: "I am one woman who cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. I was covered with boils, and could not get rid of them. I was advised by a friend to try B.B.B. which I did, and I can truthfully say that it completely cured me. I have never had a sign of a boil since."

See that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as there are many imitations placed on the market which are said to be "just as good."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

BURNING GLASSES.

Powerful Lenses With a Few of Their Fiery Feats.

PENN'S MARVELOUS MACHINE.

The Heat Rays From This Mirror Lens Were So Intense That They Melted Garnets, Flint, Steel and Iron and Did Other Wonderful Things.

It is written that when the Roman ships besieged Syracuse Archimedes burned them to ashes by means of mirrors, and Proclus is also said to have destroyed the navy of Vitalian when those galleys besieged Byzantium, by means of burning glasses. And there is the wonderful story of Ptolemy's mirror, which, placed on the tower of the Pharos at Alexandria, represented accurately everything that transpired in all Egypt, on both land and water, with which an enemy's fleet could be seen 100 leagues away.

Descartes branded the story of Archimedes' mirrors as fabulous. But Kircher believed it to be true and made many experiments to prove his contention. He tried the effect of a number of plane mirrors and with five of the same size, placed in a frame, contrived to throw the rays reflected from them to the same spot at a distance of more than 100 feet, and the degree of heat obtained led him to conclude that by increasing the number of mirrors he could increase the heat to any desired degree. He made a voyage to Syracuse to inform himself exactly of local conditions. From his observations he was convinced that the Roman galleys could not have been more than thirty paces, or less than 100 feet, from the place where Archimedes mounted his unique engine of destruction.

Buffon constructed a machine consisting of a number of mirrors, and in his first experiment, using twenty-four mirrors, he set fire to pitch and tow at a distance of seventy feet. Then, with a kind of polyhedron, consisting of 168 pieces of plain looking glass, each piece six inches square, boards of beechwood were set on fire at a distance of 150 feet. Next there were employed 360 plain mirrors, each eight inches long and six broad, and with all the mirrors in use wood could be ignited at a distance of 200 feet. The last machine of this nature constructed by Buffon contained 400 mirrors, each six inches square, and with the rays from this he could melt lead and tin at a distance of 150 feet.

The most powerful burning mirror of modern times was constructed by one Pons, an English artisan. He succeeded in producing a burning lens no less than three feet in diameter, and this cost the man who was financing the experiment upward of $5,000. Its power was astonishing, and the hardest and most solid substances, such as stone, flint and steel, exposed their vast when exposed to its immense focus, only a few seconds being required. A diamond weighing ten grains was exposed to the rays for thirty minutes and was reduced to six grains by the process. During the operation the stone opened and foliated like the leaves of a flower and emitted whitish fumes; but when it had closed again it still bore a polish and was identical in shape, though four grains lighter and proportionately smaller. Ten cut garnets melted and ran together in a few seconds. In fact, nothing was found that could resist the terrible heat generated. This remarkable machine was afterward taken to China by an officer connected with the British embassy and finally lost sight of.

With these modern experiments to consider, the tale of the burning of Marcellus' ships seems more probable.

La Brocquiere, a traveler of the fifteenth century, says that at Damascus they made mirrors of steel that magnified objects "like burning glasses." The telescope was not invented till early in the seventeenth century.

This would seem corroborative evidence concerning Ptolemy Euergetes' mirror, which La Brocquiere does not mention and of which he perhaps never heard. Abulfeda, in his description of Egypt, says that the wonderful mirror was made of Chinese iron and that soon after Mohammedanism prevailed the Christians destroyed it by strategem.

In a work published at Marseilles in 1783 Father Abbat argues ingeniously in favor of the probable existence of the mirror, but contends that its power was far less than recorded in the legend.

"If this mirror existed," he says, "it is probable that it was the only one of its kind and that no other means had then been found of viewing distant objects distinctly. It must therefore have been considered as a great wonder in those times and must have filled with astonishment all who saw its effects. Even though its effects had not been greater than those of a small telescope * * * it is natural to think that those effects were exaggerated beyond all probability and even possibility, as commonly happens to rare and admirable machines and inventions."—Emmett Campbell Hall in Cleveland Leader.

One Mark Twain Told.

When Mr. Choate was appointed ambassador to England Mark Twain issued a volume about him, which England was threatened with until Mr. Choate, in dire alarm, begged the publishers to refrain. A few samples of the jokes may explain Mr. Choate's anxiety to keep the reading public of England away from the brilliant production of Mr. Clemens. How is this one, for instance?

Mr. Choate went into a restaurant and asked what they had for dinner.

"Everything," roared the waiter.

"Bring it in," said Mr. Choate.

"One order of hash!" yelled the waiter, and Mr. Choate fainted.—Denver Post.

Candles on Cake.

To make candles stay in place on a cake turn a hot knitting needle into the lower end for a couple of inches, pull it out and quickly press into the cavity a wooden toothpick. Let the candle harden in place and then stick the other end of the toothpick into the top of the cake. If you force the toothpick into the cold candle the candle will crack and break and you cannot manage it, but this way of making the hole for the toothpick with a hot needle is sure to be successful.—Cleveland Leader.

Height of Generosity.

A Louisville man went into a restaurant in a nearby town recently. He was dressed in his best clothes, and his mortification almost overcame him when the waiter, in passing, spilled a bowl of gravy upon his trousers.

"Look, darn you, look!" he ejaculated "You've spilled the gravy on me."

The waiter winked and whispered:

"That's all right, sir. Don't say anything about it and I'll bring you another bowl of gravy without charge."—Louisville Times.

FRIENDSHIPS.

Never cast aside your friends if by any possibility you can retain them. We are the weakest of speckbirds if we let one drop off through inattention or let one push away another or if we hold aloof from one through petty jealousy or heedless slight.

"TIZ" GLADDENS SORE, TIRED FEET

No puffed-up, burning, tender, sweaty feet—no corns or callouses.

"TIZ" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, blisters, bunions and chilblains.

"TIZ" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "TIZ" brings restful foot comfort. "TIZ" is magical, grand, wonderful for tired, aching, swollen, smarting feet. Ah! how comfortable, how happy you feel. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a 25 cent box of "TIZ" now from any druggist or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet and happy. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.

The Thanksgiving Turkey.

Select a turkey weighing not over ten or twelve pounds. If for a large family it is better to have two ten pound turkeys than a very large one. Have the fowl drawn and, if possible, the tendons drawn from the legs. Singe, cut neck close to body, remove pinfeathers and thoroughly scrub the bird inside and out, being careful that it does not stay in the water.

Wipe well and stuff, then truss and put in a roasting pan, breast down. Sprinkle with flour and salt and place in a hot oven.

Baste every fifteen minutes the first hour of roasting, using butter and hot water. After turning the bird over on its back cover the breast with butter and brown.

If a crust is desired cream together butter and flour, using twice as much butter as flour. A ten pound turkey needs three hours to cook, and more time will not hurt it.

The heart, liver and gizzard should be cooked in water until the last is tender. The neck may be cooked with them, and this stock is excellent for gravy, to which these parts, chopped, may be added.

That Missing Umbrella.

A correspondent relates that he saw on the notice board in an Ipswich reading room the following appeal: "Will the gentleman who took a horn handled umbrella from the stand on Wednesday kindly return it to the librarian?" Some one wrote beneath in pencil, "Certainly not; weather still unsettled."—London Standard.

Politeness.

"How do you like your new music master?"

"He is a very nice, polite young man. When I made a mistake yesterday he said, 'Pray, mademoiselle, why do you take so much pains to improve upon Beethoven?'"—Paris Figaro.

The Difference.

There is this difference between a watch and business—that you wind up the first to make it go and that you wind up the second to make it stop.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

A PRETTY BOLERO DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This is a very charming design for a girl's frock, suitable for a host of occasions, such as parties, church and afternoon wear generally. In construction it is really very simple. There is an underbody and a skirt, made of the same material. Then a bolero and tunic to match. The bolero turns away in the front to disclose the underbody, which is trimmed with a row of tiny buttons. There are plaits on the shoulder to throw fulness into the lower part, and altogether the bolero is very pretty and becoming. Both bolero and dress fasten at the back.

The underskirt consists of three gores, but the tunic is in one piece, seamed at the back and gathered at the top. For the ten year size 3½ yards of embroidered flouncing 16 inches wide would be needed, with 2¾ yards of 36 inch plain material for underbody, skirt and sleeves. The sash would take 2½ yards of ribbon. If the dress is to be made of one material only it would require 4 yards 36 inches wide. The pattern, No. 7,165, can be obtained in five sizes, from 6 to 14 years.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Experts of War Supplies

The war in Europe is said to be costing belligerent nations an average of 50 million dollars a day. A careful examination of United States exports of war material (not including foodstuffs, but including clothing, rubber goods and motor vehicles) shows that in the past few months they have averaged about two-thirds million dollars a day.

The comparison suggests that there is a large measure of exaggeration in the oft repeated statement that the United States could bring the war to a summary conclusion by refusing to furnish army supplies and munitions of war to the belligerents. The figures seem to indicate that the allies are buying in United States only a small proportion of the war supplies that their armies are using, and that they would not be seriously handicapped if shipments from the United States should cease.

THE FRENCH MAKE IMPORTANT GAINS

THE FALL OF LEMBERG APPEARS CERTAIN

THE FRENCH BY A SURPRISE ATTACK TAKE NEARLY A MILE OF TRENCHES

Gains in Lorraine and Alsace and Also Around Souchez Are Reported--French Making Progress Towards German Town of Colmar and Beat Off Counter Attacks---Germans Hurry Reinforcements to the Lorraine Front.

FRENCH CAVALRY WIN VICTORY

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, June 21.—(French official communique).—Nearly a mile of German trenches have been taken by the French troops in Lorraine in a determined rush through wire entanglements and barriers. The enemy was caught by surprise, but has hurried reinforcements to the Lorraine line. Several counter-attacks have broken down under the French fire, and additional trenches have been gained. The French troops found occupied the trenches filled with German bodies. Important successes in the battle north of Arras and also in Alsace, west of the German town of Colmar, were officially reported in the Woevre district the French are maintaining themselves in the positions they captured near Colanne, despite strong enemy counter-attacks. "We have made further progress in the direction of Souchez," said the communique. "Our troops took several more trenches. A heavy artillery duel proceeded throughout the night east of Bonhomme, which lies north-west of Colmar. The French cavalry have driven in the German lines along what is known as Bonhomme Spur."

ANGLO-BRITISH FLEET JOINS THE ITALIAN TO HELP BOTTLE ADRIATIC.

PARIS, June 20.—The Italian fleet has been joined by units of the Anglo-French fleet in the blockade of the Adriatic, and hereafter the naval forces of the three allies in this theatre of the war will co-operate against Austria's navy.

An announcement by the Ministry of Marine contained a veiled promise that the activity of German submarines in the Dardanelles region will be reduced to a minimum by the discovery and destruction of secret oil depots from which the underwater craft have been replenishing their supplies.

The fact that a German submarine was able to make a voyage from Welhelmshaven to the Dardanelles and to operate in the waters at the entrance to the straits for at least four days before proceeding to the Sea of Marmora convinced the commanders of the allied war ships that some supply stations existed in the Aegean Sea. Nothing is made public regarding the location of these depots, but they seem to have been discovered by the fleet's scouts. The Ministry's' report says:

"The Anglo-French naval forces in the Mediterranean are now co-operating with the Italian fleet, whose participation makes possible a more effective patrol of the Adriatic.

"War ship of the Allies also are actively engaged in finding and destroying oil depots from which the enemy's submarines have been plenishing their supplies."

LONDON, June 21.—The British Government now faces a debt of more than two and one-half billion dollars in excess of revenues, Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna announced in introducing the war loan bill in the Commons this afternoon, calling for a supplemental loan of one and a quarter billions. McKenna said the war loan would be let by bonds issued at par and carrying 4 1-2 per cent interest.

OTTAWA, June 21.—Over one thousand young Canadians are anxious to qualify as aviators, and applications continue to pour into the naval branch. The first batch of trained Canadian airmen will leave for England during July. On arrival they will undergo additional training before becoming attached to the British Flying Corps.

OTTAWA, June 21.—The week-end casualties reported from the front include a portion of Canadian killed, wounded and missing in the fighting which marked the recent British advance at Festubert. As the first cables received Thursday last indicate, it was the First Canadian Infantry Brigade, composed of the First, Second, Third, and Fouth Battalions, which participated in the engagement, the heaviest losses in dead falling upon the First Battalion. The total Canadian casualties since April 24th total up to 9,213; of these 1,464 were killed, 5,875 wounded, while 1,874 are missing.

BERLIN (via wireless), June 21.—Gen. Mackensen's left wing has captured Ravaruska, an important railway centre commanding the road leading to Lemberg, it was officialy announced this afternoon.

BERLIN (via wireless), June 21.—Austro-German troops are within eight miles of Lemberg. A War Office statement this afternoon said that a strong force is attacking the railroad town of Eolkif, eight miles ease of the Galician capital, while Mackensen's centre is battering at the last Russian defences, eleven miles of the city. The capture of Zolkief is expected within a few hours.

BERLIN ADMITS REVERSES.

BERLIN (via wireless), June 21.—The War Office this afternoon admitted that the Germans have evacuated Metzeral in Alsace "before superior enemy forces," but reported before retiring the town was fired and converted into a heap of ruins.

It was officially admitted that the French occupied German positions on the Mouse River heights, but the War Office stated that German counter attacks recovered part of the lost ground.

"In the western Argonne region, Wurtemburg regiments and North German Landsturmers took several lines of enemy defence works, inflicting heavy losses," said the official statement.

AMSTERDAM, June 21.—A German specialist has been summoned to Constantinople to attend the Sultan of Turkey, according to Berlin despatches to-day. The nature of the Sultan's illness was not disclosed.

SUGGESTS THE Y.M.C.A. AS HOME FOR THE SOLDIERS

Mr. J. H. Burnham Writes the Directors Advocating the Turning Over of the Building for Convalescent Hospital Purposes

A PRESSING NEED

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has addressed the following letter to the President and Directors of the Y.M.C.A.:

Gentlemen,—I wish to bring before your honourable body a need that is about to become extremely pressing, and one that I hope will appeal to you.

Major Cameron, M.D., has applied to me for information respecting a convalescent hospital building in Peterborough. When the doctors here offered a base hospital they were told that what our Government wanted was a convalescent hospital, and they were asked to submit a sketch of what they could do in that particular as soon as possible. Major Cameron says that between 900 and 1,000 soldiers have gone from Peterborough, and many of them will come back in such condition before long that it will require a large building to accommodate them. This is a matter that must be grappled with. The expense of this whole undertaking has got to be defrayed somehow. The Government, I understand, is willing to defray part of it, but the building will have to be provided by Peterborough or some generous citizens in it. Perhaps, and this I am hoping, you can be induced to hand your building over free for this great need. No doubt your young men will be proud to forego their amusement for some time at least. I would ask you, therefore, to let me know what you can do, with all speed, and I am taking the liberty of publishing this letter in order that you may secure public opinion on the subject if you so desire, with equal despatch.

I have the honour to remain,

Yours,

J. H. BURNHAM.

Capt. McPherson On Duty at Bromley Park

Peterboro's Medical Health Officer Hard at Work in England

In an interesting letter to a local friend, Capt. A. W. McPherson, M.D., A. M. C., Peterborough's Medical Health Officer who is now on active service, describes some of his experiences since reaching England. On the voyage across Capt. McPherson acted as sanitary officer and was responsible for the sanitary condition of the vessel, which carried in addition to doctors, a party of volunteers from Bermuda, part of the Canadian Remount Depot and the 38th Battalion of Montreal. Arriving in England, Capt. McPherson was at once appointed temporarily as medical officer of the 4th and 23rd Reserve Battalions at Dibgate Camp, and looked after that duty for a week, after which he was appointed to the Canadian Convalescent Hospital at Bromley Park, Bromley, Kent., Eng., where he is at present. Lieut. Burrett Kelly of Peterborough has been acting medical officer of the 12th Battalion, but expected orders to leave for France at any moment. Lieut. Frederick, M.D., of Peterborough, who is in the Imperial service, has been assigned for duty at Torquay.

Capt. McPherson ran across a large number of Peterborough boys, including Lt.-Col. Young, Lt.-Col. Clegg, Lieut. Harry Smith, Munro and the Laing boys.

PTE. JOS. TURNER, 1 Concession street, at Belleville with the 39th Battalion, C.E.F.

PTE. GEO SADDLER, son of Mr. Geo. Saddler, 560 Wolfe street, at Barriefield with the 8th C.M.R.

YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU--FALL IN!

What will you lack, sonny, what will you lack
When the girls line up the street,
Shouting their love to the lads come back
From the foe they rushed to beat?
Will you send a strangled cheer to the sky
And grin till your cheeks are red?
But what will you lack when your mate goes by
With a girl who cuts you dead?

Where will you look, sonny, where will you look
When your children yet to be
Clamour to learn of the part you took
In the war that kept men free?
Will you say it was nought to you if France
Stood up to her foe or bunked?
But where will you look when they give the glance
That tells you they know you funked?

How will you fare, sonny, how will you fare
In the far-off winter night,
When you sit by the fire in an old man's chair
And your neighbours talk of the fight?
Will you slink away, as it were from a blow,
Your old head shamed and bent?
Or say—I was not with the first to go,
But I went, thank God, I went.

Why do they call, sonny, why do they call
For men who are brave and strong?
Is it nought to you if your country fall,
And Right is smashed by Wrong?
Is it football still and the picture show,
The pub and the betting odds,
While your brothers stand to the tyrant's blow,
And Britain's call is God's?

HAROLD BEGBIE.

Lieut. Fisher Is Wounded

Brother of Mrs. Cameron, Peterboro' Was With Royal Canadian Dragoons

Mrs. Cameron of Peterborough, wife of Major G. S. Cameron, A.M.C., has received word that her brother, Lieut. Donald Fisher of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, has been wounded in France. Lieut. Fisher, who is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, joined the Dragoons at Valcartier. No particulars have been received as to the nature of his wounds.

Sensational Changes Made

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., June 21.—Sensational charges were made before the royal commision to-day by A. M. Fullerton, K.C., representing fourteen private members of the Legislature. He said that in consideration of $50,000, paid to the Liberal Opposition, led by T. C. Norris, the late Roblin government secured an agreement by which all election protests were to be dropped.

"They cannot hang any such charge on us," remarked one leading member of the Norris Cabinet this morning, when the fifty thousand dollar charge was laid to-day at the Royal Commission inquiry was read to him. His statement was backed up by two other members who were present.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

THE VOYAGE OF THE REMOUHT DEPOT ON THE NORTHLAND

Claude Bartlett, Peterboro' Boy Describes Voyage of Canadians With 900 Horses For the Firing Line

NOW IN SHORNCLIFFE

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett, Murray street, have received the following interesting letter from their son, Claude H. Bartlett, now in England with the Canadian Remount Depot:

May 27.

Dear Father and Mother,—Well we have left Canada and expect to be about two weeks getting across. We loaded about 900 horses and left the docks at Montreal about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and got as far as Three Rivers at night, where we stopped. The next day we sailed past Quebec and saw a couple of men-of-war sailing up the river. We all went on deck and they gave us a bugle call (stables), but we could not answer as no one could blow a bugle. By night we got to the mouth of the St. Lawrence and saw where the Empress of Ireland went down. When we woke in the morning we were passing through the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and it was just like glass. The fellows all expected to get an escort across, but so far we will have to get there the best way we can. Every other day we have a life belt parade and swing the life boats out ready to lower, so I guess they expect trouble. So far three horses have died out of the 900, so you can take it from that that the sea is pretty calm. In the morning at 6 o'clock we go to the stables and feed the horses hay and then water them. At 8.30 we go to breakfast and after breakfast we lie around on deck till about 10.30 a.m., when we go back and feed the horses some oats and then go to dinner at 12.30. After dinner we doctor any sick ones. At 5 p.m. we go back to stables and feed hay and at 6 we go to supper. After supper we ramble around deck and look for icebergs and boats. So far we have passed four boats, but I think we will not see many more, and then we might not want to see them. This is the 13th trip for this boat this season. It is a good job I am not superstitious. We have not had a shave since we left St. John's, so you can imagine what I look like. They all call me Abraham on account of my heavy black beard. We saw a couple of whales quite close to the ship and opened its mouth, but no one wanted to play the part of Jonah. The fog has been very bad up till to-day. The boat stopped all day and has been whistling ever since we left the sight of land. If a submarine happens to hit us it is good-night, but there is a lumber pile on board, so I'll make for that. The food on the ship is excellent. We have rabbit (or cat) for dinner to-day and some plum pudding. Some chance to the fat pork and greasy soup at St. John's. I am working in the office and feed horses when I feel like it, as there is not much to do in the office yet. They say the smell of horses is healthy and I think it must be true as I weighed 180 pounds to-day. Lord help the horse that carries me, but I have a big fat one picked out already.

Friday, May 28.

The sea is rolling high. Some of the waves are breaking over the deck. A lot of the fellows are sea sick or sick of work, I don't know which. Leo Holland, Harold Morrow and myself were down in the engine room to inspect the apparatus.

Saturday, May 29.

Well, I am not sea sick yet, although it is still rough. I heard Harold say he didn't like those rocking horses, but he is not sick yet. We have been out a week to-day and I think by the time we get there we will all be tired of it. All there is to do is work eat and sleep, but we are having a good time.

Sunday, May 29.

We all expected to get a holiday to-day, but I guess the horses get hungry as well as we do, so we still have to get the fork and shovel. We are having our pictures taken to-day

SEARCHING FOR THE DYNAMITERS

Civil and Military Forces of Windsor and Walkerville Looking for Suspects—Suit Case Full of Dynamite is Found.

OTHER CITIES WARNED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WINDSOR, Ont.—The entire civil and military forces of Windsor and Walkerville are searching this section to-day for the women and two men suspected of being the dynamiters who early to-day wrecked the plant of the Peabody Co. in Walkerville and attempted to destroy the Windsor Armoury.

A suitcase containing 26 sticks of dynamite, connected with an alarm clock, timed for 3 15 a.m., affords a slender clue to the identity of the bomb-setters. This evidence was discovered under the east corner of the Armoury.

The police of all other Ontario cities are being warned to watch their public buildings.

Lillico Given His Liberty

Judge Huycke Said He Desired to Give Him a Chance to Make a Better Man of Himself

Alex. Lillico, found guilty at the recent jury sessions of the County Court of breaking into the home of Fred Collett, Brown Street, with intent to commit assault, was given his freedom this afternoon, with sentence suspended.

In delivering judgment, His Honour Judeg Huycke said that this case had given considerable cause for doubt and perplexity. Whatever the intent, it was a most contemptible case. Continuing, His Lordship said: I have maed some inquiries about you, and anything I have heard of you has been good. You have recommendations from Scotland you should be proud of. I want to make you a beter man, not a worse one. You know the maximum penalty is imprisonment for life. I am going to give you a chance. Whether or not it is the best thing for the public I don't know. I'm going to trust to your honour I have ben told that you will not drink again, that you will try to be a better man, and I will try to help you.

His Honour directed that Lillico report everytwo weeks to Chief Thompson, and that he keep in touch with Rev. Mr. Clarry or whomever the latter named.

"Thank you, my Lord," was Lillico's reply.

Rev. Mr. Clarry previously gave character evidence in his favour.

Gunner O'Toole Died on May 8th

All doubt as to the fate of Gunner Joseph O'Toole has been cleared up by the following communication received by his parents from the authorities at No. 11 Stationary Hospital, Rouen:

No 11, Stationary Hospital,
Rouen.

Dear Mrs. O'Toole,—Letter can. Gunner Joseph O'Toole died in this hospital on May 8th. He was suffering from a very bad gunshot wound in the leg. He had one operation which relieved him for a time, but it was found necessary to amputate the limb. He died two hours after the second operation. He was a very brave boy and I am sorry that it was not possible to save him. Everything possible was done for his comfort and recovery.

MONDAY, JUNE 21, 1915

A SLOW PROGRESS.

In 1912 Great Britain had 13,025 vessels of all kinds engaged in foreign and coastal trade. The German submarine raiders have, since February last, been sinking vessels at the rate of one and one-sixth per day. It is a simple calculation to see that it will take Germany, by means of her submarine warfare, thirty-one years to reduce Great Britain to starvation by destruction of her shipping. That is, supposing that no new vessels are added. But the British merchant shipping is like the fabled Hydra, one of whose hundred heads, if cut off, would be at once succeeded by another. The Hibernian had this difference; however, the character of the British mercantile marine fleet is a fact, not a fable. Every day two new ships are launched from British shipyards so that the rate of growth is greater than the rate of destruction by submarines. Thus the turpitude of Von Tirpitz is sheer destruction for destruction's sake, and useless in attaining the object for which it was undertaken. The only purpose, besides, that it serves is to give deeper dye to the blackness Germany is donning in the eyes of the civilized world, and to make the bill bigger when the day of settlement comes; that is, "the day" that will certainly count as the other has never done.

WHEN PEACE IS POSSIBLE.

So far all the considerable proposals for peace have come from Germany or her allies, or have been inspired by them. This fact is extremely significant. Germany set out to accomplish world domination. She believed herself invincible, and that nothing on earth could resist her military and naval strength. She has not made the first step to her goal, though she has put up a mighty fight, which has developed into the fierceness of desperation. When she cries for peace it is an indication that she feels that "the jig is up." But she is deemed to be an unduly disappointed in her expectations of gains at any hand in her anticipations of relentless progress in her world domination campaign. If she for one moment fancies that there can be any peace till the powers which German Islamaticism has arrayed against her are in a position to dictate its terms in a way that will for ever end the German menace of the world's peace—her power to tread down democracy and human right, she is mightily mistaken. This will be when Germany and her allies are beaten to their knees, "in suppliance bent." This point has not yet been reached nor, unfortunately, nearly reached; but it is approaching. Meanwhile, neither Germany nor Austria nor Turkey, nor Bryan nor Jones, Brown nor Robinson need waste their breath in talking peace. We don't make pleas with a rattlesnake till we are sure that we have deprived him of the power to sting.

CANOEING AND SWIMMING.

As the summer wanes, the death-roll from two forms of ignorance also grows—ignorance of how to use a canoe and ignorance of swimming. For persons who do not know how to use a canoe, and even for persons who know how, if accompanied by the other kind, taking a canoe voyage is to court the risk of death for somebody. The canoe is in the state of the Indian "little cuttle to shoo shins." It is subject to overturning and still to keep its precarious balance; the slightest liberties taken with the law of gravitation or fulcrum, and there's an upset; and if the power to swim or presence of mind is lacking, there is likely to be a drowning. One lesson to be learned is that it is not safe for a person unable to swim to venture upon deep or treacherous water in a canoe. The other is the lesson of swimming. Do we give enough attention to teaching the young as well as the older this life-saving art, especially valuable where communities undergo of our rivers and lakes invite canoe and drowning risks? Our city fathers in their street paving obsession, have forgotten the spasm of last summer to provide swimming facilities for the use of the youngsters of the city. By cleaving to one and forsaking the other two things, are made certain; increase in the tax rate and increase in the danger of deaths by drowning.

BENEFICENT MILITARISM.

The German people endure, but do not love, the German army as the expression of the militaristic spirit of the dominant powers, simply because the army is a potential agent of oppression and repression, subordinating all personal conveniences, all personal rights, to the demands of force. On the contrary, the Italian people love the Italian army because it is a beneficent expression of militarism. The London Chronicle points out that the Italian soldier is not only severely drilled, but he is also expected to perform a good many duties not usually regarded as falling within the requirements of military service. It is considered incumbent on every man wearing the King's uniform to give aid whenever and wherever it may be needed for the protection of life and property against crime, accident, or disaster, and whenever a calamity befalls—such as the recent earthquake—the first move is always to send troops to assist the suffering. That is one reason why Italy regards her army with affection as her protector, at home as well as her defender against foreign aggression. Thus Italy has a consistent place in the ranks of the Allies in this war. It is fighting for what they are fighting for—the destruction of malignant militarism and all the black brood of outrages upon all that Christianity and humanity hold dear, that go with it.

THE SOLDIERS' SMOKE.

A Toronto church conference recently passed a strongly worded resolution condemning the sending of tobacco to the soldiers at the front. The vote for the resolution was not unanimous, and next day a member of the conference moved that it be reconsidered, but he was ruled out of order because he was not present when the vote was taken—out, probably, good sensible man, taking a smoke. The conference was a little too much "blue law" in passing such a condemnation, and showed little sympathy with the sacrifices and sufferings of the soldiers who are fighting for us all. Besides tobacco is not an evil nor an injury unless intemperately used, and intemperate use of tobacco is not much worse than intemperate surrender to Puritanic prejudice and Pharisaic narrow-mindedness. It is unreasonable, as well as uncharitable to expect soldiers, who have been under unheavenly hail of shells for days, without food and water, facing death at every breath, and altogether subjected to the most nerve-killing experience imaginable, to deny them the unspeakable comfort of a smoke when they come off their shift—a comfort which only the smoker can know. The unregenerate layman expects ministers and others to have as much sympathy with our heroic soldiers facing the dangers of shell-fire as they have for those worthy men, facing the danger of—some other sort of fire.—"Ye pay your tithes of mint anise, etc."

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

A young woman has won a prize of $150 for devising a gown which may be worn "at any time of the day." But is there any serious feminine demand for a costume of so wholly utilitarian a nature?— New York World.

WHY EMPIRE IS STRONG.

The British Empire is strong because of its weakness—because it has grown without being forced into a right mould. That, too, is no less true of its self-governing states and of its great dependency, India. Its lack of system has made for a free development that has in turn permitted difficulty after difficulty to be met in the way that best suited the exigency of the moment. —Toronto World.

"NOT ONE SINGLE MAN."

A return, showing the "number of rescues that have been effected from German warships by his Majesty's vessels by German warships respectively," was issued yesterday by the Admiralty. It affords a striking illustration of the different methods adopted by Great Britain and Germany in waging warfare at sea. From the return, which is given below, it will be seen that 1,228 members of the crews of German warships lost have been rescued by the British war ships engaged, while German warships had not rescued a single man belonging to British warships in similar circumstances.—London Times.

GERMANY'S RESOURCES IN MEN.

Guglielmo Ferrero, the famous Italian historian, has published some interesting figures in connection with the strength of the German armies. He states that chance had put into his hands some official publications which were confidential. These concern the strength of the German army and were only meant for the German officers.

At the outset of the war he shows that Germany possessed 8,891,000 men between the ages of seventeen and forty-five. Of this total 5,107,000 were trained, and 3,784,000 untrained. In the first few weeks of the war she had a little less than 3,000,000 men under arms. Since then the men of the Landwehr, the Landstrum and the Ersatz reserve have been called to the colours, making at the end of February a total of 6,000,000, who have been put on the firing line. Added to that were 500,000 Germans recalled from other countries, making a grand total of 6,500,000.

Signor Ferrero estimates that Germany has lost on an average of 216,000 men a month, which means that upwards of 2,160,000 men have been killed, wounded or taken prisoners, thus reducing the number of men fighting for the Fatherland to about 4,300,000. He shows that Germany cannot possibly have more than this number in the field, and that from now on the number will rapidly decrease as the young men growing up cannot make good the tremendous wastage of war. He concludes that in a very short time the number of men Germany has at the front will decrease even more rapidly than for the past ten months, due very largely to the fact that the Allies on the west the Italians on the south, and the Russians on the east will shortly eb able to break through the Teutonic lines and capture large numbers of prisoners.

The figures presented by the Italian historian are most instructive and full of significance to us. It means that this is a war of attrition, and that to win a speedy and satisfactory victory it is necessary that we should put every available man on the firing line. France has already sent her last man to the front; it remains for Great Britain, Italy and Russia to supply the armies need to wear down Germany's fighting forces. Canada can and should do more than she has done.—Journal of Commerce.

His Leg Removed When Gangrene Attacked It

M. Jos. Green, Rubidge street, underwent an operation at the Nicholls Hospital a few days ago, in which one leg was amputated above the knee. About two weeks ago the foot became very painful about the ankle, and on examination it was found that gangrene was setting in. Mr. Green's friends will regret to learn of his illness.

HOW BRITAIN IS STANDING THE FINANCIAL STRAIN OF THE WAR

Sterling exchange was once more the feature in financial affairs. The pound sterling sold this week at 4.76 1-4, the lowest quotation in over a century. This is a discount of about 2 1-4 per cent. and compares with a discount of about 4 per cent. on French exchange, 16 on Italian, 16 on German and 26 on Russian. This demoralization of exchange, as every one knows, is due to the war, and the consequent impairment of national credit. The decline has been complicated by the violent dislocation of our foreign trade with the belligerents. While our imports have declined materially, our exports have increased enormously, creating a fabulous excess in the latter of about one billion dollars during the closing fiscal year. These comparisons show that thus far Great Britain has stood the strain far better than any other nation, and while it is possible that sterling may sell at still lower figures there are as yet no signs of weakness in Britain's ability to finance herself and her Allies until the end of the war. The exhibition of strength and skill which British finance is making is remarkable, and far exceeds all expectations; nothing like it having ever been witnessed in history. Thus far the national debt of Great Britain has increased about $4,000,000,000, and has more than doubled in amount since the war began. Mr. Asquith notified his fellow-countrymen the other day that the war, which has been costing about $13,000,000 a day, including about $1,000,000,000 advanced to her Allies, will soon cost over $15,000,000 or at the rate of nearly $5,500,000,000 annually. Such waste is staggering. When it is remembered that the war is costing other nations proportionately as much as Great Britain, and more where cities and districts are wiped out, this devastation seems utterly beyond human comprehension. It would seem as if exhaustion alone must quickly end such a terrific cataclysm. Yet, it would be premature to calculate upon any such result at an early date; for the struggle may last another year unless a military miracle of some sort hastens the end. It must be borne in mind that the resources and population and wealth of the principal belligerents have been enormously augmented since the last great war, and it is doubtful if the per capita cost of this war to the taxpayer is any greater than the Napoleonic war which ended with the battle of Waterloo. In the case of Great Britain, it is calculated that her national income is about $10,000,000,000 annually; so that with her vast investments abroad, valued at $20,000,000,000, and her foreign trade of nearly $7,000,000,000 annually, it is quite evident that thus far Britain's financial resources are far from being seriously strained. This cannot be said of some of the other contestants; and if the war is to be one of exhaustion, which seems quite probable, these are factors which will play an important and perhaps a decisive part.—Henry Clews' Banking House, New York.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DAPHNE'S HOPE BOX

A Feminine Conceit and Joke That Led to Much Pleasant Gossip.

By SELINA LILLIAN HIGGINS.

"How very nice of Nellie," said Mary Lincoln, as she and her best friend Daphne Willis, parted at the village post office after receiving and opening two boxes, exactly alike.

"The lace is exquisite," spoke Daphne, glancing with taste and pleasure over the neck collar neatly done up in tissue paper with a dainty sachet bag beside it. "Nellie is very thoughtful."

They had been great friends, those three. All through Nellie's engagement Mary and Daphne had been closest to her of her many acquaintances. She had promised not to forget them when she reached the city on her wedding tour. Now Nellie had redeemed her promise.

"I shall wear the collar at the regular club party next week," said Mary. "You will be there, Daphne?"

"I think not. My aunt is not very well, you know, and needs me most of the time. Besides," and Daphne gave a nervous laugh, "I fear I am getting past the party age, Mary."

"Nonsense!" cried her devoted friend. "Twenty-three, and you look like sixteen. It's just the breaking up of our old circle that gives you the blues. Now you wear that handsome collar—lace always becomes you. Don't go giving it away, as you usually do everything that anybody asks you for."

"Oh, I shall not do that," declared Daphne. "It will always be a tender reminder of our dear Nellie. I shall put it away in my 'hope box.'"

Just here Mary made a pretense of clinching her pretty pink and white fists and grinding her pearly teeth in a feint of the most dreadful rage.

"Daphne Willis," she scolded severely, "if even I happen across that 'hope box' of yours, I'll—I'll stamp on it; yes, I will! The idea! you keeping a 'hope box,' as if you were some fading old maid with yellow teeth and wrinkled cheeks and scrawny neck, when everybody says you grow more and more beautiful—"

"That's enough!" retorted Daphne, kissing the cherry lips of her staunch champion with a kiss—"I know I am beginning to feel very old, and I think it a duty to be prepared if any likely old bachelor—why, yes, even some respectable widower—should happen along, you know!"

It was all a joke, Daphne's "hope box," a feminine conceit that appealed to Daphne because it led to pleasant quip and gossip among her bright girl friends. In her own mind Daphne felt pretty well convinced that she would never marry. She had a pleasant, permanent home with her aunt. She felt that she was past the frivolous age. Daphne had encountered some ideals during the years, but they had turned out selfish and prosaic. None of them had ever come up to her standard of a real man.

Her "hope box" was a satin-lined cedar chest, given to her by a dear girl friend one birthday. Daphne had accumulated a store of both pretty and useful things. It pleased her aunt to look over not only her presents but the exquisite needlework of Daphne herself, while her industrious niece experienced a certain pride in having pretty trifles to exhibit to her girl visitors.

It was nearly a year after the wedding of Nellie that Daphne received a letter from a cousin who lived at Merton. She had been in correspondence regularly with this relative, and several times Miss Dalby had referred to a neighbor, a Mr. Paul Barnes.

"I have great news for you, Daphne," this last letter ran. "I have often told you what a fine young man Mr. Barnes was. His parents left him quite an estate, and I suppose he got lonely in the old homestead. At any rate, he is about to marry, and what do you think? he has picked out the poorest girl in the village. It is one Lina Temple. She is a wild, headstrong girl, and the whole family are a worthless lot. It seems that her father once risked his life for Paul's father, and the young fellow has a generous nature that never forgets. I am pretty sure he has no genuine love for Lina. In fact, it is pretty well known that some Quixotic idea of lifting the girl from poverty to comfort and making a true woman of her is his idea. She is so poor her folks cannot afford any kind of an outfit, and very quietly some friends and myself are helping her out. If you have any little trifles to contribute, I shall be glad."

Good-hearted Daphne had something of a struggle with herself. Then her generous soul impelled a sacrifice.

"I shall never marry," she said to herself. "I shall be making some one happy," and the "hope box" went to Miss Dalby.

Two months later Daphne's aunt died. It was natural that Miss Dalby should ask her to make her home with her. This she did, and Daphne found herself installed at Merton.

"I have often thought of the wedding you wrote me about," observed Daphne, the first evening of her arrival.

"Oh, did I never write you!" exclaimed Miss Dalby. "The match was broken off. We got up quite a handsome outfit for Lina Temple. She never used it, for she eloped with a circus performer two days before the date for the wedding."

"And Mr. Barnes?" inquired Daphne.

"I think, secretly, he was relieved, for the girl was not of his class—headstrong, capricious, all for tinsel and glitter. He acted the man completely, however. He followed the elopers, made sure that the new husband would be good to the wild, untutored girl, and, they say, even started him in a new business."

Of course, Daphne met Paul Barnes, and there seemed to spring up a mutual interest between them. One evening as he stood at the garden gate, the tender influences of the sweet June night seemed to bind him lingeringly to the spot.

"You are a good friend, Miss Willis," he said. "I never told you, but I have heard of your kind thought to make happy the young lady I at one time thought to make my wife."

"And you are a good man, Mr. Barnes," replied Daphne with genuine impulse, although she flushed a trifle consciously. "It was a noble thought to strive to guide her untutored steps aright."

"Shall we walk to the lake and back? It is such a beautiful evening," he suggested, and there was a strange, wistful tremor in his voice.

The moonlit shadows lengthening on the long, dewy grass, the holy stars shining down through the lace-like mistiness of the enraptured night. Daphne listened to words that rang so true their echo thrilled and lingered, even as she came back to the house, her heart beating with the joy of a new-found happiness, her face radiant with telltale blushes.

She went up to where Miss Dalby sat and put her arms around her, and hid her conscious face on her shoulder.

"Dear cousin," she whispered, "you told me you had stored my old 'hope box' in the garret."

"Yes, dear," replied Miss Dalby, smiling wisely.

"I should like to have it back again, if you please," said sweet Daphne Willis.

HIGH PRICES KILLED Beware of Cheap Prices

The General says:

When we entered the field the price of good roofing was too high. With our big mills, enormous output and modern selling methods we can sell the best roofing at a reasonable price. This has been done to such a great extent that high prices have been killed. Now you get the highest quality at a reasonable price when you buy

Certain-teed

Roofing

But there is another great danger. Unknown goods with unknown brands and unknown qualities are being offered at prices that are too cheap for safety. It's a long, long chance you take when you buy these cheap goods. Avoid extremes of cheap prices as well as high prices. Know that the company whose name appears on the goods has the ability to make a good quality roofing at a reasonable price, and that it is guaranteed by them to be the best roofing possible to make; that the company does not sell anything at a higher price, and that the price at which it is offered to you is a reasonable but not a cheap price.

Certain-teed Roofing is guaranteed 5, 10 or 15 years, according to whether the thickness is 1, 2 or 3 ply respectively, and remember this guarantee is backed by the largest mills in the roofing and building paper industry.

Ask your dealer for Certain-teed goods, and be sure they bear our label. The price will be reasonable.

PLOTTED TO GET TRADE

GERMANS LAID DEEP CONSPIRACY AGAINST BRITAIN.

Young Teuton Clerks Went to England and Worked For Small Pay In Mercantile Houses Where They Stole Trade Secrets — German Organization Subsidized the Mercantile Spy System.

In the larger towns of the United Kingdom, and especially in the city of London, it was a matter of common observation before the war that an extraordinary number of young Germans were employed in the offices of British merchants and manufacturers. Indeed, a certain amount of sore feeling existed among English clerks on the ground that the employment of Englishmen was thereby diminished and the rate of wages reduced by cheap foreign competition. Employers, on the other hand, advanced what appeared to be very good reasons why they should give preference to the Germans. The latter, they said, was better equipped, educationally, for a commercial career, took his work more seriously than the average Englishman, was more industrious, painstaking, and reliable, and endeavored to master the details and routine of the business with which he was connected. In addition to these advantages, his services could be secured for a little more than half the price required by an English clerk.

Though paid on a higher scale, the Englishman found it difficult enough to make both ends meet. Yet the German did not seem a very pitiable object; his appearance was sleek enough; he was evidently not underfed; his clothes were neat, and he had always some loose cash in his pocket.

From what source did he obtain his supplementary funds and what was his inducement to give his services for less than their market value? It was all part of a deep-laid scheme designed not only to oust the English clerk from his employment, but, as its ultimate object, to undermine the foundations of British commerce. Of all the great trading nations, Germany was the last to enter the arena of world-commerce. To her dismay the best foreign markets appeared to be already appropriated, mostly by England, and afforded but a small opening for her energies. She was, however, not slow to realize the advantages presented to her by England's policy of free trade, which enabled her to compete everywhere on an equal footing with British productions. Her merchants, not being too scrupulous and having everything to gain and nothing to lose, did not hesitate to palm off shoddy and inferior ware generally as British goods whenever possible, and their practice of counterfeiting trade marks in countries where the law was weak, or easily evaded, soon became notorious. By such methods they inserted the thin edge of the wedge and laid the basis of their foreign trade. Casting an envious eye upon British commerce, certain astute German merchants, some twenty odd years ago, appraised it critically, and while duly appreciating its strong points laid a finger also on the weak spots. They recognized the excellence of English general business methods, courage and enterprise, made due allowance for the value of centuries of experience, and estimated aright the thoroughness in the training of an English mercantile house. But they perceived also a total lack of trade organization. They saw British firms cutting one another's throats in foreign markets when they should be combining against the common foe. They discovered constant overlapping and waste of energy in one direction, and a lordly indifference or contempt of foreign competition in another. There was much they could learn, but much that might be improved upon, and some things to be avoided.

These Germans agreed to compete against one another only in the home market or in the fields where outside competition was absent; next they decided to encourage smart and promising young Germans to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with English business methods, at the same time forming a kind of commercial intelligence bureau by means of which the promoters of the scheme should be kept well posted in all that was being done by British firms. For this purpose a number of energetic young men were selected and sent to England with instructions to find employment in English houses of business; and to ensure their securing occupation a money subsidy was granted to each for a term of years, subject to certain conditions. Besides getting a thorough and intimate knowledge of the business which they entered it was their duty to make periodical reports, not only of their personal progress, but indicating also the tendencies of trade and openings that might arise in new directions. The association that was formed, under the unassuming title of Commerce Defence League, proved so great a success that before long it numbered among its members the heads of the chief commercial, mercantile, and manufacturing firms throughout the German Empire. It had prior to the war assumed gigantic dimensions, and thousands of clerks were in receipt of yearly subsidies. As it developed it became a sound financial enterprise, affording an excellent investment for surplus capital. The young men thus subsidized, having picked the brains of their British rivals, and having learnt all that England could teach them, were qualified either to hold really well-paid posts in England or in their own country, where English-trained clerks were always in demand. They were then, after the cessation of the subsidy, in a position to redeem by easy instalments the interest-bearing bond they had entered with the league or with one of its representatives.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes
For Automobile Tires
These many thin layers of pure rubber are vulcanized together into an extra-heavy unit tube

Leak-Proof Inner Tubes

That Outlast Any Tire

14% Heavier—20% Lower Priced

Layer on Layer

Here is something every motorist should know.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are not built of one thick piece of rubber. In a single piece of thick rubber flaws may be hidden. And the flaws may go clear through.

Goodyear Tubes are made of many thin layers—each of pure rubber—vulcanised together in one solid, extra-heavy tube.

In these thin sheets any tiny flaw shows up and we correct it at once.

These thin, perfect sheets, wrapped layer on layer, make a tube that can't leak. And the valve patch can't leak. It is part of the tube, not stuck on.

Please remember that. Many a tire trouble is due to a leaky tube.

Made Extra Thick

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are also extra-thick. They were always so.

But this year we have added an extra 14 per cent on the average—all pure rubber. The result is, these Tubes outwear any tire.

Don't Pay More

On February 15th, despite this added thickness, despite the war tax, too, on all our raw materials, we cut our Tube prices 20 per cent.

Now these Laminated Tubes, built extra-thick, cost about the same as others. There is not even a price reason for taking a lesser Tube.

Always Gray

Pure rubber must be gray. A colored tube has much mineral matter. That heats up through friction and weakens the tube.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are not adulterated—so they are always natural gray.

They will outlast your tires. And they will convert you to Goodyear Fortified Tires.

No man can use a Tube like this without wanting his tires built by the same standards.

Any dealer will supply you Goodyear Tires or Tubes.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

ZEPPELINS WHICH MADE ATTACK ON LONDON WERE NEAR ARSENAL AND 3 MILES FROM PARLIAMENT

LONDON, June 21—Canadians who come over here nowadays find a difficulty in getting used to our changed conditions. The darkening of the streets is for them a sensation; for us it has become habitual. During the present week Londoners had a new experience, of which I must write strictly within the lines made by newspaper correspondence by the censor. Nothing can be said about the position of "the outlying districts" that were the subject of the visit. Probably through the medium of some traveller to New York all the blanks in my story will already have been filled in, and in that case the comments here will be better understood. In that event, too, dwellers in Canada will be more fully imformed than our own people in the metropolis, whose knowledge of localities affected depends entirely upon uncertain rumour. All the London newspaper offices had complete reports ready for publication within a few hours, but for sufficient reason detailed statements were forbidden. There is nothing that the Zeppelin raiders desire more than to have authentic accounts of the precise situation wherein their bombs fell. Even if there has been in America leakage of hearsay evidence it will not be reliable, and to that extent if the stories should work back to Germany they will not be safe for the enemy to act upon.

At first the Admiralty declined to say what casualities had occurred, but that was because time was required for the ingathering of particulars. Then came the announcement that altogether ninety bombs had fallen and one baby, one man, one woman and a boy had been killed. Serious injury to a few other persons was also reported, but contradiction was given to the widespread belief that a number of fires had taken place through collusive action by alien enemies in this country. The fires, which were checked with amazing rapidity, were stated to have been all due to the operation of incendiary bombs. Reports of inquests on the victims omitted all addresses, but went pretty closely into the experiences of sufferers.

Calm and Alert.

The majority of people in London had no knowledge of the visitation, but the calls for the special constables and for others engaged in the organization of defence would, if we had been at all a temperamental people, have put the whole of the Metropolis in a state of quiver. Nothing of the sort happened. Those who knew of the whereabouts of the Zeppelins treated the matter in the coolest possible way and simply declined to exhibit any apprehension whatever. It is pretty clear now that the German policy of frightfulness will be a failure whatever may happen in the near future. These attacks upon the civil population do, however, harden the feeling that the Germans are nothing less than murderers and must be crushed accordingly. A few weeks ago fears were expressed lest when the allies have secured decisive victories movement by the enemy for a premature peace settlement might cause differences of opinion in our own country. No such apprehension exists now. By their blind actions of slaughter the Germans are demonstrating here as on the Continent that they are the enemies of humanity and that no trust can be placed in them to observe the ordinary rules of civilization.

Italy in London.

Soon after Italy had declared for war there was along the Thames embankment a very interesting procession of Italian residents and the sons and daughters of Italians, who were glad to be able to make demonstration for as good a cause. It is an easy thing for cheap wit to talk about the ice-cream man, the organ-grinder and such like as representatives of exiles in England, but the colony has a very different standing and importance from that. Anyone who happens to go into the Italian church in Hatton Gardon (the Dismond quarter of the Metropolis) will be gratified at the spectacle which the congregation presents. There is a picturesqueness and a daintiness with a particular harmony in colour schemes of dress about the more prosperous of these migrants to our shores which gives a very different impression. Italians in London excel in the minor art crafts, in the supply of merchandise from their country and in a number o finstances in cuisine. One prominent restaurant-keeper in the West End has important civic responsibilities in Italy and left some time ago to take them up. The Italian waiters at most of these places are a smart set of men, and it is to their credit that the majority recognized their obligations quickly when the announcemen of war came. Some very pretty scenes occurred at Victoria Station when send-offs were given to reservists. The red tunics of the few Garibaldi residents among us bring honour wherever they go.

The Heart of the Empire.

It is the custom of the military authorities to give occasional leave at week-ends to the officers and men at the front or in training and thus on Saturdays one sees in the West End a remarkable gathering of soldiers of the Empire nd of persons who have been brought together through the war. The other afternoon I saw in Coventry Street a number of ruddy-faced ustralians in brown leather caps, who, by a coincidence, were speaking to some Australian nurses. Next them were a group of Irish, whose brogue suggested that Tipperary was very near. The blue tunics and the red caps of Belgians who are convalescent, added other tints, whilst some Canadians found themselves linked up with a New Zealander. A grey-haired negro, such as one seest ocacsionallv in the boulevards of Paris, was calling in a shrill voice the titles of French newspapers. A small, but sturdy, Japanese gentleman and lady brought to mind the East, and it happened the lady was wearing a white chrysanthemum in her hat. The prettiest incident of all was the salute given by a young Territorial officer to an old Chelsea pensioner in red. The veteran tok it with a dignity that became him, and the crowd moved on.

The Grand Trunk Issue.

The announcement that the Grand Trunk Railway would offer an issue for subscription did not come as any great surprise, as it was obviously probable that some such course would be taken to meet the £2,000,000 of one-year bills which fall due on July 15th. The prospectus of the new issue of 5 1-2 per cent. five-year notes issue published on Wednesday and to judge by the general press and individual comment, should be accorded a very satisfactory reception. The favorable figures of the Grand Trunk Railway for April should help the issue very much. In spite of its difficulties the old railroad enjoys rather a special measure of confidence in Great Britain. While much is hoped for it from its new Western ramifications, it is realised that the Government serves the old and solid districts of the more mature East, which forms a very sound bedrock for its fortunes.

Birthday Honours for Canadians.

The birthday honours list, published this morning, will doubtless be cabled to Canada, and already Sir John Hendrie, Sir William Peterson, Sir Herbert Ames, Sir Henry Drayton and Sir Charles Fraser will be saluted with their new titles. It is all to the good that not only political and business ability are thus rewarded in the honours allotted to Canadians, but that the list also recognizes the claims of other branches of public service, scholastic and humanitarian. People in Great Britain are perhaps too apt to allow Canada's material achievements to blind them to the more cultured aspects of the Dominion. Those who exhibit her educational and social advancement contribute to her national great ness equally with those who advance her commercial progress, and both sides of Canadian development should be equally well understood in this Old Country. Of Canadian spirit no other illustration is needed than the deeds of her gallant troops.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy's Visit.

Sir Richard McBride still remains in London, and it is surmised that one reason for his delayed departure may be a wish to meet Sir Thos. Shaughnessy, who is to arrive this week. With regard to Sir Thomas' visit to England, in addition to the question of his health, it is suggested that he may wish for a quiet opportunity to discuss financial questions with British friends. Apart from any questions of new finance, segregation of interests, etc., it is possible that he may take the opportunity to allay the uneasiness which indubitably has been aroused by the very heavy and continued traffic decreases.

The War Contingent Association.

Quite quietly and unostentatiously the Canadian War Contingent Association of London has been carrying on a splendid work for the ten months o fthe war. It was on the 14th of August that the inaugural meeting was held in the Westminster Palace Hotel, where the association still has its chadquarters and carries on its useful efforts. The association not only provided and maintained the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe, but is now extending the hospital accommodation from 55 to 125 beds.

It has also taken charge, since war began, of field comforts for the contingents, which were sent by committees, associations and indnviduals in he Dominion, and it has promoted the well-being of the Canadians at the front and in training whenever and however possible. Practically every Anglo-Canadian of any standing is on one or other of the committees. The president is Sir George Perley; the Executive Committee consists of Chairman, Sir Thomas Skinner, Bart.; Hon. Secretary, Mr. J. G. Colmer, C.M.G., and Mr. W. MacLeod Moore, assistant honorary secretary, with Earl Grey, Sir William Osler, Sir Arthur Markham, Sir Max Aitken, Colonel Donald Armour, Mr. G. McLaren rown, Mr. W. L. Griffith Mr. Donald MacMaster, Mr. G. R. Parkin, and a number of other prominent Canadians as members. The Ladies' Comimttee has Lady Perley as chairman and Mr. G. McLaren Brown as honorary secretary. For a period Miss Plumer and Miss Arnoldi acted as representatives of the association at Salisbury in distributing supplies.t bu for some time the association has despatched direct from London everything sent to the different units at the front and in England, according to the method approved and arranged by the War Office.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

Mullin, Pte. Chas., 5th Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, St. Vincens Hospital, Sudbrkirn, Germany. (Prisoner of war and wounded.)

In a new system for heating houses with gas each radiator is a separate unit, but the products of combustion are discharged through a common pipe into the outer air.

MANY NEW FRUITS AND VEGETABLES ON THE LOCAL MARKET

Canadian Strawberries and Cherries, California Peaches and Plums and New Peach Honey

FLORIDA WATERMELONS

Watermelons, all the way from Florida, have arrived in the city, and will keep coming, especially for the Dominion Day holiday. It is just as juicy as ever and will be received as one of the compensations of the dog days.

Among other goods is the first shipment of new crop honey from the peach belt in the Niagara district. It is said to have a very delicate flavour, but apparently has not yet been generally stocked by the retailers. It will sell at 25c. a comb.

Cban pines are ended for this year, and receipts will be light for the next week or ten days until the Florida pineapples are received.

Mississippi tomatoes are coming forward in fine condition and are easier in price. They are retailing around 15c. and 20c. a pound with quite a keen demand.

California Fruit.

In the shipments of fruits the first arrivals of California peaches, apricots and plums have been received and will be generally offered from now on. Canadian house holders and those who buy fruit extensively, of course appreciate the fact there is an artificial wall at the Canadian boundary which boosts the prices of all American fruits as soon as they pass the line. Persons of means will have the new fruits and vegetables at any price. The "truck and trade" will continue except for the poorer classes to whom imported goods are prohibitive.

New cabbages from various southern states are cheaper and are coming along steadily. They are in good demand just now.

Canadian Goods Coming.

Canadian strawberries are ripening rapidly and this week will almost see the peak of the crop. On Saturday they retailed at from 15c. to 18c. a box, but they should be materially cheaper this week. All the information to hand says the crop was not seriously hurt there and that the supplies should be large. Whether the demand will be heavy or not remains to be seen, but those who intend purchasing for preserving should get in touch with reliable authority before buying.

Canadian cherries are in the market and there are expected this week gooseberries, currants, red, white and black, and other smaller fruits. The whole fruit market is beginning to reach its most interesting season. Vegetables are also appealing. Householders can buy in the stores new beets, carrots, string beans, etc. and the home varieties will be along in a short time. Peas are podding and filling out quickly. New potatoes are easier in price and the first Peterborough specimens should be received shortly.

MR. ALF. CUMMINGS DOWN WITH STROKE

One of the Older Citizens Suddenly Seized While at Work This Morning

It was reported to-day that Mr. Alfred Cummings, one of the pioneer residents of the South Ward, was stricken with paralysis this morning while lifting some bags of cement at a Simcoe street warehouse. Mr. Cummings is well known as a carter and has often been employed in the winter as one of the city's staff that manned the snowplows. He is highly respected by all who know him. At the Nicholls Hospital this afternoon it was stated that he was getting along well.

Mrs. Cummings is in Chicago having left Peterborough on Thursday. Their home is in Byersville.

A novel burglar alarm is a phonograph record to be placed on an instrument so connected with a door or window as to sound calls for help should an intruder enter.

UPPER STONEY LAKE NEWS

New Cottages Going Up—Bellevidere Preparing For a Busy Season

Upper Stoney Lake continues its jolly race with Lower Stoney in their mad strife for popularity. After one passes through the Boschink narrows a new atmosphere greets the tourist; an atmosphere of extreme loyalty for everything pertaining to Upper Stoney. They are practically self-contained. They have their own Association, store, pavilion, dancing, Church services, and regatta, and woe betide anybody who is so unwise as to say a word against that portion of the lake.

Mr. Lennox, the popular proprietor of "Bellevidere" at Crowe's Landing, is preparing for a busy season. Already several guests have arrived and more are on their way.

Two new cottages are going up; one just east of Mrs. W. A. Sanderson's summer home, is being erected for Mr. Ben. Chapman of Toronto; the other on the first point east of "Bellvidere," is being built by Mr. E. P. Cuff of Norwood.

Winder's cottage on the Davidson-Duffield island is being occupied by Mrs. Carvell of Toronto, her two sons, Messrs. Herbert and Ernest, and daughter, Miss Carvell.

The Rev. Gibson and family have been at home at "Belle Isle" for some weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman of Norwood came up early in the season, also.

Mrs. Caniff of Peterborough is visiting friends in Upper Stoney.

The water in Eel's Creek is so high that a small launch could be run over the first fall.

The Voyage of The Remount, etc.

and will send some with this letter when we land. We don't know where we are going to land yet. The captain is the only one who does.

Monday, May 31.

Well the sea is still rough and we all get soaked when we go to the front of the boat.

Tuesday, June 1.

We are starting to look for torpedoes now, but I don't think we will see any as quite a few boats are passing in from England.

Wednesday, June 2.

All the life boats are being lowered to the water to-day and we are still having life belt parade, so I think we must be getting near danger. To-morrow and Friday all soldiers in khaki uniforms are not supposed to go on deck until after dark. Harold and I are going to start sleeping on deck to-night. Most of the fellows started on Monday night. So far I have not been seasick, but about half the fellows were sick for a few days. I think we are going to land at Plymouth, but we are not at all sure as yet. We expect to land on Friday night or Saturday morning.

Friday, June 4.

Well, mother we expect to land to-night and I will not be sorry; it has been so long and tiresome; 13 days since we started. A lot of porpoise were jumping out of the water around the ship this morning. I hope we do not have to unload these horses. Some are pretty ugly. I have been bitten a couple of times, but nothing very bad.

Well, I will close with love to you and dad. Hoping you received my cable O.K.

Yours lovingly,

CLAUDE.

In a later letter he tells of arriving at Shorncliffe and of meeting a number of Peterborough boys there, including Ross Laing.

"SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE."

This picture of half a back axle, one wheel, and a Goodyear Tyre shows "all that was left of an automobile struck by a shell somewhere in France." A laconic story, this recital of the few known facts. But imagination refuses to stop there. Racing onward, it seeks to fill in the questionable blank spaces. To whom belonged the vanished car of war? What was its errand? Was it a Red Cross ambulance bent on its perilous duty? Or did it belong to a grim general and his aides, hurtling over the once smooth and peaceful highroads?

Quien sabe? as the Spaniards say. All we know is that an obliterating shell burst "somewhere in France."

TO-NIGHT'S BIG SHOW AT EXHIBITION GROUNDS

Opening Performance of the Big Carnival Week of Pierson's Fine Attractions

The Carnival week of Pierson's big Canadian shows opens to-night on the Exhibition Grounds. This Canadian combination has been travelling in good luck through Ontrario, having more recently performed to big houses in Brockville, Kingston, and Belleville. The varied character of the attractions are all calculated to arouse interest and startle the big audiences. Thrilling feats are diversified with amusing and instructive features in different tents, which hold the attention of the people continually.

Mr. Charles Mann, one of the representatives of the big shows, has been in the city all day, perfecting arrangements for the week's business which opens to-night. He is very sanguine of large patronage from the citizens of Peterborough and promises that no one will go away without having received full return for their money: The following complimentary comment from the Kingston Daily Standard of June 9th, will be of interest:

"There was a big attendance for the opening of Pierson's big show on the common below Qeen's campus on Union street last night and the quality of the performances—each and everyone—was quite up to the expectations of all who were there.

Side shows of every kind were to be seen, but what was perhaps the most attractive feature and that which drew the largest crowd was the "Death Bowl," as it is known to the circus people. This is where the motor cyclists, Ernie Costalder and James Lamont defy death by their dare-devil antics on machines which whirl around the motor-drome at a rate of from 75 to 90 miles per hour. It is an attraction that is well worth seeing and certainly looks impossible until witnessed by one's self. Costalder's death dip is more than wonderful—it is beyond description. These two riders flirt with death at every turn of the bowl, defying the laws of gravity as they speed their machines around the almost perpendicular "saucer".

"The other attractions were equally good in their way. Every tent had its feature and every feature means "something doing every minute." There's everything from a fortune teller to a wild west show. The latter is perhaps worth special mention—every rider is well trained and the different parts of the programme carried out in a splendid manner.

"The 'Pierson Side Shows' is a Canadian concern and the actors are, for the most part, Canadian. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pierson are Canadian born, and play their parts in the side shows. Mrs. Pierson is a particularly amiable person who excels in pointing out the different attractions to the crowd. She has a most pleasant manner and no inconvenience is too great if she can please or help the patrons of her show."

Death of Mr. A. R. Clarke

Former Peterboro' Man Succumbs to Shock Suffered in Lusitania Disaster

A well known Toronto manufacturer died last night in the person of Alfred Russell Clarke, president of the A. R. Clarke & Co., Limited, according to a cable received from Mrs. Clarke, who went to England over two weeks ago to look after the welfare of her husband. After a protracted illness which was a result of Mr. Clarke passed away after rallying several times. Hope was held out several times for a recovery but when he began to sink on Saturday it was seen that the end was inevitable.

A cable was received on Sunday morning by his son, Griffith B. Clarke, who was left in charge of his father's business, that he was sinking rapidly, and two more messages later in the day told that Mr. Clarke had died.

HAD MANY INTERESTS

Born in Peterborough 66 years ago, Mr Clarke continued his father's business there until 1892, when he removed to Toronto. Since that time he has been prominent in the business life of the city, being a member of Board of Trade, and chairman of the tanners' section for several years. As a member of the executive committee of the Manufacturers' Association, a director of the Toronto Housing Committee, and a member of the Board of Industry, he took an active interest in Toronto's development from many standpoints.

A stalwart Conservative and president of the Riverdale Business Men's Association, and treasurer and life long member of the Metropolitan Church, he caused his influence to be felt in many circles. Mr. Clarke was an enthusiastic golfer and motorist, and was a member of the Lambton Golf and Country Club, and the National Club.

He leaves a wife, one son, G. B., and a daughter, Vivian, both at home. The body will be brought back to Toronto for burial from the family residence, 72 East Roxborough Street.

Rogers To Run in Carlton

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 21.—It is believed that Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, will seek renomination and in his old seat in South Winnipeg, just in the county of Carlton, at the present represented by W. F. Garland, whose name figured before the Public Accounts committee in connection with the Powell drug contract last session.

Kawartha Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire

At a largely attended meeting of the above Chapter held on Saturday evening, in the Hall of the Public Library, it was decided that meetings for work be held every Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock until the end of October, when it may be necessary to change the day. Owing to the 57th Chapter having previously arranged to have a garden party at Mrs. Vincent Eastwood's on Saturday of this week, it was decided to postpone the one arranged by the "Kawartha" Chapter until Monday, 28th June. In view of the splendid work done by the members of the 57th Chapter, not only in a public way, but also much that has been done quietly, it was felt it would not be gracious on the part of the new Chapter to hold their party previous to that arranged for by the 57th Chapter, as the two Chapters are in no way in opposition to one another.

The 57th being a military Chapter, and the "Kawartha" a non-military one, although the energies of the new Chapter will be directed along patriotic lines as long as the war continues, afterwards they may be diverted along other channels, such as the beautifying of our city or in any way which appeals to the members.

The attendance at the meeting was most gratifying, and the "Kawartha" Chapter is on the high road to success, judging by the keen interest evinced and the large membership already enrolled.

The party at the residence of Mrs. (Judge) Huycke's on the 28th will take the form of a bridge from 3 to 5 o'clock. Refreshments will then be served, to which gentlemen are cordially invited. Tea will be served on the lawn if the day is fine. Tickets may be had from any of the members. The entire proceeds go towards the purchasing of sand-bags for use at the front.

NURSE WITH McGILL CORPS DESCRIBES TRIP ACROSS TO ENGLAND AND THEN TO FRANCE

The following are a couple of letters received by Mrs. Eastwood of Marmora, from her daughter, Miss Victoria Eastwood, who is a member of the McGill Corps of nurses, which left recently for the war area in France. Miss Eastwood is a niece of, Mr. I. Eastwood, of Peterborough, and Mr. Thomas Eastwood, of Buckhorn:

London, May 17, 1915.

Dearest Mother,—

Sent you a letter from Plymouth on Saturday, but will write again in case it is delayed. It was the most thrilling thing Friday night. It seems our convoy missed us in some way, and Thursday night and Friday we were in the Bay of Biscay—look that up on your map. Then on the afternoon of Friday we were running up the coast of France, seeing all sorts of trawlers and sailing vessels, some steamships, and of course everyone looked like a cruiser to us.

There were six machine guns mounted, with gunners on guard—the soldiers were all given their guns and some rounds of ammunition. Other officers were promenading the deck with us, and all had revolvers. It hardly seemed possible that any moment a submarine might pop out of the water at us, as they did at the Lusitania. On Friday evening about dusk, 7.45 or 8 o'clock, suddenly from out of the seas appeared five torpedo destroyers, not a light of any sort on any of them. There was a sort of a mist, and it was so creepy, two on the land side, one behind, one in front and one on the other side. We had no lights either but we were all hanging out on the deck watching everything. Sometimes they would signal with green or white lights. We were all ordered in off the decks at ten o'clock, so we danced or fooled around—went to bed about 12 o'clock. The destroyers took us right near the harbour of Plymouth. They said that there were two German submarines on the outlook for us in the offing, but they dare not attack. We docked about 7 o'clock but nobody was allowed off the boat. So the Highlanders played their pipes and the band played and we all wrote letters and said our farewells. At 9 o'clock we saw the Dublin Fusiliers embarking for the Dardanelles. Such splendid looking soldiers. It was so sad.

In the harbour there were torpedo destroyers, cruisers, mine sweepers, launches and everything imaginable.

At one o'clock the nurses took a special train for London, the rest of our unit and the 215th Battalion going to Shorncliffe. We arrived at Paddington station at 7 p.m., not very tired. The country was so beautiful, we walked every inch, everything so green, apple blossoms, flowers. It was heavenly.

Automobiles met us at the depot, and we were brought to the hotel. It is very comfortable. Sunday (yesterday) we did as we liked. I went for a walk in the morning, down Oxford, Regent, Picadilly and Trafalgar square.

In the afternoon we went to service in Westminster Abbey. I cant' describe the Abbey, it is all so beautiful. After service we walked about a little, but it was only for a short time. After that we walked through the gates at Whitehall, and saw the guards in their get-up, then auto to St. James Park and on up to Buckingham Palace, and then to Hyde Park. One cannot grasp it all. In the evening we took a motor bus and rode away down through the business section, and coming back were searchlights everywhere sweeping the skies for aeroplanes and Zeppelins.

The streets are almost dark; just as few lights as possible, and they all have shades on top.

(Haven't time to finish before we leave.)

Boulogne, May 20, '15.

My Dear Mother,—

Two weeks ago to-day since we left and it seems years and years. Came over last Tuesday and crossing the Channel we strained our eyes every minute for submarines, but none appeared to our disappointment. It was a drizzling cold, wet day, and we were glad to get into the hotel here. Have seen Gertrude and lots of the other girls and they are the fattest, healthiest looking lot I have ever seen with rosy cheeks and not a bit tired. They are very well looked after, and the food is splendid. It is all rot about poor food. Everything is delicious.

The Canadians' praises are sung everywhere. The Germans say "The French are cowards, the British are brave, but the Canadians are Devils—they are perfect demons." We have been waiting to be sent to our hospital. It is not McGill. We have been separkted and sent to different places for the present. Our unit will not come together for six weeks or more, but we are glad to be busy in the meantime. Thirty-five of us are together and came over since, but most of the others are in all directions, Elweden, Rouen, Versailles, etc. I was simply delighted when I found myself over with the first crowd.

Oh, the things I have to tell you—the things I have seen!

This is a quaint little place—all nationalities. I find that my French is working beautifully. We saw one of our doctors this morning, who had just come over from the trenches. He looks as fit as a fiddle and told us stories for hours. We see many things to interest us and always have our ears open. People come up and ask us who we are, our uniforms are so different from the English nurses, and many Canadians have asked us and are always so glad. We move soon."

"TORIE."

CRAZED MAN KILLS FAMILY

Wealthy Ohio Farmer Shot Wife, Daughter, Son and Himself.

FOREST, Ohio, June 19.—Harry Dysinger, wealthy farmer, almost wiped out his own family to-day, while deranged.

Dysinger shot and killed his daughter, Esther, aged 15, as she slept; fatally wounded his wife and elder son, Herbert, 17, then changed the rifle he had used for a shotgun, and shot and killed himself. His son, Kenneth, 10, escaped by grappling with his father. Dysinger used a hatchet in a second attempt to kill his son Herbert.

Dysinger wrote letters to each member of his family last night, threatening to shoot himself. He asked his elder son to "take good care of mother."

Large Crowds Participate In Decoration Ceremony

Little Lake cemetery seldom looked better than than it did yesterday when the members of the Peterborough and Otonabee lodges of the Independent Order of Oddfellows foregathered for the purpose of decorating the graves of departed brethren. The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful. The ceremony of decoration day as interpreted by the fraternity under whose auspices it is held was carried out with a spirit of reverence eminently befitting such an occasion. One hundred and fourteen graves were visited and as many floral tributes were distributed in memory of those who have departed this life. Propitious weather favoured the large crowd that participated in the observance of the occasion, many of whom availed themselves of the opportunity to decorate the graves of relatives and friends. The members of the respective lodges congregated outside of their headquarters, corner of George and Hunter streets, shortly after two o'clock, and headed by the Salvation Army band, marched to the cemetery. Lieut.-Col. Miller acted as grand marshal. Upon their arrival at the cemetery the members were addressed by Mr. David Moore, Past Grand of Unity Lodge, No. 47, Hamilton, who acted as Noble Grand and conducted the ceremonies incident to yesterday's event.

Noble Grand's Address.

"The beautiful ceremony in which we as members of a great fraternity are about to take part—that of decorating the graves of our departed brethren is surely one that is in perfect harmony with this beautiful day, said Bro. Moore. If aught were needed to bring our hearts and minds into perfect sympathy with the work before us, this scene of vernal loveliness should alone suffice. Tears of sorrow and love have hallowed this soil and as we stand here to-day our quickening heart throbs tell us we have reached a place where we can understand the depth of meaning in the words, "One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." How often in this quiet place our thoughts have been deeply stirred as the seasons passing brought their changes and we have been led to ponder on the mystery of death. Death has been called the "grim reaper" and "sometimes the "great mystery," and yet to the truly thoughtful, life is a greater mystery than death and truth today bids us lift eyes of faith and see beyond the many mounds round about us here, the many mansions of the realms eternal. This in keeping with all that Oddfellowship has taught us that we bring here to-day these tokens of remembrance and with tender thoughts and loving hands place them on our departed ones, symbolizing as these beautiful flowers do, a resurrection unto life and beauty of what has seemed death and decay.

A Glorious Cause.

"Save in such forms as our ceremony may take we shall not speak of sorrow for the departed," continued the speaker, "nor in our words seek to praise them, yet deep sorrow is in our hearts to-day, for as we decorate the graves of our brothers here, our thoughts are also of our brothers — not only of our Order, though of these there are many—but of our brothers in a wider sense who went forth at our country's call to fight in a glorious cause, in order that the flag we honour and love shall still, "Flutter and flaunt to the winds of God, an emblem of justice wherever it waves." Many of those who went away will return no more. They sleep in graves which perchance no loving hands shall strew with flowers and with all who mourn for them we mourn today.

And now my brothers may the influence of this gathering be not a passing one; may it afford inspiration and give us zeal in all our work, and bearing in mind he grand motto of our Order, Friendship, Love and Truth, may this be a time of high resolve.

Following this, the ceremony of decoration was proceeded with, after which a brief meeting was held in connection with the service, at which addresses were delivered by His Worship, Mayor Buller, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., and Adjutant McElhiney. Mayor Buller spoke of the timely references that were made to those who had gone forward in defence of the Empire. Among those who had fallen he referred to the late Major G. W. Bennett.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie said that he was glad to be present and to be a member of the Order. Those who had fallen should serve as an inspiration of ours to live and die.

Adjutant McElhiney contributed a few well chosen remarks in which he emphasized the significance of Christian living.

Corp. J. Smith Badly Wounded

Peterborough Man Who Enlisted in Montreal is in Hospital in Scotland

Through the following letter from Rev. J. Reid, of the Manse, Melrose, Scotland, and the photograph enclosed therein, it is learned that Corporal J. Smith, Canadian Field Artillery, formerly of Peterborough, has been badly wounded.

The Manse, Melrose, June 7, '15.

Dear Sir,—I was visiting to-day one of your Canadian heroes, who was severely wounded when the Canadians made their gallant stand at the second battle of Ypres. He was shot through both lungs, also through the left shoulder, and had a piece of shrapnel in the left foot, but I am glad to say that the doctors hope for a complete recovery.

I enclose his photo, as he used to work for the Canadian General Electric Company, in their machine shop, and I believe boarded with a Mrs. Geerie, [illegible] Avenue.

He belonged to the Canadian Field Artillery, at Montreal, but as he told me to-day, Peterborough is his home [illegible] the few in this hospital who can wear the South African ribbon, having gone through all that campaign with only a slight wound.

I am sending this note as perhaps some of his friends will be interested.

Yours, faithfully,

REV. J. REID.

Gas Bombs First Used 300 Years Ago By a German Adventurer

PARIS, June 21.—An article in the Paris Temps traces the origin of asphyxiating gas bombs back three hundred years. It says:

"The entire world is indignant that such methods of warfare are employed by men proclaiming themselves to be champions of a pre-eminent culture, but we should not be astonished or indignant at these proceedings. It was, in fact, one of their most famous generals who, in the seventeenth century, added to the art of killing the art of asphyxiating.

His name was Christopher Bernard von Galen. Never did a more sinister figure appear in the world to affright it by the atrocity of his exploits. He was born in Westphalia about 1604 in a prison, where his father was undergoing sentence for an assassination. Adopted by an uncle, Bernard Mallinkrodt, he showed a precious bent for pillage and violence. At first choosing a career of arms, he later preferred the ecclesiastical state, and in 1629 became canon of the cathedral of Munster.

"The bishopric becoming vacant that same year would have naturally fallen to the uncle, who was dean of the chapter, but Van Galen wanted the honour for himself and gave a grand banquet, plying the canons with wine, and during the course of the banquet they elected him bishop. Then he exiled his uncle and brought about his death.

"He raised an army of cutthroats and besieged Munster, bombarding the city without warning. He hired out his men, who sometimes numbered 20,000, sometimes to England, sometimes to France or Germany. He perfected the science of projectiles and invented incendiary bombs.

"In 1672 the Bishop besieged Groningen, using bombs which were the ancestors of shrapnel. Basnage describes them as being filled with sulphur pellets, saltpetre and gunpowder. These were used by day, but at night he fired enormous shells which opened in falling, letting loose swarms of bullets, copper blades and a matter of such an insupportable odor that the air became irrespirable; the inhabitants were obliged to fly from the stricken quarters, and many were asphyxiated.

"Later he used these incendiary and asphyxiating bombs at Cambrai and Ypres. The soldiers of Westphalia were no more sparing then than they are today of the marvellous Flemish city. They are doing three centuries later the same barbaric deeds.

"At least the criminal Von Galen, who led them to pillage, was overwhelmed with remorse in the last hours of his life. After his death his attendants invaded the episcopal palace, stole the bishop's wealth, stripped his body of its rich vestments and left it naked in his room. Thus was punished in his death one of those German soldiers of fortune who were ambitious of the fame of Attila. Let the Kaiser, the new destroyer of Ypres, past master of incendiary and asphyxiating artillery, meditate upon this example."

POLICE CHIEF WILL ATTEND CONVENTION

Chief Thompson Will Present a Paper on "Discipline and Department of Police Constables"

Beginning to-morrow, the eleventh annual convention of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada will open in Toronto. It was intended to hold the convention in Vancouver but owing to the war Toronto was later decided upon.

Committee room No. 1 of the City Hall has been placed at the disposal of the association to hold the meetings in. The first day will be devoted to the appointment of committees, applications for membership, and the reports of the president and secretary-treasurer. In the afternoon the City Council will give the association a drive around the city.

PAPERS TO BE READ

On Wednesday papers will be read by different members of the Association, including the following: Assistant Deputy Chief Archibald, "The Duty of the Hour"; Staff Inspector Gregory, "Domestic Relations"; Inspector Kennedy, "Police Correspondence"; Superintendent Joe Rogers, provincial police, "Usefulness of the Association." and Chief Thompson of Peterborough, "Discipline and Deportment of Police Constables."

The members and their wives will attend the baseball game in the afternoon and have lunch at the Island Cafe.

FREE RIDE IN CARS

On Thursday, the last day, the reports of committees will be held, of the next place of meeting. The convention will wind up with a dinner at night at the Carls-Rite Hotel. During the convention the members will be given free transportation on the street cars.

Will Prepare a New By-Law

Property Committee Seek to Provide Means of Regulating Scavengers

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Property Committee, together with City Solicitor Gordon and Sanitary Inspector Spence, will endeavour to formulate a by-law regulating scavengers to replace the present existing by-law which is said to be unworkable. The by-law will have something to say as to the prices that are to be levied for certain classes of work and the manner in which the duties are to be performed. Cans or receptacles used for this purpose will likely be submitted to the Property Committee for approval, after which it will be presented to the City Council for endorsation.

EAST CITY HEADING CITY BALL LEAGUE

Beat Empires 6-4 Saturday, While Thistles Walloped Classics 5 to 1—Huycke's Fine Pitching the Feature of Saturday's Double Header at Riverside Park.

	W	L	Pc.
East City	4	2	.666
Thistles	3	3	.500
Classics	3	3	.500
Empires	2	4	.333

With the City League schedule half way through East City shows in front. As a result of their defeat of the Empires Saturday, followed by the Thistles trimming the Classics, Dan McCabe's team is leading by one game, with six games still to be played. The race so far has been the closest in the history of any local league, and every one of the four teams is still strictly in the running.

In spite of the raw cold weather, there was a good-sized crowd of fans on hand, and they saw two good games of ball. The Empires badly beaten by the Classics a week ago, came back and gave the East City a good argument, losing by 6 to 4, while the Classics, after beating East Citys and Empires fell before the Thistles by a 5 to 1 score.

Many fans thought the first game would be a walk-over, but they got a surprise, the Empires playing good ball against the Ashburnham outfit. Yebbie Flaherty started the twirling for them, but threw his arm ont in the fifth, and the accident settled the issue. Henderson went in without warming up, and wild-pitched two runs in jig-time. After the bad start he went along in pretty good style, allowing only three hits for the balance of the game, but the damage had been done.

East City played their usual snappy game in the field, but Kirn was not as effective as usual, being found for thirteen hits, six of which were bunched for three runs in the sixth innings. Cranfield played for Empires and celebrated his appearance against his old team-mates by slapping out three nice hits.

Neither team scored in the first two innings, but in the third East City broke into the run column when Shaw singled and scored on safeties by Lowe and Barrie.

In the fifth Hagerman opened with a double and Shaw scored him with a timely single. Lowe filed to centre. With Barrie at bat Flaherty hurt his arm and had to leave the game after he had passed the East City shortstop. Joe Henderson succeeded him on the slab, going in cold.. Before he could settle down two wild pitches and a Swanston's single sent three runs over, and the East City team were 5 to 0 in front.

The Empires came back with a rally in the sixth that made things interesting, when singles by Johnston, Corrin, Heenan, Henderson, Cranfield and Sherrett sent three runs across the pan. With the bases full and two out. Murphy cracked a hot grounder to Hagerman forcing Sherrett and stopping a dangerous rally.

The Empires cut the lead down to one in the seventh, when Corrin singled and scored on Henderson's double.

East City made the game sure in the eighth, when Primeau walked, stole second and third and stole on Butcher's safety.

Corrin did some nice fielding in left field for the losers.

Struck out, by Flaherty, 5; by Henderson 3, Kirn 6. First on balls off Flaherty 0, Henderson 3, Kirn 3. Left on bases, Empires 11, East City 9. wild pitch, Henderson. Passed ball Taylor, Umpire, Quinlan.

Huycke's great pitching for the Thistles left little doubt in regard to the second game. His speedy shoots had the Classics completely baffled, and fourteen of them fanned. Two hits, one of them scratchy, was the sum total of their effort with the willow, while the Thistle outfield did not have a ball to handle. Gus Rose also pitched nice ball for the Classics, allowing but five hits, but his support was wobbly, and several wild heaves were costly.

The Classics were the first to score getting a counter over in the third on a pass to Davis, his seal of second, and Gus Rose's infield out. The Thistles got two in the fifth on an error by G. Rose, a pass to McQuaig, and Neary's muff of O'Connell's throw in the eighth, hits by Cavanah and Smythe and a pop fly which O'Connell and Neary mussed up, counted for two more, and in the ninth Matthews scored on a wild throw to third.

Lacrosse Team Will Practice This Week at Central Park and the Oval

Those who imagine that the lacrosse team is done have another think coming. This week will witness a transformation in the line-up that should bring the desired results. The game in Hastings demonstrated the team's strength and weakness. Of the new men, Hatton on the defence and Todd at inside home, handled themselves well. The next step is to arrange a line-up for the Campbellford game here on July 1, which Peterborough must win to stay in the running. To-night Johnnie Sutherland has called a practice in Central Park, and to-morrow night the team will jitney to the Oval for a workout. With Hamilton, Todd, Robertson, McCoy and a few other good home men to draw from, the locals should be able to get a home that will stop Campbellford's hired men. A strong defence can be easily secured, but where careful selecting should be done is in the centre field. Jack Crough played well in this position at Hastings, and would be even stronger there if his methods were a little more direct. To-night Todd will give the fellows a little chalk talk after practice, and it is hoped that all the players will be out.

The Waterloo Centenary

The centenary of Waterloo fell on Friday, the eighteenth day of June. A correspondent of the London Chronicle writes the article reproduced below. The day cannot be observed here as this correspondent suggests, but the spirit of his communication can be responded to. He writes:

On June 18 the centenary of Waterloo comes round. A year ago it would have seemed that all our martial thoughts, all that England would be thinking about war on that date would be about the tremendous deeds of our troops that rainy Sunday in Flanders when Europe was finally delivered from the arms of a tyrant. Many plans had been made to celebrate the centenary, but all have been superseded by the great celebration of Waterloo which is taking place in Flanders, where our army is again fighting for the freedom of Europe.

At home something should be done, and something significant. We owe that to the memory of the men who fought there. But it should not be only a few speeches and flags flying. It should be something to strike the imagination of the nation, and to have an effect on the one thing that matters — the strengthening of our fighting armies.

There is in London one Wellington Memorial, not very wonderful, perhaps, as a work of art, but which has a character and significance of its own most appropriate for a Waterloo celebration — the Achilles statue by Westmacott in Hyde Park. This is its inscription: "To Arthur, Duke of Wellington, and his brave companions in arms, this statue of Achilles cast from cannon taken in the battles of Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse and Waterloo, is inscribed by your countrywomen." The cannon that were melted down were twelve 24-pounders. The statue was placed there on the anniversary day of the Battle of Waterloo in 1822. It was in its day one of the most fiercely criticised statues in London, and much can be said against it yet, but it is a symbol of the great victory and of that gratitude of the people at home to the men who freed England from the menace of invasion. On June 18 that statue should, of course, be decorated. What would be the most inspiring chaplet that could be put round it? It should be encircled not with flowers, but with captured German guns.

USE THE CAPTURED GUNS.

Everyone who has followed the official reports and Eye-Witness's stories, and the thousands of letters from the front that have been published knows that the English have taken many German guns, besides machine guns, and other trophies. Yet, except the two in Whitehall and two recently given to Sheffield, and two at another town, the nation has seen nothing of these trophies. They do things quite differently in France. There is a large collection at the Invalides, in Paris, of guns, flags, and hundreds of other trophies taken from the Germans, and during the hours of exhibition multitudes gather and patiently wait their turn to file past these proofs of the prowess of their soldiers. There is the less reason for this in France, where the manhood of the nation is all under arms, and the more reason in England, where every soldier is a volunteer. Lord Kitchener has demanded an additional 300,000 men, and more and yet more will be wanted. The display of German cannon at the statue of Wellington would do more to fire the imagination of possible recruits than anything one can think of.

Recruiting officers tell us now that the main difficulty is the opportunity to get in touch with young men at a place where they are at leisure, and their thoughts can be kept on the tremendous subject. Recruiting meetings have become less and less valuable, for likely recruits do not attend them, and the band in Trafalgar Square has lost its novelty, and the recruiting marches do not give the opportunity for the recruiting sergeants to get to work. The sight of the German trophies so carefully withheld from us would be the talk of London, and would bring everyone to Hyde Park, and long queues would gather as at the Invalides for the chance of seeing them. The space would give recruiting sergeants their opportunity, and the mood of the men would certainly be propitious. Moreover, Hyde Park is a centre to which the Londoner has always turned in the big moments of his national and political interests. But the point need not be enlarged. Anyone can see how, given such a focus and inspiration, the spirit of London would be invigorated and would find its practical expression in legions of recruits.

And not only London. Nearly every great town in Britain has a Wellington monument. Why not place a German gun or other captured trophy by the side of every Wellington monument in the kingdom? It is understood that there are enough to go round. Let us thus invoke the indomitable spirit of Wellington on the centenary of his great victory over the last tryant who menaced Europe.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The first band concert of the season there, or in fact, since King Edward park was acquired by the city, will be held to-morrow evening, with the Salvation Army Band officiating. Arrangements have been made with the Utilities Commission to supply the necessary lights.

Will Be Absent.

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Property committee, who was largely instrumental in bringing King Edward park to its present stage of development will not be present for the opening band concert, owing to pressure of business.

Will Install Check Valves.

The Property committee has authorized the installation of check valves on the return lines to the heating boilers at the City Hall. This was decided upon at a meeting that was held on Saturday evening.

Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the City Council will be held this evening for the purpose of considering the proposal to lay three blocks of cement paving on George street.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

The Dufferin County Council made a grant equal to one mill on the dollar on the county's assessment, or about $10,000, to the Patriotic Fund.

Grant For Home Guard.

A deputation, consisting of members of the Home Guards of Barrie, Orillia and Collingwood, waited upon the Simcoe County Council and requested a grant to procure rifles and ammunition.

Municipal Ownership.

Sarnia City Council will offer the Sarnia Gas and Electric Company $185,000 for its plant and equipment, with the installation of the Niagara power the object in view. If the offer is accepted a hydro-electric by-law, will be submitted.

Hydro Employee Killed.

J. Bottomley, of Dundas, twenty-three years of age, fell from a Hydro-Electric pole and broke his neck.

T. A. S. CHAMPION WENT DOWN TO PARK YESTERDAY

The chairman of the T. A. S. excursion committees motored to T. A. S. Park yesterday morning about 10.30 to look over the ground, J. W. Fitzgerald and a number of workmen will go down next Thursday to put the property in shape. The club house looks very pleasing in a new white paint with green trimmings.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Serious charges of abuse by the Allies of the American flag have been made by Germany to the State Department, it became known to-day. They covered at least half a dozen instances in the past two months. The American Embassy at London was asked for a report, but has not yet replied.

BERLIN, Via The Hague, June 21.—Lemberg is expected here to fall before the eyes of the Kaiser, who is with the Galician army. The Russians are preparing to evacuate the city. A despatch from Przemysl early to-day reported that the Austrian regiments are storming the last line of Russian defences on the ridge eleven miles from the city, and that Austrian shells are falling in the western suburb of the Galician capital. Since early yesterday trainloads of Russian wounded have been hurrying out of Lemberg. They are moving north-east in the direction of Brody, five miles from the Russian frontier. Aviators have brought word that several trainloads of heavy guns used in the defence of Przemysl are moving out of Lemberg.

Letter From Pte. A. Noble

The following letter has been received from Pte. Arthur Noble, of the 7th Battalion, son of Mr. Isaac Noble, of this city. Pte. Noble refers to the possibility of being invalided home. The letter reads as follows:

Lincoln, Eng., June 2nd, 1915.

You will note by this that I have left France and am now in England. I had the misfortune to be slightly wounded on the 22nd of May at a place called Fleguard in France. However, I am practically better now, although I am still in the hospital. I will in all probability be discharged on Sunday and sent to a convalescent home for some time and then sent home. So good-bye for the present. I expect to be home in about three months.

Threw Himself in Front of Train and Ends Life

WHITBY, June 1.—The town was thrown into excitement this evening by the suicide of William Stone, the father of the young man who was mysteriously shot and killed while on duty as night operator at Whitby Junction station early in December last. In order to end his life, Stone deliberately threw himself across the tracks of the Grand Trunk Railway in front of a west bound freight train, just opposite his home. He was seen by the engineer of the train but too late to stop before several cars had passed over the body, cutting it in two at the waist, and cutting off the top of his head. "I will go and drown myself in the lake," are said to be Stone's last words to his wife before he left the house on the fatal mission which ended his earthly career. Stone had a short time previously been served with a subpoena to attend as a witness at a resumption of the coroner's inquest into the death of his son, which is called for Tuesday next. Stone came home under the influence of liquor between five and six o'clock, and in a very short time thereafter the tragedy occurred.

Coroner Dr. F. C. McGillivray, in accordance with the statute which demands an quest to be held in the case of a death caused by a railroad train, called a jury, who viewed the mangled remains at the undertaking establishment of Nicholson & Seldon, and then adjourned until Thursday next.

It was stated that the death of William Stone, Sr., would not interfere with the holding of the inquest into the mystery surrounding the shooting of his son, which will be resumed on Tuesday next. The former session was held early in the year and then adjourned indefinitely so that the Crown would be given time to make a thorough investigation into the affair.

Special Meeting of City Council

A special meeting of the City Council will be held this evening for the purpose of considering the question of laying three blocks of concrete paving on some street other than George street. The Council has already wished the three blocks of concrete paving on George street north, where traffic conditions are heavier than on any other street in the city. Not only that but they have decided to construct a pavement on George street that was intended for Hunter street, where traffic conditions are much lighter.

FIVE COMPANIONS KILLED BY SHELL

Private Wilbert McIntosh Had a Narrow Escape When Their Trench Dugout Was Struck

How five of his companions were killed by a shell which struck their "dug-out," is mentioned in a recent letter from Private Wilbert McIntosh, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus McIntosh. He is with the Hamilton Scottish Regiment, and states that most of his companions have been killed or wounded. The particular incident he referred to occurred in a trench. Private McIntosh was one of a group of ten who were occupying this "dug-out." He merely stated that five of them were killed by the shell which hit their position. A field post card was received from Private McIntosh this morning stating that he was well.

ITALIAN KING IS A COMRADE OF THE SOLDIERS

ROME, June 21.—A number of the entourage of King Victor Emmanuel has supplied to the correspondent some details of the King at the front. The monarch mixes freely with the soldiers, sharing their meals. He treats them with the greatest familiarity shakes them by the hand and pats them on the shoulder. They call him "comrade." The King sleeps in huts at the outposts and has been present in many actions.

One day recently King Victor gave his luncheon to a man at an out of the way post. When he felt hungry some time later he asked a soldier for a half a loaf of bread and sat down on the ground to eat it, surrounded by cheering soldiers.

Polishing Pearls.

Pearl ornaments may be elegantly polished by first rubbing with olive oil to remove the dirty appearance, then applying any red nail polish. This latter gives a burnished appearance, and with a little fast rubbing the pearl takes on a brilliant glow.—Scientific American.

Germany on North Sea.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES McWILLIAMS

After an illness extending over several months, death occurred last evening of Mrs. James McWilliams, at the home of her niece, Mrs. Charles Johnston, 264 McDonnel street.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Nancy Clarke, was in her 76th year. She is survived by her husband and one sister, Catharine.

The late Mrs. McWilliams resided in Westwood, formerly. She was born in Rodin, Ontario.

The funeral will take place to-morrow from 264 McDonnel street. Service will be held at the house at 2.30 o'clock. Interment in the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. E. E. Johnson of Bethany Tabernacle, will officiate.

Carnival Week Commences To-night

The H. T. Pierson's shows are featuring this season 'The Days of 49,' the big wild west show, an exhibition of more than ordinary merits. Manager Carlyle of this attraction has arranged a mighty amusement of organized depicted life, and scenes in the great west. Cow girls in feats of riding, shooting and roping.

Horse back riding is as common and familiar a pastime to the western girls as hoop rolling is to the damsel of the east. She goes everywhere on horse back. She can execute an equine quadrille or a Virginia reel, and then gallop twenty miles without feeling the least bit fatigued. She can rope and tie a steer, a horse, or ride a bucker, lodge a bullet in a target's bulls-eye, as she gallops, or performs most of the equestrian feats of her brother. She keeps company on horse back, and many a piquant retort, and her speech gains point and pudgency, from the accelerated gait or sudden volt of her horse, respondent to impatience or emphatic pressure of dainty heels, or out of quirk.

Yes, the western girl can ride a horse, as you will manifestly perceive when you witness the performance of the bevy of tanned beauties in the parade in the arena. Note their skill and fearlessness; observe their impatient recklessness; be enhanced by their beauty, spellbound by their achievements, and awakened to the joys of life by their ringing laughter.

The above is only one of the numerous attractions coming to your city all week, the others are all equally as good, and worthy of your patronage. A veritable fairly land grown up as you will see when you attend on the opening night. There is no admission charged to the grounds, and two bands will enliven the occasion with all the popular music of the day.

Caretaker at the Incinerator

Denis Keegan has been appointed temporarily as the caretaker of the incinerator at a remuneration of fourteen dollars a week, the work to be done without extra help being supplied by the city. The matter was decided at a meeting of the Property Committe of th City Council that was held on Saturday evening. A number of applications were received.

RYE SEVEN FEET IN LENGTH

Rye seven feet in length is to be seen on the farm of Mr. E. Bickell, Dummer township, while in Smith township Mr. H. Pearson has a field of rye, in which can be found stalks that will measure seven feet four inches in length. The ten-acre field will easily average five and a half feet.

Mr. Burnham on the Road Question

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The County Council appear to have taken my strictures on some of the roads to themselves. I did not blame the Council. I blame the system and so does everybody else who knows how tourists are shying off from the north country. Mr. Banks told me that scores of tourists during the last few days have expressed very decided opinions of the dangerous conditions of many of our roads. This is bad business and will result in heavy loss. If we once get a bad name for our roads the district will suffer heavily. My own opinion is that the provincial governments should take it up in conjunction with the federal government since if we had perfect roads in Peterborough County and bad roads outside it would be of no use for tourists coming from a distance. These are, in my opinion, the parties most to blame. I am very sorry that Rosen Shaw experienced the truth of my remarks to an extent.

TURKISH MUNITION DOCKS ARE DESTROYED

LEMBERG WILL BE IN HANDS OF ENEMY WITHIN WEEK

ARE HALTING ITALIAN ADVANCE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, June 22.—Strong Austrian defenses in Trentino and the Carnic Alps and heavy enemin reinforcements along the Isonzo are halting the Italian forward movement nearly all along the line, the War Office admitted to-day. Small actions in Pelgrino and upper Cordevole valleys east of Trient have disclosed strong lines of enemy armoured trenches, said to-day's official statement. Some of these are of concrete and sheet metal. In this region our forces have occupied Punta Tasas. In the region of the Carnic Alps the bombardment of Austrian positions at Malborget was resumed yesterday. Storms having interfered with operations on Sunday the enemy has delivered several fruitless attacks against our newly captured positions at Freikofel.

Siegel Takes Prison Term

GENESEO, N.Y., June 22.—Henry Siegel, former merchant prince of New York, who was convicted of accepting deposits for the private bank he operated in connection with his stores when it was insolvent, gave himself up to the court here to serve the ten months' sentence imposed upon him last November. After his conviction and sentencing Siegel was given six months' liberty under a stay to earn money to pay back as much of the $2,200,000 he owed the 15,000 depositors as he could. The offer of $150,000 on account made by Siegel recently was not presented to the court for its consideration.

APPARENTLY DESIROUS TO AVOID DISAGREEMENT WITH THE UNITED STATES

Suspension of the Deutsch Tageszeitung, Newspaper in Berlin, Because of Comments on the Lusitania Sinking, Interpreted to Mean a Desire to Continue Peaceful Relations With U. S. A.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

(By Carl W. Ackerman.)

BERLIN, via The Hague, June 22.—That the German Foreign Office desires to avoid anything likely to interfere with the peaceful understanding with the United States, was the interpretation placed to-day on suspension of the Deutsch Tageszeitung.

The announcement that the paper would not appear for an indefinite period was made last night. The ban is said to have been ordered because of an editorial that appeared yesterday morning. While no further explanation was offered it was accepted here that Count Reventlow's comments upon the Lusitania sinking and the German-American negotiations furnished the reason.

The American colony considers the suppression of the Tageszeitung the most significant development of the whole situation. Reventlow, the Tageszeitung's widely quoted naval and military writer, has shown the least tendency towards conciliation of all German writers. The fact that the paper that carried his articles has been suspended is therefore looked upon as a matter of great importance.

Germany's reply to the second American note probably will be delayed for at least ten more days. An official of the Foreign Office told me to-day that the situation at present is such that it is impossible to state exactly when the reply would be completed. The matter is now in the hands of Admiral Von Tirpitz personally. While he is formulating his suggestions the Foreign Office is analyzing the data brought to Berlin by Dr. Anton Meyer Gerhard.

HAS SEEN ZEPPELINS FLYING OVER RAMSGATE FOR MONTHS

NEW YORK, June 22.—Miss Clara Reis, fifteen years old, daughter of a New York manufacturer, told from the deck of the New York of the American line, how for months she watched Zeppelins sweep over her school in Ramsgate, in a trail of bombs and shells, on their voyages of destruction.

For two years she has been a pupil at Somerset House School, at East Cliff, Ramsgate. She has seen Zeppelins drop their flaming bombs with deadly effect, and has seen the futile efforts of the land and sea anti-aircraft guns to bring them down.

"My," she gasped, "it was exciting. We were chased out of bed almost every night by bell and sirens. It was the only exciting thing I did there in the whole two years. I'm mighty glad to get home, though, for now I can sleep a whole night through without expecting a bell."

Many of the Zeppelins flying over the different sections of England cross in the vicinity of Ramsgate, and for that reason there are many alarms when the land and sea batteries open up on the grey, long envelopes of gas that whizz through the air. Hundreds of tongues of lightning belch off the harbour and the towers on lan dsplit the night, and from all the heights there roar angry guns. And from above, speeding away from the aeroplanes which make after them, the Zeppelins answer with their flaming bombs.

It was on May 17 that Miss Reis had her greatest and most exciting experience, after which she and the other girls refused to go to bed until daybreak.

"It was 2 o'clock in the morning," she said, "when, my gracious what a racket. Our bell just rang and rang and all the sirens blew and the teachers and maids called to us to get up quickly. Our clothes were arranged neatly for expedience and we dressed quickly and then went in to help the little children. You know that school is for girls from one to fifteen years. Some of the other girls and I went to the window and got behind curtains and peeked out. We saw up in the sky three Zeppelins going along, with those bobbing cradles underneath, and from all of them were coming a perfect stream of bombs. After they left the Zeppelin a little ways they burst into flames and lit up everything.

"The guns nearby and the guns from off the harbour fired and fired. For two hours it seemed they stayed around, and we were hurried down stairs where we could not be harmed. Finally at four o'clock more sirens blew to assure everybody that everything was all over, and we were told to go back to bed. The little girls went, but I just could not, and some of us talked until morning."

ONLY TWENTY-ONE ADDED TO THE CANADIAN ROLL

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, June 22.— Only twenty-one names have been added to the Canadian roll of honour since yesterday. This is the smallest list for some time and indicates that the Canadian losses in the fighting between June 12 and 15 were light as compared with those sustained at St. Julien and Festubert. Casualties now total 9,238. Killed, 1,488; wounded, 5,691, and missing, 1,879.

MUNITION DOCKS ARE DESTROYED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ATHENS, June 22.—Turkish munition docks and military warehouses at Gallipoli are believed to have been destroyed or badly damaged in the heavy bombardment by the allied fleet Monday morning.

Mytelene despatches to-day said several units of Anglo-French naval forces shelled a Turkish town for three hours. Observers reported several buildings burst into flame and loud explosions were heard.

Not only do the new binocular microscopes prevent eye strain, but, because the operator is using both eyes, he receives more light and sees clearer images.

LAKEFIELD, June 22.—Mr. C. S. Carter, who has been principal of the Lakefield public school for the past four years, has enlisted in the third battalion of the Third Canadian Overseas Contingent, and left on Thursday last to join his regiment at Port Hope. Prior to his leaving Mr. Carter was presented with a military wrist watch and a safety razor by the teachers and pupils of the school.

Mr. A. T. LeFevre, who has been spending the past five weeks at St. John's, returned home on Tuesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Johnson and daughter of Port Hope, are spending a few weeks at "The Bungalow," Three Islands.

Mrs. Curry of Port Hope, spent few days last week in the village.

Miss Dench of Fowler's Corners, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. B. Q. Dench, at "North Douro Lodge."

The closing of the Lakefield Preparatory School took place on Friday evening last when prizes were distributed for successful work done by the pupils during the past year. A number of visitors were present on this happy occasion. Among those from a distance were Mrs. Smith of Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt of Toronto, Mr. Donald Fetheringham, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs R. W. Thomas, Peterborough, Dr. and Mrs. Cameron, Peterborough, Mr. Eldred Cumberland, Peterborough, Mr. Beresford Hamilton, Peterborough, Mrs. Curry, Port Hope, Miss Wood, Toronto, Prof. M. Mackenzie, Toronto, Mr. Allister McGillivray, Whitby, and Mr. Thomas Allen, Millbrook.

Mrs. W. Gillman is visiting friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. Leigh was in Peterborough last week attending a meeting of the council of women which was held on Friday.

Mrs. G. B. Hilliard and Miss Dorothy Hilliard left on Saturday to spend a few days in Kingston.

Mr. Archibald Lampman returned to the village on Friday after spending a few days at Port Hope.

Professor Michael Mackenzie and family of Toronto, passed through the village on Friday last on their way to spend the summer at "Lochend," Stoney Lake.

St. John's Sunday School is holding its annual excursion and picnic to Sandy Point this Wednesday, leaving by the regular morning boat at nine o'clock, and returning by the afternoon boat. The day will be spent in games, races, bathing and paddling, and a very enjoyable time is anticipated.

Messrs. L. Steele and A. V. Hill are spending a few days at Lovesick Lake, on a fishing expedition.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Payne left on Tuesday last to spend a short time at their cottage at Stoney Lake.

Mr. C. Leonard of Peterborough, spent the week-end visiting his daughter, Mrs. Hewitt, at "Uplands."

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Marling are spending a few days this week at "Point of Rocks," Stoney Lake.

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Lingwood of East Toronto, arrived on Tuesday last to spend the summer vacation at Lakefield and vicinity.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lough, Antigo, B. C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house and recommend it on the highest terms." I was formerly troubled with Eczema. I procured a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment."

THE RUSSIANS WILL ABANDON LEMBERG TO AUSTRO-GERMANS THIS WEEK, IT IS EXPECTED

French Are Sweeping Germans Out of Alsace and Are Now Within Five Miles of German, Lorraine—Italian Navy Blockading Austrian Naval Base.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 22.—It is fully expected here Russians will abandon Lemberg to Austro-German forces within this week.

ROME, June 22.—The Italian navy is blockading Pola, the Austrian naval base, and a land force will assist later.

PARIS, June 22.—The French are sweeping the Germans out of Alsace and are now within five miles of German Lorraine.

TORONTO, June 22.—Several alleged Austrian spies were arrested as a result of explosions in Amherstburg.

LIVERPOOL, June 22.—The captain of the steamer Cameronia says he rammed and sunk a German submarine.

ATHENS, June 21.—Supported by the guns of warships, the Allied troops moved further inland to-day and captured several miles of the Turks' trenches.

CAIRO, June 21.—A courier from Constantinople says it is generally thought the Sultan is dead and panic reigns in business circles.

CAPE TOWN, June 21.—General Botha's forces continue their advance and now occupy nearly all German Southwest Africa.

PARIS, June 21.—Despatches from the French front say the advance of the Allied troops is continuing though the Germans apparently are heavily reinforced at all points.

LONDON, June 21.—The House of Commons this afternoon practically gave the Government power, through the Bank of England to raise and spend money to unlimited billions to keep the war going.

Canadians Are Now Called The "White Canucks" By The British Tommies

TORONTO, June 22.—The following letter, dated June 3, has been received from Lieut. Douglas Adams of the 14th Battalion:

"We have 'been and done it again,' and now I am the only one of the original officers left in the company. I am temporarily in command, so I am busier than blazes, getting out casualty reports, nominal rolls, etc. It was doubly hard, as all our company records were lost in the big show at Ypres.

"We came to this part of the country two weeks ago, after a week's rest at Bailleux, and they shoved the poor old Third Brigade right into it. Our battalion was taken to the old German first line trench which had been taken a week before. My company commander came up to me a few minutes later with a map and said, 'Here's where you'll go and dig in. Here are the Germans now. They may be here when you get up. Good luck, and go to it.'

CALLED "WHITE" CANUCKS.

"I started off with half a company on a 1,500-yard constitutional, and we had no sooner got over the parapet when they opened on us with shrapnel. We passed through several lines of British troops, and since that performance the Canadians have been known as the "White Canucks." The roads looked very pretty on the map, but on the ground they were quite different—shell holes and ditches everywhere, so it was no wonder I lost my way and got into an old German communication trench 200 yards to the right of where I should have gone.

"When I got the men under cover I started to look around and found that the proposed attack hadn't materialized, and then if I had gone where ordered I would have to pass through the Germans. The last half of the trip we got rifle bullets as well as shrapnel, and I cannot understand to this day why I only lost 23 men.

EXPLORED DESERTED TRENCH.

"When it got dark I moved back a little and dug in. We were relieved just before daylight and moved back to the old German line, where we stayed for three days under constant shelling. Then we went out to billets for a few days before going to another frontage.

"This time I was sent to the first line with two companies. By the way we relieved the Royal Canadian Dragoons, who had just come over. We were in a reconstructed German communication trench there, and had another in front of us which the R.C.D.'s reported to be occupied by Germans. I was rather doubtful of this and sent out a patrol to a part of the trench 40 yards away. They reported "All clear," so I sent out another with bombers and a man with wire cutters and told them to try to get through the trenches to a point 350 yards west. This they did and built a barricade, reporting the Germans 20 yards off in another trench. The wire cutter found a mine every 25 feet, but missed two in the darkness. These were exploded just after daybreak.

The Flying Column.

"I put two platoons out in the new section and the next night rebuilt the whole business, and got three wounded prisoners. The following night the engineers came up and laid out new lines right and left to consolidate the new line we had taken. Then we were relieved and went back to a field full of dug-outs a mile in the rear. We acted as a support there for three days and moved back seven miles where we are in billets now, waiting to go to another part of the frontage.

"We have now been all along the British front, and the Tommies call the Canadians the "Flying Column." We have certainly earned the name, too.

"Coming out the other night I bumped into the 3rd Battalion and had a long talk with Pete Weldi. He's a corporal now, and having the time of his life."

Like Fruit Sprayers.

"It looks like the things they use for spraying fruit trees. The gas clouses to a cloud 20 to 40 feet high. I had a good look at it from the edges when they used it two miles from us on top of a hill. I could see it plainly, a greenish yellow which blotted out everything as it came along with a gentle breeze. That time the British were there and put on respirators and waited half an hour for the Germans to walk up to them. The slaughter was terrible. I have never heard anything so pretty as real British rapid fire mixed up with machine guns. The British Tommies have to get off fifteen shots per minute with good shooting and a lot do more than that. We are all equipped with respirators which are inspected daily in and out of the trenches."

Much Ammunition Blown Up By Spies

Russia Had Plentiful Supply at the Beginning of the War

NEW YORK, June 21.—John F. Bass, of Chicago, a newspaper correspondent, who performed noteworthy work in the Boxer insurrection, and later in the Phillipine campaign, returned to-day on the American liner New York, after ten months spent on the Russian battle front, where he was slightly wounded in the back of the neck by shrapnel from a German shell. Mr. Bass said that the reports of the shortage of arms and ammunition in Russia were minimized rather than exaggerated.

Many armouries and manufacturing plants in the interior of Russia, said Mr. Bass, which were stocked well with ammunition and arms at the beginning of the war, have been blown up by the German spies whose activity in that work has been facilitated by connivance with Russian military officers, themselves German, or of German descent. Mr. Bass himself was in Petrograd, he asserted, when a large powder plant was destroyed by a German agent.

"These spies," continued Mr. Bass, "maintain a regular system of communication throughout the empire, and a number of Russian officers are known to be implicated with them. While I was at Warsaw I saw one Russian officer hung for espionage. He was caught red-handed."

Mr. Bass was wounded on January 1st, on the Baura River battle line. He travelled along a 500-mile front from the Niemen to Warsaw and also touched on the Galician border. He was arrested twice on suspicion of being a German and once was detained for 12 hours. While at the front, he said, he frequently saw whole bodies of Russian troops some of them newly recruited and trained, sent into the trenches without rifles and arms, ordered to take the discarded weapons of the killed and wounded and use them against the Germans. Mr. Bass believes that the success of Russian arms depends altogether on Russia's rifle and ammunition supply. If she is enabled to get sufficient, she can hold Germany, he thinks, and whip Austria.

"Your father's all right at heart," sez I, though truth to tell his face had been too calculatin' to suit me, on the only times I'd seen it. "The trouble with him is that every time the still, small voice of his instinct tries to speak, he stands on its neck, and listens to what some book of rules has to say on the subject.

"You're a funny man," sez he, lookin' right at me. "I have never been able to talk right out to airy other man before, exceptin' Uncle Josiah and he is a great deal older; but you seem like an old friend."

"Well," sez I, "all the friends I've got who stand any show of bein' old friends, were old friends right from the first jump; so you're free to lean on me just as heavy as ever you can."

Her eyes roved around for some little time and then she sez, without lookin' at me, "I was only a child when my mother passed away, and my father allus hated to speak of her until since we have been here. What do you suppose this means?"

"Oh, Lord," sez I, "I don't know nothin' about such things!"

"You must have some ideas about it," she persisted. "Do you think it is because he is getting near the end, too? He seems stronger, but he is so much gentler and different in every way. What do you think it means?"

I'm allus willin' to have one dash at thinkin' when any one puts it square at me, and so I studied right earnest. I thought what the old hermit had said about a tired body an' a satisfied self-respect puttin' a feller in a mood to welcome death with open arms; but the' didn't seem much comfort in this for the girl. Her father had a tired enough body, but I rather doubted the self-respect part. He had been cannibal enough to eat up parts of the lives of both of his children, and his wife too, for all I could tell, and so I thought it would be just as well for him to live as long and repent as hard as it was possible for him to scratch out.

"I reckon what's softened him is just your lettin' yourself out and actin' natural," sez I. "Up to now you've been like a wood doll that he made himself and only worked when he pulled the strings. Even a baby gets tired of such a toy as that; but now you act like you, and it calls back the days when the world was all fresh and new to him. The Bible sez to honour your parents; but it don't say to humour 'em."

"I hope you're right," sez she.

"Furthermore," se'z I, gettin' ready to go on back to the Lion Head, "I don't think much o' your ridin' without stirrups, and I'm comin' over some time and give you a tryout."

"I'll dare ya to," sez she.

I looked into her face and her eyes were dancin', and a mighty pleasin' warmth crept up my cheeks to my eyes. It flashed across me right in a minute that Tom Smith had gone to Mexico, and good riddance to him, and then that miserable poke-in of a still, small voice of instinct, spoke right up and said that I wasn't just an animal, and I was a human and a friend; and it was up to me to help look after the girl and if I got to takin' things as they weren't meant, I'd spoil everything; so I switched on a grin, and sez: "It'll be a blame hardship for me; but I daren't take a dare."

Then I went back and pried Isaac apart from old Josiah and headed for home. I rode home mighty slow, myself, that day and I have to own up that mighty, mighty few voices have ever grated worst on my nerves than did the voice of my own instinct whenever I'd start to argue with it.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO.

Gettin' Through the Winter.

Ol' man Dort, over at Boggs, had a cage for his squirrel with a whirlagig attachment on one end of it in which the squirrel could run his best all day without gettin' anywhere, and ol' man Dort said that if the squirrel didn't have this attachment, he'd pine away for somethin' to do.

Now, city folks remind me of ol' man Dort's squirrel: they're all the time pityin' us folks because we must get so beat out lonesome through the winter, and yet when they tell me what they do to kill time, why, it allus reminds me o' that fool squirrel chasin' his tail around the wire wheel and pertendin' what a hilarious time he was havin'.

Muntin' was plentiful there at the Lion Head, Elliot was only about fifteen miles to the south, and if we felt like work there was allus plenty of it to be done right at home but truth to tell, we had the most solid fun just among ourselves on the evenin's we spent at home.

Isaac was a learned man but most of his ways were comical, Shorty was as free from edication as a coyote, but most of his ways were fierce, and it sure was amusin' to listen to their different views clashin' and Red sailin' in to help Shorty out.

Isaac was the awkwardest human ever I saw about sewin', and yet he worked at it faithful. He was particular fond of his smokin' jacket and ever since Crusader had tore ont the sleeve, he had been tryin' to sew it back in again, but without bein' able to get it in straight; so early in the winter he tried to sew it in while wearin' the jacket, and it was a sight to behold. No matter what he was doin', Isaac went about it with a deep-set, interested look on his face, like an old man huntin' for a leak in his roof by candle light, and this was one of the reasons why it was hard to resist pickin' out stunts for him to do.

After I showed him how to make his mule go by means of a tin cup, he never had any trouble in takin' a ride, although he didn't allus make the best of landin's, and he was thankful to me for this advice; but he had took it to heart about my askin' him what he purposed to do with his health after he had got enough to suit him; so about every chilly evenin' he'd get out his sewin' and begin to ask me about what the chances were for him gettin' work out our way. He had more time on his hands than anybody, and had come to that neighbourhood as soon as any of us, but he allus acted as though we had built that country, and he was a plumb foreigner to it.

Jim had large ways, and he didn't care a mite how long Isaac put up there, so even after we'd been a little rough with Isaac, we'd recall what a soft snap he was havin', and we wouldn't stay ashamed of ourselves very long.

I recall one evenin' when Shorty came in after a wet ride which had soaked his good nature entirely away, and though Isaac wasn't more of a pest than common, Shorty was unusual stirred, and Red had to handle his quirt purty severe. Isaac, he got his mendin' that night, same as usual. It was a chilly evenin' and all the boys were gathered about the fire in the bunk-shack. Isaac had a puzzled look on his face and it was sad, too, somethin' like what a dog who's lost his home wears, and I felt full o' sympathy with him at the start-off.

"Does anybody know of any kind of work that I could get to do, out this way?" sez he after a time, speakin' as though this was his first mention of the subject.

"You might set up a clothes-mendin' shop," sez Phil McLaughlin.

"I am in earnest," sez Isaac. "I have enjoyed myself immensely here, but it has occurred to me several times lately how long I have been visitin'. I hate to think of goin' back to a city, and yet I can't think of any work I could do in these parts which would pay me a livin'."

"Why do you call that garment a smokin' jacket," sez McLaughlin when no one offered any hints of a waitin' job; "you never smoke?"

"They are largely used by men who do smoke, to save their other garments from the filthy tobacco ashes," sez Isaac, who never did care whose feelin's he tramped on. "Can't any of you think of some kind of work out here for which I am fitted?"

"We ain't none of use ever seen ya try to work," sez Shorty, blowin' out a cloud of smoke; "how do we know what you're fitted for?"

"I am fitted for any sort of mental work," sez Isaac; "but then, of course, you wouldn't be much of a judge of that."

Shorty looked purty well slapped, but after studyin' a while, Red sez: "If this was a mule ranch, he'd be a good job for ya right here."

"What could he do on a mule ranch?" growled Shorty, as fierce as though mule ranches was the one thing he was patriotic for.

"Well," sez Red, gently, "I once knew a feller who was the dead image of him, and he had a sure enough good job on a mule ranch."

"What did he do?" sez Shorty.

"He weaned the mule colts, that's what he did," sez Red.

"Weaned 'em," sez Shorty, "how?"

"Why," sez Red as kindly as though breakin' the news gentle to an infant, "whenever they wanted to wean a mule colt, they'd get this geezer to crouch down on the off side of the mule colt's mammy, and then when the mule colt would stoop down to get a little nourishment, he'd see that face lookin' out at him, and he'd stampede right now. After that one fright you never could coax a mule colt close to his mammy again, never again."

HEART WOULD PALPITATE.

HAD WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

Palpitation of the heart is one of the most common of all heart troubles. The heart will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over the system accompanied by weak and dizzy spells, making you feel that you are surely going to die. When you feel this way what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will strengthen the weak heart and build up the nerve system. For this purpose we know of nothing that can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better within a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood and finds great relief in using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

OBJECT OF SACRIFICE

It Appeared That Way on Surface, but Everything Turned Out Lovely.

By BRUCE BAYLIS.

Everybody of consequence in London had come to know Herbert Fanshawe, the American who was claiming the Fanshawe estates, covering thousands and thousands of broad acres in the most smiling part of the Midlands. The claim had been originated by Fanshawe's grandfather, and it had been in the English courts for a little less than three-quarters of a century. Fanshawe's father had revived the suit, and a new judge had presided over a new court, addressed by new lawyers. And the case had slept and revived until the young engineer, with all the confidence of youth, had left his home city in Illinois to press his claim. And he seemed likely to win.

That was what startled everybody. Brand new evidence had been brought to light, and the issue was a foregone conclusion. Sir Thomas Fanshawe was in despair. He was an old man, and if he lost, his daughter, his only heir, born to him when he was well past fifty, would be turned out of her historic home, penniless.

Fanshawe had journeyed to Elmsdale to meet his solicitor and the defendants. He was shown into a spacious room, where Sir Thomas, a gray old man, sat toasting his feet at the fire.

Three lawyers sat gloomily around the mahogany table, and Fanshawe's lawyer, the only cheerful person present, was the only one who condescended to notice him when he entered. The old man at the fire merely inclined his head at the introduction.

"Mr. Fanshawe," said his lawyer, "Sir Thomas Fanshawe has made a singular proposal with a view to settling this trouble out of court. That is why I asked you to come down here."

"Yes," said the young American briskly. "I am in your hands."

"Not in this instance," answered his lawyer sharply. "Sir Thomas proposes that you drop your suit, leave him in possession of the estates until his death, become his heir, and marry his daughter, Miss Mary, whom you were kind enough to say you admired when you saw her in court."

Fanshawe gasped at the cold-bloodedness of the proposition. His lawyer [illegible] at his success. His sympathies were palpably with the defendants. He was cold, almost rude toward his client.

But the mere words had set the blood racing in Fanshawe's veins. He had loved her at first sight, this quiet, reserved girl in black, with the dark hair and eyes, the soft speech, a typical scion of an old and proud country family.

"What does Miss Fanshawe say?" asked the young man, quietly enough, though he could hardly control his voice.

The old man spoke. "Mary!" he called. The girl glided into the room and stood looking at Fanshawe without expression. "Are you willing to make this sacrifice, my dear?" her father asked.

She nodded, and looked at Fanshawe as though he were an inanimate object.

"Are you willing, Mr. Fanshawe?" asked his lawyer. "I presume that such an alliance will mean a good deal to an American. The Fanshawes came over with the Conqueror. And naturally Sir Thomas does not want his daughter to be turned out of her home."

"I'm willing," answered Fanshawe thickly. He would win her love afterward, he assured himself. He could not let her go. He had never loved any woman as he loved her.

"Then," said one of the lawyers, "the ceremony may as well take place now. I am the registrar for this division. You are both willing to take each other for better or—worse?" He smiled acidly at his jest. "Please sign your names here in the presence of these witnesses," he said.

That was all. They were man and wife. Fanshawe looked stupidly around him. What should he do next?

"Here is Sir Thomas's will," said Fanshawe's lawyer. "There will be no later will. You can rely on his honor? Or do you want a post-nuptial settlement?"

"No, I am satisfied," said Fanshawe. He turned and went into the hall, quite dazed. He put on his hat. Nobody followed him. He went out into the sunshine. He walked out of the grounds. Ten minutes later he was on his way to London. He had been so stunned by the transaction that he had run away. He wanted to be alone to think. He had received no advice or suggestions; the sentiment of everyone seemed to be that he was an interloper who had obtained his demand, but deserved to reap only the bitter tares that he had sown.

He slept over his problem, and, when he opened his morning paper, he saw a brief notice that Sir Thomas had died the preceding evening suddenly. Apoplexy was given as the cause of death.

Fanshawe's lawyer received him with suavity. "I regret deeply," he said, "but Sir Thomas died before he was able to sign that will. It is so much waste paper. The ownership of the estate depends upon the verdict of the court, which should be given today. If it is adverse, you will have nothing, since the Married Women's Property act expressly deprives you of all claim upon your wife's estate. And—I must decline to act as your lawyer further."

"May I ask why?" inquired Fanshawe.

"What Do You Want of Me?"

"Because, sir, you have taken a despicable advantage of an old man's love for his daughter," answered the other.

"But I love her!" cried Fanshawe, and then, humiliated at the position in which he found himself, he left the office.

Outside in the street he saw, in flaring letters on a huge poster FANSHAWE CASE—RESULT. He bought a copy, and then, seized with a sudden thought, instead of opening the paper, he put it in his pocket unread and hurried back to Elmsdale. He could gather no impression of what the verdict had been from the butler's impassive demeanor.

"May I see Miss Fanshawe?" asked the young man.

"You mean Mrs. Fanshawe, sir?" inquired the servant, and when the other, chagrined, assented, Fanshawe was shown into the same room where he had sat the day previously. A fire was burning in the grate; it seemed difficult to believe that the old man who had warmed himself at it the day before now lay dead in his room.

The door opened and his wife glided in. She was dressed in deep mourning, but if there had been tears on her face there was no sign of them now. She stood quietly before him.

"What do you want of me?" she asked.

"I want to say," said Fanshawe thickly, "how sorry I am for the loss you have suffered. Please do not think that I shall intrude upon your grief. But I had to have an explanation. Why did you make this abominable bargain?"

"To please my father," she answered, showing for the first time a trace of emotion. "You and your father and his father have embittered our lives. You made my father's last years wretched and hastened his end. It was his constant terror that I would be driven out of my home when he was gone. With us the individual is subordinated to the family. For the sake of my father and all that he believed in I agreed to marry you. Now, then, why did you make the bargain?"

"Because I love you," answered Fanshawe unsteadily.

"You love me?" she repeated incredulously.

"I love you," he answered doggedly. "I knew that unless I could get you yesterday you would either turn me from your home or leave it yourself, and I should never see you again. You must remember that I have seen you several times before—in court," he added, smiling. "That was my reason."

He drew the paper from his pocket and placed it, still folded, upon the table.

"Of course you know the verdict," he resumed. "But I do not. Strange as it may seem, I have not looked at that newspaper. I resolved before doing so to visit you here and say to you: whatever the verdict has been, whether in my favor or yours, will you give me a chance to win your love? Will you let me visit you here once a week and talk to you, exchange opinions with you, learn your ways of thought and tell you mine? I shall never ask anything more—you will be as free as now till you yourself come to me. Will you?"

The girl had stepped nearer to him and was gazing at him in amazement. Her face was flushed, her eyes shining.

"You really love me?" she said in credulously. "And you have really not seen the verdict? Suppose—suppose that it was in your favor!"

"I still hold to my proposition," he answered.

She was seemingly overwhelmed by his self-revelation. She looked at him as though stupefied. Fanshawe stretched out his hand toward the paper, but she anticipated him.

"No, wait!" she said. "I accept your offer. I never thought of you as a human being, but just as a hideous duty, an object of sacrifice. I accept your offer in my father's name. If he had known you it would have been so different—"

Suddenly she went up to him.

"I am your wife," she said softly, and raised her lips to his. And Fanshawe knew that he had gained her.

Presently she slipped out from the room and he looked at the newspaper. It made no difference, but—

The trial had been adjourned.

TROOPS AND MUSIC

Military Bands Are a Big Feature In the Russian Army.

OUTDO ALL OTHER NATIONS.

Besides a Brass Band Each Regiment Has a String and Wood Orchestra and a Drum Corps—Even Posts With Only a Battalion Have Full Bands.

One feature of the Russian army which from time to time has been brought to the attention of the world outside of Russia, chiefly by publications concerning themselves with matters appertaining to music, is the unusual size and number of bands in the military forces of the czar. The Russian soldier has more martial music than any other soldier in the world.

There is no regiment in the Russian service without its own band, and at posts where not a regiment but only a battalion is quartered that battalion has its band. And these Russian military bands are big and impressive musical organizations. Within each is a brass band and an orchestra of string and wood instruments with, of course, the necessary touch of brass and sheepskin. The result is that, while these military bands play primarily military music, they also adapt themselves to the performance of such music as the American hears at a symphony concert.

The regimental band in the United States army consists of thirty-six pieces, and bands on flagships of the navy are smaller. The average Russian army band, or orchestra, has from forty to fifty musicians, and the orchestras of certain guard regiments contain sixty. There are more than 1,000 Russian regiments, and there are in the army about 50,000 bandsmen. Then in the naval and military schools and in the navy there are bands, and if to these are added the twenty to forty musical pupils of a regimental orchestral school and the musical companies of battleships and various cadet schools the number of military musicians in the armed service of Russia mounts to the surprising total of approximately 100,000 men, a number greater than the whole enlisted and commissioned personnel in the American army.

Russia takes a commendable pride in its military bands, and the musicians are all competent. The bandsmen are trained in the regimental band schools or in one of the numerous musical conservatories maintained by the government, and each musical company has a conductor and his assistant, both being graduates of one of the national conservatories of music.

The Russian designation of these military and naval bands is musykalnaya kammanda, and they constitute an important factor in the life of the civil population, the government using them for the entertainment of the public as well as for the musical education of the masses very much as the United States uses its military bands at Washington—that is, in providing free concerts for the people. Open air concerts are common in the parks of the larger towns and smaller cities throughout Russia during the summer, and in winter free recitals are given in the barracks and public halls. On Sundays, fete days and national holidays band concerts and orchestral performances are usual in the well settled regions of vast Russia.

The Russian military band is considerably more than an army institution. The cost of maintaining so many bands is considerable even for so rich a country as Russia, but the government considers them as a profitable investment. The Russian soldier has come to require music and he demands it, and these bands entertain the masses and the classes. These bands cater to the highest musical taste, and the average Russian in the cities knows when music is good and he will have no other. The bands play the new and popular music by composers like Ivanoff, but on all the band programs you will see such names as Liszt, Schumann, Chopin, Tschaikowsky, Glinka, Strauss and Debussy.

The army band spreads its musical influence over Russia in another way. After passing through the regimental band school the bandsman serves three years. Then he passes out of the army, usually returning to his native village. The custom is for him to carry back into civil life with him the instrument he played in the government band. His musical training and accomplishment make of him in his home town a more prominent and important man than he otherwise would be. He often takes up the teaching of music and almost invariably keeps up the practice of his art. Very likely he organizes a village band or orchestra, and into this come amateur musicians and other military bandsmen whose army service has expired. About 15,000 Russian army musicians annually leave the army and return home to their families.—Washington Star.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is excessive acid in the stomach, aggravated by food fermentation. Hyperacidity irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties.—F. J. G.

WILD DOGS PEST OF AFRICA

Hunting in Packs, They Do Incalculable Damage to Sheep and Other Live Stock of Farmers.

There is no wild animal in Africa which deals out such wholesale destruction to certain kinds of game as the hunting dog. Leopards have been known to be chased up trees; hyenas have been found in process of being mobbed to death; the lion himself, when found solitary, is sometimes pursued by a pack.

Bush pirate and Ishmael as he is, strangely enough toward man the hunting dog seems to betray little or no aggressive tendency.

Wandering about in bands over huge areas of wild country, and seldom remaining more than a few days in any one locality, the hunting dog is probably less frequently encountered than any other kind of carnivore, and therefore in less degree than any other has he the experience of man and his ways. There is at least no doubt that when this experience has been acquired few creatures show more haste in escaping from man's presence or display more intelligence in doing so. But if there is little ground of complaint against him as regards man personally, it is a very different matter where the latter's flocks and herds are concerned.

When the farmer first begins to graze his sheep in a wild country, one of the chief, if not the most dangerous, of his enemies is the hunting dog. Sweeping down upon a flock, a pack of these animals will in a very few minutes entirely annihilate it, killing and reading apparently for the mere pleasure of doing so, and then, having completed the slaughter, will probably be miles away wreaking the same destruction elsewhere, ere the irate owner and his friends have time to arrive upon the scene.

A long crusade against them in Cape Colony resulted at length in their virtual extinction in the settled parts, but in all the wilder corners of South Africa the same thing still goes on, and raids upon small herds of native goats and sheep are everywhere, where these pests exist.—Blackwood's Magazine.

"Never Again,"

Said the housewife, will I waste money on cake soap when, by cutting up a bar of N.P. SOAP, I get more and better soap than by buying other kinds in cakes. One bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ contains more by weight than four or five 5¢ cakes of any other kind—It's Made in Canada too."

Victims of German "Gassing" Suffer Stabs of Burning Pain

Everything But Fiery Agony is Blotted Out by the Torture Caused by Chlorine Fumes—Lungs Slowly Fill With Watery Solution That Brings a Horrible Death by Suffocation

LONDON, June 15.—Describing the agonies of soldiers who have been "gassed"—to use the term applied at the front to the foul stacks by the Germans—a correspondent engaged in medical work there, writing from the British headquarters in France, tells of one case out of many which came under his observation.

Private Strange, he writes, was taken by the stretcher bearers to the waiting light field ambulance by a devious route in order to keep on dead ground—that is, ground which is not under the direct fire or observation of the enemy in front.

Already, he could scarcely remember anything of the events of the morning—and he never would remember them. No victim of severe "gassing" ever can tell more than the vaguest of stories of the way in which the chlorine struck him down. The intensity of the pain robs a man of all ability to do anything but suffer. Past and future alike are blotted out in the surge of fiery agony, which every second eats deeper and deeper into the heart and lungs.

At every step of his bearers there seems to be born within him some new stab of burning pain. He is propped up on the stretcher, and the man at his head sets the strecher down, drags him up again if he slips in even the smallest degree, for even in this early stage the danger of suffering is much greater in a lying position. Strange knew nothing of this.

It was a long way over the corduroy paths that threated the young foliage of the wood behind the trenches, and the abandoned farm which had been chosen as a dressing station lay some distance further away still. He was laid on the floor with twenty other men, some gas poisoned, some wounded and one or two dead.

The moaning of the semi-conscious victims of German chlorine rose in every corner, but the surgeons, beyond a draught of oxygen to the worst cases, could not spare the time to do more than transfer them to the line of motor ambulance convoys waiting under the shade and shelter of the trees outside.

Lungs Torn Apart.

The unfortunate men are laid tenderly in them and without a moment's delay the ambulances start for the clearing hospital, or, as it is now called, the casualty clearing station.

At the clearing hospital on the evening after the fight which had been opened by the gas attack, the sight of the lower rooms was one that the most seasoned physicians scarcely could bear. The fiery inflammation of the poisoned flesh remained, but now it was almost a secondary agony. The chlorine was saturating the unhappy man's lungs with the flood of secretion set up by the fearful irritation.

Beginning at the base, the tissues were being filled slowly with a watery solution that rose gradually, and little by little threatened the very breath of life within. Beside this terrible, creeping horror, even the scalding pain that still racked them was of less moment. Scarcely could the wretched victim drag in the necessary air, and the great effort needed to make that part of the lung still sound do its work tore it bleeding from the dead base.

The writhing, gasping figures threw off their coverings and clutched and groaned raucously in their agony. The wailing was that of a swimmer in his death wrestle with the sea, but it was no mercifully swift fate like his.

Hour after hour the wounded cried aloud for the kindly gift of death, tossing with blackened faces on their stretchers. All that human aid could offer was done. No physician or assistant, no nurse or orderly took even a half hour's sleep that night. The worst cases needed oxygen to keep them from suffocation, or at least to delay it. The windows were thrown open, and the wind stirred lightly the leaves outside.

Scream and Struggle for Breath.

Some were taken out of doors. These for the most part were the hopeless cases, and man after man fell forward in the darkness into the arms of the supporting nurse as tardy death came in mercy to his relief. Inside, a scream and struggle for breath went on from wall to wall. Atropine was injected and ammonia carbonate forced into the panting mouths.

It added to the pathos that, though not a man was told, every helper here knew that this first stage of acute agony must needs last the fated forty-eight hours before nature granted a two day respite for those who had struggled through the acute period.

The sufferers were not wholly unconscious. But sheer pain made it impossible for them to speak or even think connectedly. They went down into the depths and lived through nightmares of anguish—and there was no solace for them save that the helplessness of science gave permission for the use of morphia in a few dying cases.

Of all that time Strange knew only the slow passing of aeons of utter suffering. Time meant nothing. There had been no beginning and there never would be an end of this. He felt himself slipping, and when the strong revivifying draught of oxygen brought him back to life and pain he only moaned against the cruelty of those who kept him from the only antidote.

Two days later Strange was sent down to the base. A slow, seven hour journey and a short motor run to — took Strange in one of those hospitals in which no detail has been forgotten or left to chance. Everything that science, skill and sympathy can bring to the help of the wounded is there. Everything but an absolute promise of life.

Strange is in that hospital still. The tale of his pluck went with him and he is fighting the third stage of his suffering now. The physicians will promise nothing, but the torn and bleeding lungs have in some measure healed, and into the saturated clay the breath of life once more is being breathed.

The Reason.

Mr. Harold Begbie quotes in "The Happy Irish" an amusing story that he got from the doctor of a little town that he visited in the course of his tour of Ireland:

I was rung up pretty late one night by a peasant from an outlying village, fifteen miles away. It was in the days before I had a car. The wind was blowing horribly, the rain was sweeping against the house, and it was deadly cold. The peasant asked me rather shamefacedly if I would come and see his mother. I invited him to come in. "Patrick," I said to him, "your mother is a very old woman."

"I know that, doctor," he admitted.

"She's over eighty, Patrick."

"She's all that, doctor."

"And nothing that I could do tonight would be of the smallest use to her."

"Sure, doctor," said he, "I know very well it's the truth you are telling me; but me poor mother, do you see, would have me come and fetch you because she does not want to die a natural death."

He Couldn't Lose.

There was no sound except the faint and regular tick of a watch: otherwise silence and gloom pervaded the elegantly furnished drawing room. In one chair sat a beautiful girl, her lips tightly closed, her eyes staring straight before her and her every muscle tense with a powerful effort of self control. In another sat a young man whose face expressed seriousness, but confidence. In his hand he held an open watch, which he observed closely, only raising his eyes now and then to glance at the beautiful girl who seemed to be in such agony. Five seconds, ten, fifteen, twenty seconds passed. The position of neither the young man nor beautiful girl had changed. Suddenly her eyes gleamed with a wild light, her bosom heaved, she clasped her hands convulsively and "I must speak!" burst from her bloodless lips. "Twenty-four seconds," said the young man as he closed the watch and put it back into his pocket. "You lose the caramels by six seconds exactly." He had bet on a sure thing, but she won not.

Dancing in the Old Days.

Dancing in the woods was the old manner in the classic times, and mythology tells of the worship thus paid by the pagans to the gods. The poets sang of it. The priests of Mars were the principal dancers in the sacred rites to that deity. There was also the religious dancing alluded to in the Old Testament, as where David danced before the ark to express his joy and that of his people, and there were the dances of the Druids round the altars and the mysterious stones. Never, perhaps, in the history of the world was dancing more popular than it is today—not even in the pleasant times when in England, Ireland and France the people danced on the green. Oliver Goldsmith, traveling on foot, paid his way by playing for the dancers on the flute.—Baltimore News

Conditions In Northern Ontario

THE season of 1915 has opened up very propitiously for Northern Ontario. As elsewhere, the season was early. A lot of seed was in the ground before the end of April throughout the northern districts. This should mean a good deal as the early sown grain is usually the best and weighs much heavier. One who is accustomed to visit Northern Ontario once or twice a year must be impressed with the rapid development in some part of the farming districts in the great clay belt. Notwithstanding the fact that clearing in most parts is difficult and more or less expensive, it is being prosecuted with diligence and success. The meadows and fall wheat speak for the quality of the soil even in April. Later on in the season one is impressed with the way all legumes grow and the fine opportunity for growing potatoes.

In some of the older parts of the northland there is a marked improvement in farm buildings, which speaks for the general prosperity of farming in this comparatively new country.

The Pulp Wood

There was every evidence that the farmers hadn't been idle during the winter as the hundreds and thousands of cords of pulp wood at every station, besides the usual quota of saw logs, railway ties and telephone poles would attest. Here and there were to be seen machines for raising the pulp wood, but a good deal of it was being done by hand with drawing knife and chisel. Complaint was being made that the machines eat up the profits from getting out the wood, in that it took much of the wood itself when removing the bark and knots, etc. In re-piling a very great shrinkage resulted.

The Experimental Farm at Mentieth

Under the recent management of Mr. Clemens, the Ontario Government Farm at Mentieth is on a fair way to give a good account of itself this year. One of the first things noticed was the splendid catch of clover and timothy on several acres of quite flat land through which four tile drains had been run during last summer. It was a perfect stand. On a knoll near the farm buildings both fall wheat and alfalfa have been winter killed, where the snow had blown off and the plants exposed during the winter. Where the snow had protected the plants they had come through finely.

Some very fine stock was in evidence in the Clyde horses, Shorthorn cattle, Shropshire sheep and Yorkshire pigs kept there. The stock had all wintered well. The breeding stock is bound to make an impression on the general quality of the farm stock in the north country, as the males are either sold or sent out for service. The flock of breeding ewes were particularly fine. The chief thing lacking on the farm was more cleared land to grow more feed for the farm stock and to help supply the proper kind of acclimatised seed for the north.

Sheep Farming

It was pleasant to note the many farms in the north on which sheep are kept. Their general thrifty appearance and the large crop of early lambs here and there seen goes to show that here can be carried on a profitable branch of the farming industry. Not only up the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario line were sheep in evidence, but it was even more so along some parts of the Soo line.

So far as clover and grass seed is concerned, it was very gratifying to note the number of dealers who handled very little of any of the grades except No. 1. A good deal of care is exercised, too, in the cereal grains which are shipped in for seed purposes. Some of the seeds with which the Ontario Government was providing needy settlers to the extent of a valuation of $40 was of fine quality and is bound to give a good account of itself.

While considerable care is taken in the kind and quality of the seed used one cannot say so much with regard to the feed stuffs which are brought in from year to year. Even some of the hay is very weedy, and the weeds have matured seeds and find their way to the fields largely in the stable manure. Western oats of poor quality, as well as good quality, are shipped in in carload lots. Most of these are fed whole, and many noxious weed seeds are distributed in this way.

The northern country is in a fair way of solving this problem, however. Every year sees hundreds of acres cleared and brought under cultivation. These lands will soon be able to supply all the local wants in seed as well as feed. When this obtains the farmers will hold the key to comparatively clean farming.

Mining Prospects

The conditions of Northern Ontario would not be complete if reference at least were not made to her mining interests. These interests are perhaps [illegible] and yet one is forced to believe that the mineral wealth has as yet only been touched here and there. The mining region is not out of the world, and what struck me was that so much good farming land practically surrounds the mines. Northern Ontario is very high in gold, silver, copper, nickle, iron and other ores. These mining regions will furnish splendid local markets for years to come.

A Single Application Will Banish Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

Here is a home treatment for removing hairs that is quick, painless and inexpensive: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to thickly cover the objectionable hairs, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be soft, clear and hairless. This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.

Just Suits My Needs Building Up the System

This is the Way Thousands of Women Are Speaking of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food," writes Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., "and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

"My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

We are constantly receiving letters like this in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Everywhere it is being used because of its great restorative and reconstructive influence on the nervous system. Men and women who are run down in health, tired, nervous and discouraged, find in this great Food Cure the means of nourishing the exhausted system back to health and vigour.

Headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, lack of energy, and vigour — all tell of nervous exhaustion, and indicate the need of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Instead of affording mere temporary relief by stimulating the nerves, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food builds up the system by supplying the ingredients from which Nature forms new rich blood and revitalises the wasted nervous system. Put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test when you are feeling tired out and discouraged, fill the body with new rich blood and new nerve force and you will realize again the joy of good health, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

PRETTY PEPLUM DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The feature of this smart little dress for girls is the peplum at high waistline, in Empire effect. The dress itself is as simple in construction as can be imagined. Front and back are plain pieces extending from neck to hem, with just shoulder and under-arm seams. The peplum is attached to a belt and then the belt is not sewed, but tacked at intervals to the dress, perforations showing just how the tacking is to be done. This allows the dress to fall in very easy, graceful folds, and is altogether better than gathering it.

If, after a while, one grows tired of the style, it is very easy to remove the peplum and use a belt at normal or low waistline, as is illustrated in the small front view. If two materials are used, you would need for ten-year size, 3¼ yards of the striped and ⅝ yard of the plain, both 36 inches wide, or, using only one material, 3⅝ yards, 36 inches wide, would be sufficient. Gingham, linen or percale could be chosen. The pattern, No. 7,151, can be obtained in 5 sizes, from 6 to 14 years.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

FOR SUMMER HOMES

Drinking Water Rendered Immune From Typhoid by Montserrat

Most epidemics of typhoid are traceable to impure water.

City people going to the country for the summer months or even for week ends, very often bring back typhoid germs owing to vegetable decomposition in lake, river and well water.

The bacteriologists at McGill University have proved that a small quantity of Montserrat Lime Juice will destroy typhoid germs in water, in twenty minutes.

Typhoid can be prevented at home or at the country cottage by using Montserrat Lime Juice. It makes the water absolutely immune, besides providing a wholesome, cooling and thirst assuaging beverage.

Keep a pitcher of this healthy beverage in the ice box.

MONTSERRAT LIME JUICE is for sale at all druggists and grocers.

THE GERMANS AGAIN USE GAS POISON

SIX YEAR SENTENCE FOR GENERAL DE WET

GERMANS USE GAS BOMBS BUT ATTACKS ARE REPULSED

French Make Progress in Lorraine and Along the River Fecht, Wher. North of Arras Where Battle is Still Raging Fiercely All German Counter Attacks Have Been Repulsed--Fate of Fara Hinges on Result Says Berlin Report.

BELGIANS ON THE OFFENSIVE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, June 22.—(French Official Communique).—The Germans have again resorted to the use of asphyxiating gas bombs, particularly in the Labyrinth region. "North of Arras the Germans attacked at several points during the night, but were repulsed," said the communique. "At one point, after a violent bombardment, they succeeded in holding part of one of our trenches, but their losses were very heavy.

"The Belgians attacked south-west of St. George, taking a trench and killing all defenders. Near Quennevieres Farm, south of Arras, all the German counter-attacks have been repulsed. We have made further progress in Lorraine and along the River Fecht."

MAY DECIDE FATE OF FRANCE.

BERLIN, June 22.—"Neutral reports declare the battle now raging near Arras may decide the fate of France," said the Government Press Bureau to-day. "Both sides are fighting with unheard of courage and heroism. The French have strong forces. The Germans are receiving reinforcements. The losses on both sides are fearful."

BERLIN, Via The Hague, June 22.—The Russian retirement from Lemberg may be said to have begun. The forces defending the city from the north are falling back in an easterly direction. Instead of concentrating upon the city itself, Mackensen's left wing is pressing on through Zolkiew, north of Lemberg, threatening to surround the city.

BERLIN (via wireless), June 22.—The War Office admitted this afternoon that the Germans in Alsace have withdrawn to the east bank of the River Fecht.

BLOEMFONTEIN, South Africa, June 22. — A sentence of six years' imprisonment and a fine of £2,000 was imposed to-day on General De Wet, the former Boer leader convicted yesterday on eight charges of treason in raising rebellion against the Government since the present war began.

LONDON, June 22.—The Canadian freighter Carisbrook, from Montreal, has been sunk by a German submarine.

The Carisbrook sailed from Montreal on June 5th with a cargo of over 100,000 bushels of grain. She was in command of Captain D. A. Hunter. The owners have not received direct word of the disaster. The steamer carried neither soldiers nor munitions.

OTTAWA, June 22.—Casualties to-day: Second Battalion — Wounded: Pte. Walter Thomas Robus, England; Pte. F. A. Foster, England; Sergt. Joseph Scott Stone, England.

AMSTERDAM, June 22.—Advices from Flushing to-day said that a Zeppelin caught fire in the vicinity of Zeebrugge during the night and fell into the sea.

LONDON, June 22.—A Petrograd despatch this afternoon reported that a Russian submarine torpedoed and sank two Turkish barques and a steamer in the Black Sea, about 50 miles west of Constantinople.

PARIS, June 22.—German artillerymen have again bombarded Dunkirk with 14-inch guns. An official announcement this afternoon said that several civilians were killed.

BERLIN (via wireless), June 22.—The Allies have demanded that Bulgaria immediately mobilize her army and march against Turkey. Bulgaria, according to semi-official advices received here to-day, has avoided a direct answer, and has requested detailed information as to territorial concessions to be made to the other Balkan nations.

HOSPITAL SUPPLIES ARE SHIPPED

The Peterborough Branch Red Cross Society, are shipping to-day, boxes weighing approximately 800 lbs. containing hospital night-shirts, socks, surgical supplies and bandages. These were contributed by the Progressive Club, the Nurses' Association, Red Cross Kitchener League, Ladies' Aid, Murray St. Church, and Sewing Circle, George St. Church.

The Red Cross room will be open on Monday Wednesday and Saturday, from 2 to 5 p.m. All the furnishings necessary for the present have been generously contributed and installed by citizens. Any information desired will be gladly given.

ORONO MAN FATALLY BURNED

Attempting to put out a fire in his home in Orono on Saturday afternoon, James Lunn was so terribly burned, that he died later in the evening in the General Hospital, Toronto.

Lunn went into his kitchen, and found that someone had left a coal oil stove burning. It had been apparently burning for some time, as the room was full of smoke. He went to put out the stove, when the draught created by the opening of the door caused an explosion.

The flames and oil scattered and he was badly burned about the head, the arms and legs. He attempted to put out the blaze himself, and only got worse burned, besides swallowing a lot of the smoke. He was taken on the first train to Toronto but he lived but a short time after reaching there.

SERGT. FIELD WAS WOUNDED IN SIX PLACES

And in Addition Had His Shoulder Broken—Is Now in Hospital in Germany—News From Others of Peterboro's Soldiers

RELATIVES GET WORD

Letters to friends and relatives have brought news of some of the Peterborough boys who figured in the casualty list after the Langemarck fighting:

Mrs. R. W. Travers has received the following letter from Miss M. D. Field of Montreal, sister of Sergt. A. F. Field of the 57th Regt., who is a prisoner of war in Germany:

My Dear Mrs. Travers,—I have again had word from my brother. This time he says that he was hit in the left hand, arm, shoulder, nape of the neck, right wrist and thigh and that his left shoulder was broken, so he will probably have to remain in the hospital for some time, and will anyhow be better off than in one of the camps. He gives his address as:

Sergt. A. F. Field,
No. 1 Company, 2nd Batt.,
Canadians,
Hospital des Soeurs Evangeliques,
Oberhausen,
Rhineland,
Germany.

Will you please ask anyone who wishes to write to him to write post cards only, as they are most likely to reach him. Any letters sent must not be sealed. As all communications to prisoners are read by the German officials, and as there are said to be over a million prisoners in Germany, you will understand that a post card would be passed where a letter would be thrown aside for an indefinite period. My brother's last post card was three weeks in reaching England and two more getting here, so you see it is slow work even with a card. I understand that the best way to send things is by parcels post; it seems to be surer and quicker than other ways.

I saw the other day that the Germans have refused to exchange any more prisoners—no matter how badly they are hurt, so I hope Arthur will come through all right. He is evidently being well looked after now. Any trouble will come late as the war goes on. I trust your friends are safe. With many thanks to you and all of Arthur's friends in Peterborough for your kindness at this time, I remain, your sincerely,

M. D. FIELD.

I shall let you know from time to time how Arthur gets on.

Mr. Angus McIntosh has received word to the effect that his son Wilbert McIntosh, of the 16th Batt., was admitted to the hospital on May 8th. This followed a letter that was received a few days ago in which Private McIntosh referred to a narrow escape that he had when five of his companions were killed by a shell that hit their position. Mr. McIntosh is of the opinion that his son was admitted to the hospital on account of sickness and not from wounds as in previous letters he had complained of a minor indisposition from which he was suffering.

Word has been received from the Red Cross authorities concerning Corporal Harvey Staunton of Peterborough, to the effect that he is confined in an hospital in York, England, suffering from a severe gunshot wound in the foot. No particulars were given as to his condition.

Friends of Pte. H. Caillaird of the 57th detachment, and formerly of the Bank of Montreal, will be interested in learning that he is in the London Military Hospital, Lower Clapton, London. Pte. Caillaird was shot in the shoulder at Langemarck, and some eleven pieces of shattered bone had to be removed.

PTE. CHAS. POWELL
Of Peterborough, who is now ill in hospital in England, having taken pneumonia soon after reaching France with the 2nd Battalion.

PTE. FRED BOARD
Of Peterborough, who is at the front with the Royal Montreal Regiment. He is a former employee of The Examiner.

RESULT IS INEVITABLE

American Financier Who Has Been at Front Says the Gradual Giving Away of the German Line is Certain

FOE'S MORALE BROKEN

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, June 22.—"The high point of German military efficiency has been passed, the morale of German troops in the west has broken, from this time on gradual giving away of the German line is certain, every step will be contested by the Germans, but the final result is inevitable, basing their calculations on known military figures, the Allies' strategists are determined that King Albert shall celebrate Christmas, 1915, in his own palace in Brussels." The foregoing is the opinion of George Gordon Moore, a young American financier, who as a friend of Sir John French and his personal guests at the front, has seen more of the war from a British standpoint than any other civilian. Moore, who recently returned to England from the British front, is in New York to-day en route to his home in St. Clair, Mich. When reminded that Christmas, 1915, is a long ways off, Moore replied "not as the British calculate. The Englishman has been slow in getting started but—he will be just as slow to stop. It is only the Americans who do not know — and Germans with whom the wish is father to the thought, who are thinking of an early end to the war. The British are prepared to devote whatever time is necessary to the job and they do not expect an early success.

"Americans have failed to appreciate the real situation in England. Patriotism was not wanting. England has raised a citizen army of from two to three million men. The liquor problem was not the big fault, the trouble was lack of productive organization.

"Things were on the up-grade within 24 hours after Lloyd George took charge of the munitions problem, and in very few weeks the supply will not only meet the British demands, but Britain will be able to assist Russia.

"Twice at Ypres with a tremendous advantage in numbers and artillery efficiency, the pick of the German army failed to break the British line in continued assaults. At Neuve Chapelle, in spite of the handicap of ammunition shortage, Sir. John French demonstrated, as Joffre has done, that the Allies can pierce the German line when necessary. These two object lessons the strength of the Allies, offense and weakness of the German defence, have undermined the German morale."

Early Date For New Cabbage

June 22 is an unusually early date for cabbage in this district, but Mr. W. T. Arnott of Otonabee township had a number for sale to-day. He showed one head to the Examiner and it was fully [illegible] grown. He said several in the city to-day which were larger.

LEAVE FOR BARRIEFIELD

Infantry and Mounted Rifle Recruits Departed This Morning—Three Brothers in the 57th Infantry Detachment

RECRUITING GOES ON

Twelve more Peterborough boys left on their first stage to the European firing line this morning, when a party of seven from the 57th Regiment left to join the base battalion at Barriefield, and five men recruited by Lt.-Col. Johnston, for the 8th C.M.R., departed for the same camp.. Very few people knew the squad was going and the send-off was a quiet one. A feature about the 57th detachment was the presence of three brothers, Privates George, Charles and Thomas Rose, sons of Mr. Alfred Rose, 200 Antrim street. All three have been members of the 57th for some time, the eldest for four years, the second for three, and the youngest for two years.

The 57th party that left this morning was in charge of Lieut. Wilfred Stratton. Recruiting will continue as usual at the Armouries, and another draft will go to Barriefield next week, a number of the last recruits to join being kept over for that draft.

The list this morning was as follows:

57th Detachment.

Fred Rogers, 413 London St., Peterborough, aged 23, single, born in England. Six months in the Territorials.

Joseph Graham, 97 Robinson St., Peterborough, aged 23 years, single, born in Canada. No previous service.

Sergt. Arthur Wagstaff, Brownton, aged 23 years, married, born in England. Three years in A Co. 57th Regiment, three years in 9th Manchesters. Wife lives in Browntown.

Geo. Rose, 200 Antrim St., aged 20 years, single, born in Canada. Four years in No. D Company 57th Regt.

Chas. Rose, 200 Antrim St., aged 21 years, single, born in Canada. Three years in No. 2 Company 57th Regiment.

Thomas Rose, 200 Antrim St., aged 18 years, single, born in Canada. Two years in 57th Regiment.

Chas. H. Naish 286 Mark St., aged 18 years, single, born in England. One year 45th Regiment. Next of kin, Walter Naish, 286 Mar. St., Peterborough.

Mounted Rifles.

Raymond James Welsh, 344 Downie St., aged 23 years, single, born in Canada. No previous military experience.

Harold Joseph MacDonald, 307 Albert St., aged 24 years, married, born in Canada. No previous military experience.

Alfred Patrick O'Hare, Irish, aged 20 years, single. Next of kin, John O'Hare, Coplow St., Birmingham, Eng.

Alexander Benzie, born in Scotland, aged 31 years, single. Next of kin, Jane Benzie Buckie, Banffshire, Scotland. Served in Gordon Highlanders.

Robert Latimer Normal School, aged 19 years, single, born in Canada. One years in 57th Regiment. Father W. C. Latimer, lives in Benverton.

PETERBORO' BOYS WHO ARE LEFT ARE NOT DOWN-HEARTED

Pte. E. J. Dummitt Says They "Can Still Sing a Bit of a Song as They March Along"—Only Those Who Were So Badly Wounded They Couldn't Help Themselves Were Made Prisoner.

PTE. CURTIS WRITES

Writing from the front, on June 5, Pte. Ernie Dummitt of the 57th detachment, in a letter to his mother, says: "I must say the Peterborough boys fared badly during the fight at Ypres. Still they held up their end of it, fought gamely and died bravely. Any Peterborough boys that were taken prisoners were so badly wounded that they were unable to help themselves. It seems strange to me now when I look around the Company and see all the strange faces where there used to be so many familiar ones. It is really hard to realise that I am still in A Company. Of the boys who first formed A Company there are very few left.

About the fighting that the boys were in, I cannot tell you anything that the papers have not already printed, and you can take it from me the papers did not exaggerate it one bit. For myself I must say that I am certainly proud of all the boys, and glad to say I am one of them. Although I was not with the boys at the start of it, I got there for the tail end of it. I did not intend to tell you why, but now I am all right again, it won't worry you to know. On March 8th I paraded to the Doctor after being sick for two days then. I was sent to the hospital and then sent down country to another hospital where I remained for fourteen days, as I had an attack of fever. After I left the hospital I was sent to the base as a convalescent, where I remained until I was quite well. Then I was sent back to my battalion, and to tell the truth, I was glad to get back to what was left of my old chums.

I suppose you people will have got the news of Corp. Bert Carpenter's death. We were very sorry to lose Bert, as he was one of the best straightest corporals we had. Three other boys were wounded by the same shell that got Bert. We fixed up his grave as nice as possible under the circumstances. I put up a small cross with his name and number, and managed to collect a few flowers for it also. It was the best we could do.

What there are of us Peterborough boys left are looking silw and feeling

PETERBORO BOY MAKING GOOD IN THE FLYING GAME

MAKING PROGRESS

TORONTO, June 22.— Land flying for five students of the McCurdy Aviation School will commence to-day at Long Branch Rifle Range, the pupils, who are members of the first class formerly under the instruction of Pilot S. S. Pierce, and now of Pilot Tony Jannus, having made such satisfactory progress with the flying boats that it was considered no further instruction was necessary for them. The students will now make daily flights in the biplane operated by Pilot Carlstrom, and at the end of their work at Long Branch will be ready to try for their pilots' certificates. On securing certificates the aviators will be in a position to proceed to England immediately for the special work in either branch of the air service for which they are enlisted. The students who go to Long Branch this morning are Lieut. Homer Smith, of the Queen's Own Rifles, formerly attached to the Divisional Cyclists of the second contingent; Lieut. D. A. Hay, A. S. Ince, E. H. McLauchlin, and Norman Geale, the latter of Peterborough.

Shell Buried Outside Hotel

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, June 22—There was considerable excitement through the city this morning when an immature 18-lb. shrapnel shell was discovered partly buried in the earth outside the Western hotel here this morning. The police are looking for the joker.

DANCE AT SOUTH BEACH ON HOLIDAY

The first dance of the summer season will be held at South Beach Hotel, on July 1st, under the management of Mr. Asa Huyche. Arrangements are being made to run excursions down the lakes for these Thursday evening dances; also an automobile service from the city. The large dining hall will be converted into a dance pavilion —it having a fine floor for the purpose, and the fresh breeze blowing in from the lake coupled with the very latest dance music, ought to be a decidedly popular attraction, and will undoubtedly attract large crowds of admirers of the light fantastic.

New Grocery Store

The premises adjoining Turnbull's, on Simcoe street, has been leased by Mr. J. M. Heard, who will open up to-morrow morning with an entirely new stock of groceries. The store is a commodious one and is tted up in a convenient manner for displaying the goods. Mr. Heard has made a careful selection of the leading lines in the grocery trade, and bought his stock on the very best terms, so that the public may expect good values for their money. The new grocer is a son of the soil and is well and favorably known in the township of Smith, where he was born, as well as to many in the city with whom he has previously done business. He is careful and hard working, and if close attention to business and good goods, with prompt service, counts, he should be well patronized in his new venture.

COUNTING THE COST.

Ottawa, has learned a lesson from its experiences. The city is preparing for an overland pipes project in connection with her waterworks, and the committee charged with the work is to have in all tenders, and the report of their engineer upon them, before a sod is turned. In this way the city will know to what extent she is committing itself. In this city we are not so far-looking. There are two or three civic projects, concerning which neither the authorities nor the citizens have any clear or definite idea of what the ultimate cost to be incurred, will be. No comment, that is not obviously suggested to every thinking ratepayer is necessary. If counting the cost were made a preliminary to action, by corporations, communities, individuals, in all the relations of life and by, indeed, all of us—

It wad frae monie a blunder free us

UNCLE SAM AND GERMANY.

The state of the relations between the United States and Germany are buried under such an avalanche of diplomatic and newspaper verbiage, that one is quite in the dark as to whether the two countries are to go to war or to fall upon each others' necks in fond embrace. One would think that the United States had been kicked and cuffed enough by Germany to warrant a little show of temper or protest, that meant protest, or resentment that was not mere diplomatic chaff. The United States certainly stands a good deal, in the way of the murder of her citizens via the torpedo of the submarine, and in other ways that all the world can see. But there is another attack on United States citizenship that is not quite so obvious to the world, but not less actual. The German system of spying and lying has been extended to tampering with, and corrupting United States citizenship; to unmaking good United Statesers and remaking them into German citizens of the Kaiser brand, and withdrawing them from their allegiance to the land of the free. The German ideal of world domination doesn't let any scruple stand in the way of its success; and the schemes of the militarists of Germany are so universally odious that two-thirds of the world are in arms against them—they won't stand German arrogance without protest that is sincere and pointed — pointed with the bayonet. But as far Uncle Sam seems to stand anything without becoming belligerently "riled." In effect in a practical sense, the United States is taking orders from Germany. A democratic citizen of the United States, who is constrained to take as a favour the blowing up of a shipload of his fellow-citizens, would resent with scorn and contempt and loathing the name "subject" as indicating a "citizen" of the United States; yet in no most despotic country in this world and age, is there a people which has been made more "subject" to domination of German methods than those of the United States. That is the way the situation looks to the onlooker; but there may be a deep underlying reason why Uncle Sam turns one cheek and then another to the buffet of the mailed fist, expressed in words or in terms of torpedoes that blow up his citizens. The German menace of world domination has not touched us Canadians so vitally, or rather, mortally; yet every Canadian man, woman and child, in addition to those under arms; the governing, powers, all the resources of the country, all the spirit of all the people are in rampant protest, physical and moral, against the monstrous pretensions, the mad ambitions, the murderous methods of the militarist clique of Germany. We shan't stand them either; we have to do only that that which we say Uncle has spent every dollar and every drop of blood to make good our protest.

THE COUNTER-ATTACK.

The Conservative situation in Manitoba is pretty bad when the party organ joins in the cry of condemnation of the methods of stealing practiced in connection with the construction of new parliamentary buildings. It was a hopeful sign when both parties seemed to be agreed in regarding the condemnation and prevention of wrong-doing as more important than party interests. But Hon. Mr. Rogers, the man who "knows how to win elections," was not so innocent as to accept the situation. He left Ottawa and went to Winnipeg. He discovered that the Conservative Government and politicians were not guilty of any wrong-doing, but that they had "been made the victims of a coterie of office-holders and officials, which as an organization, the people of Manitoba has always been ready to trust."

But it is something to be remarked, that the heroic repudiation of the "coterie of officials" did not occur to the high-minded Mr. Rogers or other members of the government and party, till their guilt had been exposed by investigation. Wicked as they were, they were all right till they were found out. Then only did the "victims" protest." Mr. Rogers, however, seems to think that repudiation of the coterie will not be enough to efface the stain, which will be blanched he thinks, by contrast, by blackening the name of the opposite party. Had "Hon. Bob" anything to do with the "counter-attack" represented by the mysteriously evolved charges of "fourteen Conservative Members," to the effect that the Liberal opposition entered into an agreement, was to be paid $50,000, to drop all election protests; or an agreement said to have been entered into between the old government and the prospective new government, that the Royal Commission inquiry was to be dropped, for a cash consideration? If the new charges shall upon investigation prove to have as much foundation as the charges now under inquiry, the political condition of Manitoba is not anything to be proud of.

PETERBOROUGH MEN, TOO.

Let every Brantford man get under the load, and not leave the women folk to bear the Red Cross alone.—Brantford Expositor.

LESS SCOTCH WHISKEY.

Scotch whiskey has fallen off one million gallons compared with last year's output. The result of war's depression is promoted further by an increase of fifty per cent. and more in prices.—Globe.

DISGUSTING AND HUMILIATING.

It is disgusting and humiliating to loyal Canadians to learn of such a low state of political morality as the present exposure in Manitoba. But it should be remembered that the main difference between the Roblin and some other party funds is that Manitoba has found out. Hon. J. K. Flemming had to resign the Premiership of New Brunswick because of a Royal Commission exposure last year. But, after being found guilty of practically compelling a contractor to pay him money, ex-Premier Flemming has been accepted by the Conservative party as Federal candidate to oppose Mr. Frank Carvell in the next general election. . . and it would seem reasonable to conclude, ex-Premier Flemming could not run without the support of the Conservative party, without appearing to have the consent of the party's leader. Sir Robert Borden.—Ottawa Citizen (Conservative.)

New York Stocks

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

NEW YORK, June 22. — To-day's market evolved nothing startling in the way of price fluctuations. War specialties, together with the rest of the list hugged the opening prices until towards the close when an upward tendency was manifested, and the list closed with fractional gains all along the line. Traders are inclined to the opinion that something good is in sight for the bull element, and are keeping their ears to the ground. All good stocks are considered a purchase on all dips.

Are Telegrams Confidential Above the Interests of Justice?

As a side issue in the Manitoba graft investigation, apart altogether from its bearing on the case, the conduct of the G. N. W. Telegraph Company is of some importance. Summoned to produce copies of certain telegrams the local agent declared that they had been burnt under instructions; and the president of the company take the ground that the secrecy of telegrams must not be violated, and in order so accomplish this end, all telegrams were burnt and no copies kept.

With the general principle that secrecy should be maintained by telegraph companies as to messages, passing over their lines the public will be in accord; though this cannot apply to criminal investigations, where the interests of law and justice are paramount. And the custom of the companies of destroying telegrams after six months is one to which no objection can be taken. They would have to be destroyed some time, and that is a reasonable period to keep them on file.

The peculiar thing about the present case is that a special order was issued on June 10, after this Manitoba investigation commenced, requiring the burning of all copies of telegrams between Winnipeg, Ottawa Quebec and Montreal, more than fifteen days old. What was the necessity of issuing such an order at all? Why was it issued at the present time? And why did it apply only to the offices through which the Manitoba politicians might communicate, and not made applicable to all offices? The only excuse or explantion offered is that the convenience of the service required it, but that it could not go into effect all over the lines at once, and had to be tried out in some of the principal offices first.

All of which looks decidely suspicious. The company's business is not likely to be any larger to-day than it was six months ago. There was no reason so far as the public interests or the convenience of the company are concerned for making such a rule now, any more than here was last year. The C.P.R. Telegraph Company has no such rule and the Western Union in the United States has no such rule. If they can retain telegrams for six months there is no reason why the G. N. W. cannot do so. So far as the United States companies are concerned we understand the law in that country forbids the destruction of telegrams by the companies for at least three months.

The inference would seem justifiable that the issuing of this order at this time, and in connection with the specified offices alone, was nothing more than a scheme to prevent the exposure of certain transactions in which the members of the late Manitoba Government and other parties were concerned. It may not be easy to prove the existence of such a conspiracy—for that is what it would be if there were any collusion between the company and any of those subject to the investigation. But it will be a very natural assumption. One thing is certain, the course pursued by the Telegraph Company in this case indicates what might be done in future by this or other companies. Necessary evidence in legal investigations can be destroyed at a moment's notice, if the authorities of a telegraph company are willing. And it becomes a question whether a law like that of the United States should not be adopted, and these sudden spasms of "house-cleaning" prevented in the future.—London Advertiser.

LAWN BOWLING

The Bowling Club is enjoying one of the best seasons it has had for some time. It is fortunate in possessing a more than usually efficient green committee, whose expert knowledge is reflected by the splendid condition of the green. It has just that proper resilliancy that enables the experienced bowler to enjoy it to the fullest exent.

The club is rapidly growing in numbers and enthusiasm, under the most able leadership of Mr. J. H. Renwick. The club is fully organized. The schedule games for the season start this week. The following skips have been drawn against each other:

Elliott vs. Maynard.
Brightman vs. Cairns.
Waddell vs. Dayman.
Renwick vs. Pratt.
Moore vs. Cottrell.
Sturgeon vs. Waddell.
Cairns vs. Dayman.
Elliott vs. Cottrell.
Maynard vs. Moore.
Brightman vs. Pratt.
Renwick vs. Sturgeon.

These games have to be played off this week. Should any skip fail to play or make arrangements to play he will default the game to his opponent. The new members are reminded that the green is open for the players every afternoon as well as in the evening. Many members are taking advantage of the afternoons.

ESCAPED IN BATTLE KILLED IN REFUGE

A Few Instances Illustrating the Luck of Battle

PARIS, June 21.—"Luck in battle" is the subject of an ever increasing number of anecdotes.

The colonel of a regiment that was in the battle of Morhange, in the battle of the Marne and at the attack of Eparges, participating in more than a dozen battles and a score of charges, marching each time at the head of his troops and each time running ninety chances out of one hundred of being killed, never received a scratch, though his regiment was decimated both at Morhange and Eparges. The other day he retired with his staff to an isolated village beind the lines to rest. It was a spot the German heavy artillery had neglected, although it was in range. The chances were hat he would pass is days of rest there in security. On the evening of his arrival the Germans remembered there was a village there and began to bombard it. The last shell they fired fell in the very centre of the mess room. The four officers around him escaped with insignificant bruises, but the colonel was killed outright.

Six artillery officers were at mess in a little house from which the fire of their battery had been directed. A shell struck it; five of them were killed and the sixth was untouched. His men pleaded with him to go to the cellar as long as the bombardment continued, but he insisted on remaining where he could better direct the fire of the battery. Scores of shells fell around the spot without touching him. Finally he was prevailed upon to go into the cellar, and he had just disappeared when a shell went straight through the cellar window, and killed him.

Shells are more uncertain than bullets, the soldiers say. The latter are expected, as the soldier knows from where they are likely to come, while the former strike in spots and at moments least expected. Wind and weather enter into the elements of luck. The dampness of the map from which an artillery officer calculates distances may account for the chance that brings a shell to a soldier or sends it a hundred yards from him.

CHILDREN OF GERMANY AND AUSTRIA COLLECT SCRAP FOR MUNITIONS

The school children of Germany and Austria, all of whom are imbued with a patriotic spirit, recently made an excellent showing in the campaign started in many of the cities throughout the two countries, to gather metals which were to be used in the manufacture of ammunition. In Prague, according to the Prager Tagblatt, more than 25,000 kilograms of metal were gathered. The scholars of the public, private and military schools collected almost about 7,000 kilograms.

The date set for the expiration of this campaign in Prague had to be extended several times because of the activities of the pupils. The boys and girls went through their homes in search of brass, copper and tin. From one school the boys brought 950 kilograms and the girls 547 kilograms of metal.

After the material was collected at the schools it was brought to the campaign headquarters, where it was weighed. The copper, brass, tin and iron were assorted and then delivered to the ammunition factories to be melted.

The Call to Arms

What a wonderful book it would be, if it could be written, which told of how and why and from whence men joined the new British army.

Bishop Roblas, of Athabasca, tells of three men whom he had met at Athabasca Landing, who were on their way to enlist.

One of these had tramped 500 miles. Another 1,000 miles, without a companion, and had had to throw away his blankets in order to struggle through.

The third had come 1,500 miles from Fort Good Hope, and had had but a single dog to assist him in carrying his supplies.

Mr. Burnham at Knox Church

Spoke on Women and the War Before Young People's Guild Last Evening

Women and the War, was the subject of the address of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., at Knox church last evening. The programme was under the auspices of the Literary committee of the Young People's Guild.

"Life is nothing; indeed it is much worse than nothing if we neglect those splendid ideals which the great nations of the world have cherished from the earliest times, and more especially since Christ came to teach the doctrine of self sacrifice," said the speaker.

"Even war, with all its horrors is fraught with these examples of heroism and chivalry. It is the especial glory of woman that in times of great distress and widespread calamity she is true to the loftiest instincts of her nature. There are few crimes even at such a time as his to be laid at her door. In the whole realm of conflict on whichever side, her mission is to soothe and to sustain. She wants nothing for herself, neither glory nor honour nor reward, nothing but the opportunity of doing good.

"There is a serious contrast in this respect between the sexes. With all his strength and valour man has his weakness, too, and that is only too often displayed in appropriating to his own use what clearly should go to others even at such a time as this. The true man will stand on guard clad in his armour, with his lance at rest, ready to protect, and will be the last, not the first, at the feast or the fireside in times of war. But many men are not like that. They fail to measure up to the splendid ideals of self-sacrifice. Women never fail. It is they who have preserved the glory of the world in the past, and who would fail to love them and revere them for it?"

Mr. Burnham then went on to describe in detail the part played by women in this war. "The question we must ask ourselves at home," he said is, "what are we doing to help? Are we thinking of ourselves or are we bending every energy and all our resources to aid and sustain those brave men and women at the front?" The time will come when the maimed and scarred will come home and it will be our further duty to provide convalescent hospitals, comfortable retreats and means of relieving distress. What are we doing in Peterborough to that end? Can it be that any man, young or old, is providing for himself as if he were taking off the armour of a faithful warrior for a well-earnest repose when as a matter of fact he has done little but contribute a few dollars and read the newspapers during all those times of horror and suffering. If there be any such we may be assured that the curse of God will rest upon him. It is to the everlasting glory of women that among them are to be found no traces of selfishness and ignorance such as I have hinted at and which alas, we sometimes see. When the question was asked if the young man Absalom was safe, it was not asked if he was safe in bed, but in battle. We must beware for he who would save his life shall lose it and God is not mocked."

ROUMANIA AND RUSSIA NEARING AGREEMENT

PARIS, June 22—The negotiations between Roumania and the allies, looking toward Roumania's entrance upon the war, appears to be near a conclusion. Russia's opposition to Roumania's possession of Csernowitz, capital of Bukowina, in case of the success of the Triple Entente allies, according to the news reaching Paris, virtually has been abandoned, and but one difficulty remains. That is Serbia's desire to possess the narrow triangle in Hungary opposite Belgrade, including Pancsova, as a protection for the Serbian capital. Realizing the present difficulties of Russia and the value of immediate assistance by Roumania, it is said that Roumania is satisfied to await the result of the pressure of the allies on Serbia before she makes a move. Roumania's situation is considered here as particularly strong, in view of the admitted arrangement with Bulgaria under which Bulgaria will be bound to enter the war with Roumania and operate against Constantinple.

BIG INCREASE IN WINTER AVERAGE

Advices from various parts of the world indicate that there will be a considerable increase in the winter wheat acreage. The high prices and the abnormal demand occasioned by the war in Europe has stimulated production.

In the United States, India and Canada, the total increase in the acreage of winter wheat is 8,500,000 acres over that under crop in the previous year.

On the other hand, there is a decrease of about 8,400,000 acres among the waring nations of Europe. Their normal acreage is 85,000,000, but there is a fifteen per cent. decrease this year.

The world's total wheat acreage is 240,000,000, of which about 93,000,000 are devoted to spring wheat. Russia in ordinary times sows about 60,000,000 acres, the United States 20,000,000, and Canada about 10,000,000 acres.

In Canada and the United States the spring crop has been increased. In Russia the probabilities are that the acreage will be stationary or somewhat smaller than last year.

Peterboro' Boys Who Are Left, etc.

We are quite a happy bunch out here, and we always try to keep smiling and we can still sing a bit of a song as we march along. Sometimes our marches are only short ones, and once in a while we have a long march which makes us perspire very freely these hot days. Sometimes we sleep in the open and sometimes it is a barn we have to sleep in, and when we are in the trenches it is a dug-out usually built of sand bags. Despite all the changes we make, or where we sleep or whether sunshine or rain there is very little complaint. We have learned to take things as they come and not worry.

What we all look forward to is when the Canadian mail comes in; you should see the happy smiles of the boys then. At least the ones who get letters from the right source.

I forgot to mention before that we have heard nothing of Jimmie English as yet. I have been hoping against hope that he might be a prisoner in Germany, and it is hard for me to give up hope as yet.

PTE. CURTIS WRITES.

Mrs. George Curtis has received the following letter from her son, Pte. Howard Curtis, with the 22nd Battalion:

France, June 2.

Dear Mother,—We are out of the trenches again now. We had a pretty long session this time. We were in for ten days and we were under a heavy shell fire all the time. Our casualties were pretty heavy, but mostly wounded. It sure is nerve-breaking to be under shell fire. No matter how strong a man's nerves might be shell fire shatters them to a certain exent. I saw some poor fellows break sigh down, I am sticking to it pretty good, myself, but I am not so steady as I was a few months ago.

I miss Bert Carpenter now; I used to be with him nearly every day for the last month or so, but now when I go to Number One Company I feel lonesome without seeing him. The boys buried him behind the trench, and when I saw his grave it had some flowers on it and two neat wooden crosses. We were going to put a fence around it, but we were called away to another trench. I hope the war will be over soon, but we have a big task to finish. Believe me I will never have any use for a German as long as I live.

Well, mother, to-morrow is the King's birthday, and I believe the Germans are going to get a good reception. I think the Kaiser will soon realize that he can't run the world as he likes, although the Americans seem contented to let him do so Italy will help us greatly now, and our friends, the Russians, are pushing ahead.

We see some terrible sights out her, but I can't describe them to you now. I hope to be able to tell you all when I get back, if I am spared. The war has called a lot of good men and it will take more before it is over. One can't realize the sorrow that must be caused throughout the world.

I suppose the men are busy making bricks now. I think it would a wise plan to start a yard over here, because it will take hundreds of millions of bricks to rebuild the buildings here. If you could see the destruction. It is one mass of ruins where the trenches are. The other morning we passed through a village on our way out of the trenches, and I don't believe there was even a whole brick left. In the graveyard, graves were blown up and the church was level with the ground.

The weather permits us to billet out in the open now. It's pretty chilly at nights, but we are quite comforable and enjoy it fine. I read the account of Heber Rogers' memorial service. It is funny for us to read it, and him a prisoner. I hope they have a nice service for Bert Carpenter and I would like to be able to attend it.

Don't worry about me, mother. I will try and take care of myself the best I can. Hoping to be back again.

As ever,
HOWARD.

ANOTHER LETTER.

France, May 26, 1915.

Dear Mother,—Just a few lines to say I am still all right, but I have some sorrowful news for you, Bert Carpenter was killed in action on May 24th.

Bert was lying asleep in his dug-out when a shell exploded. A piece hit him on the head and he died without a murmur. Bert was well thought of in the Second Battalion, and everybody speaks highly of him. It will cause much sorrow for his people, but we never know when our time is near out here.

Many a sorrowful heart has been caused in the last nine months, and many a brave man has given up his life, but not in vain. We have got to smash the German Empire to give the rest of the world peace.

I have not much news to write. I hardly know how to tell about poor Bert. You can assure Bert's father and mother that no man could have done his duty any braver than Bert did, and in losing him the Second Batralion lost one of the best Corporals they had.

The shells are flying over my head while I write you, and away to my right the French are engaged in a heavy artillery bombardment. I wrote in my last letter that Heber Rogers was killed, but good news has been received that he is a prisoner in Germany.

Must close now but will write more when we get out again. Best regards to all and I send my deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter.

As ever,
HOWARD.

Normal School Student Enlists and Departs

R. H. Latimer, of Beaverton, who has just completed his Normal school course, enlisted last night in the 8th Mounted Rifles and left this morning for Kingston. Mr. Latimer was one of the comparatively few young men who took the Normal course, but instead of looking for a school decided to fit himself for action at the front.

Concrete Pavement Will Not Be Placed on George Street as Experiment

Deputation From North Ward Received Consideration After Waiting on the Council Last Night---Friday Night's Motion Was Rescinded.

There will not be any concrete pavement laid on George street. The City Council met last evening to reconsider the decision of the last meeting, in which it was decided to lay concrete on George street, between Edinburgh and Smith streets. There were numerous objections from the north ward to paving for the concrete as an experiment, with the prospect of having to replace it if it was not satisfactory and also the City Engineer would not recommend the laying of concrete on that part of George street, it being necessary to have his recommendation before a by-law would be legal.

There were a number of George street ratepayers present to urge upon the Council the fact that they did not want concrete and to have the motion of last meeting rescinded.

Deputations.

Ex-Mayor W. H. Bradburn spoke for a few moments in protest. His company, Bradburns Limited, and he personally as a heavy owner there, objected and said they were willing to pay the extra cost for asphaltic or bitulithic pavement. If the Council wished to try concrete he wanted them to try it on some other street.

Ex-Ald. Kerneghan said he had heard many complaints and objections to having concrete on those blocks. He concurred with Ex-Mayor Bradburn in that if the Council wished to try concrete he believed it should be done on a shorter street or one where there was not so much traffic.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood said his attention was first drawn by the report of the City Engineer. He thought that if the City Engineer would not recommend the laying of the concrete on George street, the Council there was something wrong. He felt that this was not exactly a place for an experiment and he believed the concrete was still in the experimental stage.

Faith in Concrete.

Ald. Duffus, who supported the concrete pavement movement, was heard after the visitors, and said that had the City Engineer been present at the last Council meeting and explained his position he did not believe the aldermen would vote against his recommendation.

He had faith in the concrete pavement and thought this was a place to try it, giving it a chance against the other pavements, under the same conditions. He believed that if concrete pavement was adopted on many of the streets to be paved now, the Council would not be going far astray.

Ald. Duffus added that as soon as the 30,000 yards of other pavement was laid he would stand for having the balance of the paving this year of concrete.

Council in Error.

Ald. Dobbin, who objected on Friday night to concrete on George street, as a ratepayer was still opposed to it, as was Ald. Green. They thought the Council was in error when they voted for concrete as an experiment on a street where there would be the heaviest traffic. Both gentlemen hoped that the Council would see fit to rescind the motion. Ald. Green did not believe concrete was even the third best pavement. He was nevertheless satisfied to have it tried out in some other part of the city. And he thought that if the Council proposed to put down what they found to be an inferior kind of pavement, the ratepayers had a right to say what they would pay for it.

Ald. McIntyre, who was in favour of concrete at the last meeting, was still in favour of it. He thought concrete was the best kind of pavement but he had several conversations with the people in the north ward and found that they did not want concrete. He was therefore ready to vote for the kind of pavement the what they wanted.

Ald. Langford, another exponent of concrete pavement, had changed his mind about putting it on George street. He objected to Ald. Green's statemens about concrete and he stated it was the only kind which was not an experiment.

Ald. Edgar, who was against concrete pavement on George street at the last meeting, was still of the same opinion.

Ald. Evans, who was on the motion for the concrete on George street at the last meeting, would vote that the George street ratepayers be given wha they wanted.

Ald. Weir was of the same mind, though he was in favour of giving concrete a try.

Try a Back Street.

His Worship Mayor Buller, referring to the production of labour to the citizens of the city, said that to put down the asphaltic base produced as much as concrete paving. He thought the question was pretty well threshed out and that if the Council wanted to try concrete it should be done on some other street.

Motion Rescinded.

Then the trouble was to settle where the concrete was to be laid out and how much was to be laid as an experiment. It finally narrowed down to McDonnel street, somewhere between Water and Reid streets. Aldermen Edgar and Saunders accordingly started their motion that the motion of the Council of last week that it be laid on part of George street be rescinded and that concrete be laid on McDonnel street, from Bethune to Reid streets. Ald. Stratton and Ald. Evans were on motion to extend it from Aylmer street to Reid street on McDonnel. As trouble seemed to be brewing a change was made in the motion when the south ward representatives said a separate motion made of the clause which called for the establishment of their recommendation for concrete on George street, and this was passed without a dissenting voice.

Ald. Stratton's amendment was next in line and he had seven votes with him. This, however, brought up the point that it was necessary to have two-thirds of the votes to put through the by-law, but thought some time was spent in the pros and cons, another vote could not be swung into line. Ald. Stratton then asked for the ayes and nayes. The division was:

Ayes — Stratton, Dobbin, Duffus, Langford, McIntyre, Weir and Evans.

Nayes — Saunders, Edgar, Green and Mayor Buller.

Came on Deputation.

A couple of the aldermen expressed themselves as being in favour of giving other deputations the same consideration as those present received last night, if they came forward with a protest against the concrete being laid in front of their property, and many of them felt that there would be a deputation of some kind present at the next meeting. The vote of the Mayor would have given the necessary majority for the amendment, but he said he was not going to cast the deciding vote and have some of the aldermen change front when they again faced a deputation. Whatever they could agree upon as a body he would support. He accordingly voted with the motion.

The trouble was as to whether McDonnel street should be paved from Aylmer to Bethune. From there to Reid everyone was agreed. Mr. Carrol, the contractor for the concrete paving, was present, and was asked if he would accept a contract at the price mentioned, from Bethune to Reid. He pointed out that this amount was 4,500 yards, while he tendered on 17,000 yards. If Mr. Carroll does not wish to do the work the city can do it with its own plant.

A Deadlock.

A deadlock was on for the remainder and though many attempts were made it would not be broken and at last some of the aldermen became so disgusted that they prepared to ask to be allowed to retire at 10 o'clock.

Ald. Stratton volunteered the information that he believed the framers of the motion had come there with their minds made up to get what they proposed and nothing else. Some had come who did not want anything. "Tell us what you want and we will go at least half way. Let us work for the interests of the city," concluded the alderman.

More time was taken by those supporting the motion to explain their position for "'steenth" time.

As another effort at a compromise Ald. Dobbin moved that concrete pavement be laid on McDonnel street between Bethune and Reid streets, and on Hunter from Water to Sheridan street. This was voted for by all the supporters of Ald. Stratton's amendment excepting Ald. Langford. Another attempt at breaking the deadlock failed.

Meeting Adjourned.

A motion for adjournment from Ald. Edgar and Saunders had but two supporters. "Well, I guess we can remain here in session until to-morrow if we want to," remarked the Mayor. Recess was announced and more lobbying commenced, but alas the aldermen had "made up their minds" and unfortunately enough did not think alike to settle on the amount of concrete to be laid. Ald. Duffus and Stratton then wanted to adjourn and in order to settle something enough aldermen swung over to the original motion to carry it, and according to the motion, concrete will be laid on McDonnel from Bethune to Reid, but this does not say that a by-law will go through successfully. In all probability another "pavement" meeting will be called this week.

As it stands now, Mr. Carroll may get his cheque returned to him by writing to the City Clerk.

ELLIOT'S

Ready To Give Y. M. C. A. Building For Convalescent Soldiers If Needed

The Y.M.C.A. has made the following reply to Mr. Burnham:

J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
City:

Dear Mr. Burnham,—Your letter of June 21st, suggesting the use of the Y.M.C.A. building as a convalescent hospital for soldiers returning from the front, received. After consultation with those members of the Board of Directors whom I have been able to see, I beg to reply on their behalf as follows:

Should it be necessary to use the Y.M.C.A. building for such a purpose we are pleased to state that as loyal citizens of the Empire we would be pleased to place the building at the disposal of the government.

We are informed, however, that a smaller building in a more secluded part of the city would be better adapted for the work contemplated. We are also informed that an unused residence property similar to those which have been offered for use free of charge in other communities, can be secured for twenty dollars per month, and would be suitable for the convalescents we may be called upon to care for.

We understand that the soldiers who may be returned to us from the front and who are likely to need our care, are not hospital patients or the severe cases that cannot stand the ocean voyage, but those who are in need of rest and quiet while regaining strength.

In soliciting our building for the purpose mentioned perhaps you are aware of the fact that it would require us to suspend a well organized and important work that is meeting a recognized need. The great welfare work of the Y.M.C.A. in behalf of soldiers in all camps in Canada, England, France, Belgium, and even among British soldiers who are prisoners in Germany is being supported by the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., by personal contributions from its men and by other citizens of our city who desire to keep fit for service those who have gone in our stead.

For nine months our building has been used by an organization of over one hundred ladies who have been making clothing and comforts for our Peterborough soldiers. On seven other occasions during the past few months our building has been opened for patriotic purposes. Sixty-five of our gym. members have left for the front and some of our Y.M.C.A. boys lie buried in graves in Flanders, others are in various hospitals in England and France. Should it, in addition to this, be a fact that suitable residence property is not available, and the use of a public building is necessary, you can count on the Y. M.C.A. to do its part.

Sincerely yours,
C. N. MESERVE,
General Secretary.

With regard to the above Mr. Burnham says that on receipt of the reply from the Y.M.C.A. he telephoned one of the doctors and found that the conclusion reached in their conversation of the day before had not been altered. The doctor mentioned said that he had not recommended a building in the more secluded part of the city as more suitable for the work contemplated. Whatever was said about other buildings came up simply in the course of his conversation with the Y.M.C.A. authorities, and moreover it must be remembered that $20 a month is $20 a month and other charges would likely have to be paid too in connection with a rented private residence. "However, with these few exceptions, it only remains to be said that we shall proceed to look elsewhere," said Mr. Burnham. "The Y.M.C.A. has a perfect right to refuse its building if it chooses, although we would have thought that many of the young men who were unable to go to the front would have preferred stepping out for the time being and giving all that such a fine large building can afford for the benefit of the many Peterborough men who in the long drawn-out battle at the front must necessarily suffer from wounds, shock, etc." They will provide out of many hundreds a large proportion for a convalescent home. Narrow quarters are not good for convalescents. Mr. Burnham also said that since the receipt of the above letter a very well-known gentleman had offered his residence free and though clearly one residence will not be sufficient possibly others may be offered. He wished to thank the Y.M.C.A. for their prompt reply, and had no criticism whatever to make of their refusal. Mr. Burnham hoped that other citizens would offer their residences so that as in other places of this size, a suitable and ample offer may be made to the government.

Peterborough Club.

Mr. Burnham added that he intended writing to the Peterborough Club asking them if they would give their building as a home for soldiers.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Mayor and a number of the aldermen have arranged to be present at the opening band concert in King Edward park, which is scheduled for this evening.

Will Undergo Operation.

City Treasurer Adams has entered Nicholls Hospital, where he will undergo an operation for eye trouble. This will incapacitate him for some weeks.

Conditions Unfavourable.

Owing to unfavourable weather conditions the city's attempt to oil the streets is not proving the success it otherwise might. The oil is no sooner applied than a shower of rain comes and robs the oil of its full effect.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

A new source of revenue has been suggested to the Property committee of Toronto in the shape of a by-law forcing garbage and gasoline shop owners to take out licenses. Property Commissioner Chisholm will report on the advisability of adopting the proposal.

New Supt. of Water Commission.

A by-law submitted to the ratepayers yesterday by the Kingston City Council to repeal a by-law entrusting the control of the public utilities to a Commission, was defeated by 579 to 396, the Commission which has been managing the gas, electric and water plants for the past year and a half being sustained.

LATE LT. JOHN HALIFAX LIVED IN LAKEFIELD

Among the gallant young Canadians killed in action is Lieut. John Hallifax, of the 2nd Battalion, Yorkshire Regiment, who was shot through the head on May 17th, while walking back from the machine guns, some distance away from his company, which was in an advanced position in front of the British line.

Lieut. Hallifax, who was one of the most charming and delightful of young soldiers, with quite unusual gifts for both writing and drawing, was the younger son of the late Captain Plassy Hallifax, formerly of the Yorkshire Regiment, then the 19th Foot, and of Mrs. Hallifax, who was Miss Edith Crickmore, one of the daughters of the late John Crickmore, barrister, of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Crickmore were old Toronto people, and an elder daughter was Mrs. Roland Strickland, of Lakefield, Ont., who died a few years ago. Mr. Eden, a brother of Mrs. Hallifax, lives in Toronto. After some years in Lakefield, Captain and Mrs. Hallifax returned to England, and Captain Hillifax died there. The elder son is Lieut. Fred Hallifax, of the Royal Garrison, now at the front. The late Lieut. John Hallifax, who left Sandhurst in June, and went to the front only a few weeks ago, was but 20 years of age. Both Lieut. John and Lieut. F. W. Hallifax were born in Lakefield, Ont.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

Victor, Sergt. Peter, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadain Division, Hampstead Military Hospital, London N. W., England, (wounded).

King, Gunner Harry (548 Downie street) Canadian Field Artillery, 1st Canadian Division, Oaklaw Manor Hospital, Shrewsbury, London, Eng. (wounded.)

Mullin, Pte. Chas., 8th Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, St. Vincents Hospital, Paderborn, Germany. (Prisoner of war and wounded.)

Pte. H. Caillaird, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, London Military Hospital, Lower Clapton, N. W., Eng., wounded.

Sergt. A. F. Field, Prisoner of War, 2nd Battalion, Canadians, Hospital des Securs Evangeliques,. Oberhausen, Rhineland, Germany; prisoner of war, and wounded.

Water Main For Lafayette Avenue

Waterworks Superintendent is Instructed to Commence Construction

At a meeting of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, which was held yesterday afternoon reports were read from the waterworks superintendent on petitions for mains on the following streets:

Lafayette avenue; estimated cost, $445.20; estimated revenue, $52.21.

The waterworks superintendent was instructed to lay the main on Lafayette avenue, while the petition for the main on Jackson avenue was again referred to the superintendent.

The following accounts were passed:

Haskin Glass Co., $30.87; Canada Carbon Co., $127.40; City of Peterborough, $3,000; City of Peterborough, $10,541.10.

The proposed contract with the De Laval Dairy Supply Company for an auxiliary pumping unit of 6,000,000 gallons capacity was considered.

FOUND NOT GUILTY OF THEFT CHARGE

Thomas McLean from anywhere and everywhere, admitted being a tramp when he appeared before Judge Huycke, in the County Court yesterday afternoon, but was found not guilty of the charge of having stolen $16 from Elias McNeil of Douro, Mr. George Hatton appeared for the Crown, and Mr. Widdifield of Gordon & Widdifield, defened the prisoner.

There was no evidence to prove that money which McLean had in his possession had belonged to McNeill. The prisoner was discharged by His Honour.

To guide a key to a keyhole in the dark there has been patented a V-shaped strip of metal to be fastened to a door with the point surrounding the hole.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT—

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough intends to construct as local improvements sewers on the following streets between the points herein described, and intends to assess the cost on the land abutting directly on the said works, respectively.

2. The estimated cost of each of the said works, and the sum in respect to each of the said works, which is to be paid by the Corporation for each work are set out below.

The estimated annual cost per foot frontage for each work is $0.0569347.

The special assessment in each case is to be paid in thirty annual instalments:

Part of Street.	Estimated Cost.	To be paid by the Corporation
Wescott Street, from George St. to Park Street	$2,586.00	$181.30
Maude Street, from Princess Street to Lansdowne St.	763.60	92.40
Lansdowne Street from Maude Street to Lock Street	411.00	85.40

3. A petition against any of the said proposed works will not avail to prevent its construction.

Dated June 22nd, 1915.

S. R. ARMSTRONG, Clerk.

Praise For Miss McCarthy

A Hamilton exchange has the following concerning the closing exercises of Loretto Academy in that city: "One of the most delightful features of the afternoon was the offering of a musical programme, the opening number of which was an interpretation of the piano of one of Chopin's masterpieces by Miss Marie McCarthy, who not only can play but is also no mean artist in English that she carried away the honours in that subject, Miss McCarthy having won the bronze medal for English literature, presented by His Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor General of Canada, and also the gold medal for English Essay, presented by Right Rev. Monsignor Mahoney, V.G., of Hamilton."

Labour Troubles Are Acute Conscription Only Remedy

NEW YORK, June 21.—The world correspondent writing an article on labour troubles in Britain at this period says conditions are so acute that conscription seems the only possible remedy. The output of war munitions is crippled by threatened strikes, bad time-keeping and drink, according to this writer. He says:

England's crying need is for labour, both skilled and unskilled. There is a general shortage of male labour, particularly in shipbuilding, coal mining, agriculture, machine shops, the miscellaneous metals trade and the clothing trade.

The London Board of Trade which is an essential part of the English Government, has issued a statement showing that the percentage of unemployed among trades union members is only 1.2 per cent., which is lower than at any time within the past twenty-five years. In some of the trades, particularly in those furnishing munitions of war, the percentage of unemployed is so small as to be negligible.

Appeals to Canada.

So imperative is the need for labor in England, that G. N. Barnes, M.P., and the director and general manager of the Labour Exchange Department have gone to Canada for the purpose of engaging skilled machinists and others who can be used in the production of munitions of war. British authorities are now scouring the shops of the United States, Canada and the British possessions for skilled mechanics. Wherever they are found they are offered higher wages than they are receiving with free passage both to England and back, upon the completion of their agreements.

British-Americans Help.

Already there are numbers of American skilled workingmen aiding in "speeding up" the British arms and munitions factories. On the steamship St. Paul, which arrived at Liverpool recently from New York, there were thirty-two machinists all engaged for jobs in England, during the continuance of the war. In a majority of instances these men were English-born, but naturalized Americans, and took this opportunity to revisit the place of their birth and at the same time to help the "Old Country" in their hour of need.

Two million men of military age are now employed in the making of munitions of war, according to Mr. Lloyd-George, the new Minister of Munitions, and this, with the 3,000,000 who have enlisted, has taken 5,000,000 men out of their accustomed trades.

Conscription the Remedy.

The situation is so serious and has threatened the output of war munitions to such an extent that it is regarded as almost certain that the new Cabinet will take up the question. It can be remedied by conscription, but just now democratic England balks at the word "conscription" and thinks "registration" is better. Registration means conscription, but is a fine distinction of words. Under the "registration" or conscription method the men who are of no value to the country in the shops and foundries will be sent there, while the unskilled workmen will be sent to the front. In the "registration" or conscription system the workman will be serving the colours just as well one way as the other—it is simply a question as to where he will give the best services.

Strikes are Frequent.

The labour unions are particularly strong in England and strikes are not infrequent. The unions already have demonstrated their ability not only to tie up individual factories, but public utilities and even Government work itself. The unions have taken the stand in some sections, particularly on the Clyde, that unskilled labour shall not be engaged in the munitions factories, even though there may be a shortage of labour and a consequent falling off in carrying out Government contracts.

The skilled workmen have clearly indicated their inability to resist the submarine attack to them in every direction by his conscious exertion by the shortage of men. The proof of this is shown by the excessive wage claims, by the enforcement of restrictions on production, on conditions of working, by bad time keeping and by drink.

Letter From Pte. Harrington.

The following letter from Pte. Gilbert Harrington was received by Mr. H. T. Andrews last week.

Sandling Camp, May 17th.

Dear Friend,— Arrived safe and sound from our trip across the ocean. We left Kingston on May 9th at 7.30 p.m. and arrived in Montreal on the following morning at 7 a.m. took the boat at 10.15 a.m. and reached Quebec at 11 p.m. Stopped 5 minutes, got a pilot, sailed on until about 11 p.m. Next morning we stopped to let pilot off, then sailed on to England.

We arrived at Plymouth on May 15th at 4 a.m. We took the train from there to Sandling, starting at 6.30 p.m. and arriving at 3 a.m. This camp is about four miles from Shorncliffe. You will see it on the map, because I remember that I saw it there when I was going to school. I like this place alright. Over here the houses are like step-ladders, and the trains like toys compared with the C.P.R. trains. To-day there were four or five aeroplanes flying over the camp. We are camped about 40 miles from the firing line and on a clear day you can see across the channel to the French coast, where I long to be, but it may be a month or so before we strike the firing line. Tell all the boys and girls that I am too busy to answer their letters just ye. I wish you all good luck.

GIB.

More Men Needed.

The following letter was received by Mr. W. J. Brown from Pte. Chas. Southgate last week:

Sandling Camp, Kent, Eng.

Mr. Brown,—For God's sake wake up some of the Havelock 'slackers.' Things are not going our way yet. Britain is straining her every nerve. Her women are making awful sacrifices. Canada must do likewise. Men and more men are needed and will be needed. Canada must pay the price of her past independence and her future security. This is true. Time will tell.

The Canadians' Memorial

(By Arthur Machen)

"ARE YE HERE? . . . . ARE YE HERE? . . . . . ARE YE HERE?"

Thus the bugle cried through the hollow spaces of the holy house of St. Paul's. It rang, clamant, against the vast vault of the dome, it went piercing and shrilling down all the shadowy aisles; its voice went up to the altar and to the image of the Crucified. And I can well imagine that echoes of that summons went down into the dark places of the crypt and sang there among the graves to noble ears.

"Are ye here?" That clear, reiterated voice that shrilled up even to the cross above the dome must surely have descended and compelled the ears of the glorious dead. Nelson heard those notes, and Wellington also and Roberts. And the Canadians, whose bodies lie in Flanders heard the bugles calling to them. For it was at St. Paul's Cathedral; and the buglers were playing the Last Post at the memorial service for the Canadian soldiers who have fallen in the war.

Early in the evening a vast dark mass of people filled the church from the choir gates to the western doors. The dusk and the twilight gathered slowly, mournfully; the pipes and arches glimmered in the growing shadows. But high in the hollow of the dome the last glory of the setting sun shone on the statue of a white, triumphant saint. So a dying man may have shone on the waste levels of Flanders when the smoke of the battle and the poison clouds had passed away, and the Canadians looked on one another; and looked on their dead.

Cardinal Mercier, uttering an authentic message, has nobly said that he who dies on the battlefield fighting against hell's legionaries, thereby blots out all his sins and receives the joys of paradise. And so the sun shone on the Flanders field and on the dead heroes who lay there as it shone on the victorious saint who looks down from the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral.

I saw the Canadians more than six months ago on Salisbury Plain. There were thirty thousand of them, a greater army than the British force which fought at Waterloo, and yet on that vast wild plain one had to search for their camps. The billows of the plain roll far and wide; Stonehenge, which is still on the plain, was away beyond the horizon, the tents of the thirty thousand were but a few white dots here and there. The Canadians, I think, were amazed by many things, and yet they felt at home on the plain. One of them told me that he could well imagine that Calgary was "just beyond, over there."

And now the trumpets of the Coldstream Guards are proclaiming the glory of them men under the dome, in the heart of London. And the drums are beating for them and the music swells like a storm of praise, so that the golden pipes of the organ awaken at last, and are opened and fill all the church with the sound of their triumph.

Two great flags are hung on each side of the entrance to the choir. One is the Union Jack, the other is the Canadian flag, a banner with a scarlet field.

O must just therein, must wise heraldic prophecy! If it had not first been so, it must also have been fashioned so. For there was a scarlet field indeed on which the men of the West fought by Ypres town away in Flanders; and it was Canadian blood that made it scarlet.

We have all read the story of how the Abominable, having failed with musket and bayonet, with small arms and great cannon, let loose hell's stenches and poisons against our leaguer. Against all laws, all faith, all honour certainly; but to the German people and their rulers and their soldiers, these words have no meaning.

So they drove their torturing deadly cloud against us and our allies, and the Canadians found themselves surrounded or all but surrounded; death and destruction on every side of them. They endured to the end. They saved our battle. They stayed the rising flood of the foul enemy.

So now they are singing for the souls of their dead in St. Paul's Cathedral:

Out of the deep have I called unto Thee, O Lord; hear my voice.

O Israel, trust in the Lord, for with the Lord there is mercy; and with Him is plenteous redemption.

And He shall redeem Israel from all his sins.

The night has now come down, and the high windows in the dome were darkened. But now and again they shone with a sudden flickering and darting of blue light, as if it had been summer lightning. This was caused by the playing of the searchlights, while the Bishop of London's voice rang out from the pulpit as he praised the valiant dead. I was far away down in the nave, but I think that he made an ancient sign upon his breast and uttered ancient words as he closed his sermon.

Rest eternal grant them, O Lord.

And let light perpetual shine upon them.

The Bishop then went up to the altar and knelt before it: his scarlet hood vivid against the black altar-cloth. He blessed the people, and all stood up; and there was a moment's silence.

Then the air was troubled. There was no sound nor tone, but a noise of torment, as if high in the deep vast invisible things were beating. And this trouble of the air grew and increased till the wings might have been of iron, and then, heavy as irrevocable doom, there fell the beat of the great drum.

Thus the musicians entered on the lamentation of the Dead March, with its wailing and crying of sorrowful voices. But a great trumpet rang out sonorous, and these wailing voices were transmuted into the thunders of triumph. Still beneath the chorus of victory one heard the beating of those mighty wings, but even these were silenced and subdued by the proclamation of the final glory.

The Last Post was now sounding. "Are ye here? . . . . . Are ye there?" it cried to the valiant dead, summoning them to the last army. All through the cathedral the bugles rang and soared and implored in long, lingering, reiterated voices. And at last a loud cry shrilled upward, piercing to the stars.

And there the great dead heard and answered the summons.

CANADIAN FIRMS SUPPLY FOOD TO TRENCHES

One Montreal Firm Shipping Regularly to France

While many Canadian firms are busy manufacturing shells and army equipments for the Allies it is interesting to note also that Canadian firms are shipping food products to the front.

One Montreal firm is regularly shipping huge quantities of its product to France, the bulk of which is being consumed in the trenches.

Recently over half a million tins of Paris Pate have been supplied to France and steady orders continue to pour in. The firm is receiving letters from Canadian soldiers saying how much they enjoy it.

Paris Pate is evidently a favourite in the trenches because it is nutritive, can be easily carried and it is cooked, ready to eat.

STONEY LAKE BREEZES

New Supply Boats on the Lake —More Cottages Going Up— Visitors Flocking In

Prof. M. A. Mackenzie, Master Hughie and Miss Ailene, and Miss Wood, arrived at "Lochend" on Saturday. Mrs. Mackenzie and her daughter Frances will follow in about ten days.

Miss Mackenzie was successful in capturing a prize for proficiency in her science course last term.

Messrs. Eric and Crawford Grier, and Miss Roberts, of Toronto, have been visiting "Cochrane," the summer home of Mr. E. Wyly Grier.

Mr. Iver Brock came up from Peterborough on Thursday and remained with his family at "Shingleshanty" until Monday.

Lumber for a new cottage has arrived at the little island opposite Mr. Wesley Shegin's. Mrs. Dr. Bell of Toronto, intends building a cottage there.

Mrs. Dunn is having the cottages on her island near Juniper trimmed to a new coat of white paint, with green trimmings. Mr. Alford and two men from Lakefield are wielding the paint brushes.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, police magistrate of Peterborough, came up to his cottage in Beechink on Friday.

The large floating wharves which improved Juniper so much last season will be brought out of their winter quarters soon, now that the water has gone down low enough to expose the stationary structure.

Mr. H. G. Stubbs decided early in the season that this should be painting year at "Chateau du lac," and for the last couple of weeks he has been busy putting his decision into practice.

Mrs. M. E. Hamilton, of 415 Rubidge Street, Peterborough, returned home Friday, after a short holiday at the lake.

Mrs. W. A. Sanderson and her daughter, Miss Hazel Sanderson, arrived at their summer home in Beechink on Friday.

The Hamilton cottage in Bryson's Bay was opened this week.

Mr. John Crane and his two sons, Hal. and Ken., motored to Kawartha Par on Sunday and spent the day at their cottage "Gladhalen."

Supply boats will be very plentiful on Stoney Lake this season. Mr. Eric Grier of Toronto, early in the season rented a plot of ground on the Burleigh road from Mr. John F. Ayotte, and this he planted with vegetables. These will be sold to cottagers in the Kawartha Park district from a gasoline launch which he purchased from H. G. Fitzgerald of Lakefield.

Another boat of the steam variety, known as the "Myrtle" of Peterborough, with Mr. Norman Preston at the helm, and Mr. Gerald McClelland at the engine, will operate in the Kawartha Park-Juniper Island section each day carrying a supply of milk, vegetables, meats and butter. These young men were up last Wednesday and Thursday looking over the ground.

These two new boats along with the ones which operated last season ought to keep the cottagers well supplied.

Miss Helen E. Audlin and Miss Mabel F. Newtonware of Toronto, spent a short time at "Indian Isle."

The following house party spent a short holiday at "Calabarra," the summer home of Mr. J. D. Collins; Miss Phillips, Gabrielle Delafosse, of Peterborough, Mr. George Tate and bride, Ottawa, Lieut. Hilliard and Colonel Hatton, Kingston; Lieutenant Eastwood, Belleville; Dr. A. E. Hammond and Miss Twinkle Clemens, Madge Dumble and Eleanor Collins, of Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Blewett, of Lakefield, are located for the summer at Burleigh Falls.

"Pinehurst" shelters the following party from Toronto: Messrs. Fred W., Fred., E. and A. C. Nettleton, and Master G. C. Nettleton, Jr., Messrs. T. L. and C. B. Ferriman, and Miss Margaret Ferriman. Their yacht is christened "Tipperary."

Miss Muriel Guillett of Calgary is domiciled at "Westaway," Hawkins Island.

A School For Spies in Germany

Every German Is a Spy—A Strange Training

Among the many things revealed to us by the war is the fact that practically every German is a spy.

Little surprise may be felt, therefore, at the discovery the French have just made of the existence of a School for Spies at Lorrach, in the Grand Duchy of Baden. There, in a sort of university for the formation of the perfect spy, spectacled Herr Professors initiated their pupils into the mysteries and artifices of espionage.

The University of Espionage of Lorrach admitted women, of course, as well as men. Before admission the candidate would be questioned by military officers, pretending to be police magistrates, who would decide whether the applicants possessed the necessary aptitude and inclination for the profession.

The length of study lasted from a few weeks to several months, according to the degree of perfection of the importance of the position the candidate desired to attain.

The professor began the course of instruction with lectures, illustrated by coloured prints, on the uniforms, arms and other technical details of the military and naval organization of foreign countries; photographs were shown of British, French and Russian cannon; full explanations were given of the army and navy effectives in each country, the strength of the different garrisons, and the strategical utilisation of the railways.

Students were told how to collect this information quickly, and how to convey it to headquarters without arousing suspicion. They were told, for instance, how they could mark in a railway time-table the number of regiments in a given town by a system of simple figures.

When the student's instruction was complete he was provided with false papers and sent out to "try his luck." He (or she) was invariably told, however, that any spy who got into trouble would be disavowed by the Government.

Special Meeting of the Council

Another Session Is In Prospect For Purpose of Straightening Out Paving Matter

Another special meeting of the City Council will probably be held some night this week to further consider the question of concrete paving. The Council as a body is evidently impressed with the apparent necessity of constructing at least three or four blocks of concrete paving. The question that is now agitating the aldermanic mind is where should the paving go? Ald. Duffus, together with a majority of the aldermen, insisted on having it placed on George street, contrary to the recommendation of City Engineer Parsons. When it came to putting it on McDonnel street, or even on Hunter street, where it was originally intended that it should go, there was enough diversity of opinion among the aldermen to block the whole thing. Last night's meeting was called to correct the mistake of the previous meeting but the council failed to come to an amiable understanding, and a deadlock resulted. This will necessitate another meeting at some future date for purpose of straightening out the matter.

RUNAWAY GIRL PLEADS TO HAVE FATHER FREED

CHESTER, Pa., June 21.—Radically transformed from the tearful and heartbroken girl who arrived here several days ago, Ruth Abbott, thirteen years old, has just departed for her new home in Fort Thomas, Ky., filled with hope that her runaway trip from Staunton, Ill., to the Chester Penitentiary would result in a pardon for her father, Salmon Abbott, who is serving a term of fourteen years for murder.

It was an affecting story which she related to the Pardon Board, and to which the members listened with a kindliness and interest which showed they were impressed by her unconscious eloquence. They would make no announcement after her second appearance before them, but prison officials would not be greatly surprised if a pardon is recommended for Abbott.

Three years ago she told them, men came and took away to prison the father who had always been good to her and shielded her from mistreatment. After he was gone she was unhappy with her stepmother, who was seated in a buggy beside Emil Hawie, when Abbott shot him dead. Her stepbrothers and stepsisters, her mother's children, began to treat her unkindly Ruth said.

But it was the neighbour's children who caused her the greatest wretchedness. When she went into the street they would hoot after her: "There goes the convict's daughter!" They would not play with her, and said scornfully. "Our mothers won't let us play with anybody whose father is in prison."

The persecution drove the girl to despair, and at last she could endure it no longer. The idea came to her that if she could only go to her father, who had always been so kind to her, he would be able in some way, although in prison, to protect her.

She went among the miners with whom Abbott had worked and begged for money to make the trip to Chester. They gave her $8.50, she said, but her mother, learning of her purpose, took the money away so that she could not go.

The girl went again to the miners, who gave her $2.50 more. Her mother tried to take the money, Ruth said, but she had learned a lesson and hid $2, giving her mother but half a dollar and maintaining stubbornly it was all she had. She bought a ticket to Chester and stole aboard a train, but not before writing a letter to her father's brother, J. J. Abbott, of Fort Thomas, asking him to send money to Chester so that she could go and live with him and her aunt.

When she reached Chester she found that she, who had sought her father's protection, had an opportunity to be a protector for him, more powerful than the friends who signed the petition which was denied by the Pardon Board last December. Prison officials to whom she told her story made it possible for her to repeat it to the Pardon Board, which happened to be in session. She wept when she told the members how lonely and unhappy she had been since she lost her father, and implored them to aid her in obtaining his freedom. They promised they would help her if possible.

She was permitted to have a long talk with her father, and on the same day her uncle arrived. He had not only sent the money for which she asked, but had himself come to Chester. He took her away with him, and said she would have a good home with his family as long as she wished and that no one would be permitted to taunt her with her father's misfortune. He bought her new clothes to take the place of the shabby ones in which she had run away from home.

Governor Is Still In a Stage of Seige

Special to the Examiner.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 22—Governor Slaton was still in a state of siege to-day. Three battalions of infantry and the Governor's Horse Guards, as Atlanta's Mounted Company is known, guarded every possible approach to his ten-acre home, six miles from this city.

Badly shaken by his experience, the Executive declared at 3 a.m., as a militia commander reported to him on his darkened porch that the last straggler had been driven from the neighborhood: "I did right; I'd do it a thousand times again." He referred to his commutating of the sentence on George Frank, the alleged murderer, which angered the whole community against the Governor.

New Secretary of State Chosen

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, June 22.— E. L. Patenaude, M.P.P. for La Prairie, and Conservative organizer for Montreal, will be sworn in this week as a member of the Borden cabinet in the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. Louis Coderre, Secretary of State.

ADDED TO DUTIES OF THE POLICE

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 22.— Speaking at the 11th annual convention of Police Chiefs' Association of Canada, Col. Sherwood, the president, said that although the War Measure Act has added immensely to the responsibilities and duties of Canadian policemen, Canada's police army had aided materially in securing to the country immunity from violence and mischief, which is a notable feature in consideration of the number of alien enemies in our midst.

LIEUT. STEWART IS KILLED IN ACTION

Cousin of Major Cameron Gives Life For the Empire

Major Cameron, A.M.C., who only yesterday heard that his brother-in-law, Lieut. Donald Fisher of the Royal Canadian Dragoons had been wounded, has now learned of the death in action of his cousin, Lieut. J. H. Stewart of Harrowsmith, Ont., who was at the front with the Princess Patricias. Lieut. Stewart was at Valcartier under Major Bennett in the 2nd Battalion, but transferred to the Princess Pats later on.

EVERLOCK MOUNTS

Mr. A. A. Fowler, the local eyesight specialist, with the Nugent Drug Co., has been granted the sole agency in this district for the Everlock spectacle and eyeglass mounts. The special advantages claimed for these mounts are: the doing away with screws in the fittings, the increased rigidity and steadiness of the mounts, and enlarging the field of vision. A difficult case was successfully treated to-day, among the first to be fitted was Mr. S. H. Mitchell, grocer, of Reid street, who is loud in his praises of the comfort and help which has been given.

Capt. Greer Is Now Attached To No. 2 Hospital

Dr. T. N. Greer has received word that his son, Captain Garnet Greer, M.D., who has been medical officer of the 2nd Battalion since its organization, has been transferred to No. 2 General Hospital (Canadian) near Dieppe, France, and is now on duty in the surgical ward. Capt. Greer has been in the fire zone for four months and had a nerve-wrecking experience during the battle of St. Julien.

MAKING GAINS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., June 22—A Paris official statement says: "In Lorraine we hve as a result of a fresh attack advanced three hundred yards to the north of our former positions on the Eastern slope of Reillon, occupied ridges to the south of Bamabois, repulsed easily a counter attack which began at Leintrey and stopped another to the south east of Parroy, and taken a number of prisoners.

Stones Have Been Removed

The local Automobile Association have employed a man to remove the loose stones from the roads in the vicinity of the city, and motorists driving north to points on Stoney Lake will remark on the absence of the rolling stones. With the exceptions of the sections in which fresh grading has been done, the stones have been removed from the roads leading to Warsaw, McClintock, Lakefield and Young's Point—both sides of the river—and Burleigh.

This work will be continued south of the city as soon as funds permit.

THE WOES OF AUSTRIA ARE INCREASING

ROME, June 19.—Reports received here from various centres go to show that Austria is threatened with domestic complications which will have a disastrous effect on her military organisation. A perfect reign of terror is said to exist at Prague and other Slav centres. The jails are full of political suspects, the newspapers have been suppressed and the population terrorised by an army of secret police.

A similar state of affairs prevails in the Trentini, in Istria and in Dalmatia. The difficulties of utilising the army effectively are increasing hourly, as it is impossible to send Slav troops against Russians, Croatians against Servians, Istrians or Dalmatians or troops from the Trentino against Italians, as they would undoubtedly desert en masse. If the Roumanians enter the conflict another 150,000 Austrian troops will become unreliable. Under the circumstances, Hungary and German Austria have to do more than their [illegible] dreds of thousands killed, wounded and prisoners, with the result that Hungary is seething with discontent. Count Apponyi's brutal declaration to Kaiser Franz Josef of an impending internal catastrophe has made an enormous sensation in Austria.

Hungary is rapidly drifting into a state of anarchy. If Roumania and Bulgaria join the Allies it will be the last straw and internal disorders will paralyse the military. All this, of course, increases the confidence of Italy and animates the army, causing it to push forward all along the line with irresistible lean. In spite of the fact that the Austrians hold strongly fortified and entrenched positions in the mountainous country, the Italians are driving them from one position after another.

LUMBERMEN'S RIGHTS MUST BE RESPECTED

Lumbermen may break down dams in the course of running logs down a river as long as they do no "unnecessary damage." This is the decision of Mr. Justice Middleton, of Toronto, in dismissing the action brought by Lowery and Goring, contractors, against J. R. Booth, to recover $25,000 damages. The contractors were building a dam for the Dominion Government, at a point on the Montreal River, near Latchford. A drive of 800,000 logs belonging to Booth destroyed the structure, which was finally abandoned by the contractors.

Attempt To Ram Submarine Saved The Cameronia From Torpedo

LONDON, June 23.—According to Mr. Peter Fletcher, head of the firm of Lamb, Findlay & Co., linen dealers, of Church street, New York, who was a saloon passenger on board the Cameronia, that steamship had a narrow escape from a German submarine in the Irish Sea on her voyage from New York to Liverpool.

The Cameronia, which is owned by the Aschor lien, but is under charter to the Cunard company, left New York on June 15 for Glasgow by way of Liverpool. She had on board forty first class passengers and a large number in the second cabin. She arrived in Liverpool on Sunday.

Mr. Fletcher says that on the run through the Irish Sea a submarine came out of the water, showing the top of her conning tower. To save the Cameronia Captain Kinnard headed his vessel for the submarine, which dived. After passing over the spot where the underwater craft went down without finding any evidence that the Cameronia had struck it, Captain Kinnard reversed the course of his vessel and got away safely.

Mr. Fletcher added that the passengers of the Cameronia, although many of them saw the periscope of the submarine, were cool.

Russians Have Now Evacuated Lemberg Says Official Statement

Retirement Before Enemy's Artillery Onslaught Necessary to Carrying Out of Grand Duke's Strategic Plans

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, June 23.—Russians have practically evacuated Lemberg. Official circles declared a retirement before the enemy's artillery onslaught was necessary to carrying out of Grand Duke's strategic plans, and made the point that the city itself was of little military value. An official statement issued to-day touched only lightly on situation at Lemberg, but dwelt upon Russian victories on both flanks of combined Austro-German armies in Southeast Galicia along the front from Stanislau to the north of Czernowitz. The Russian left wing inflicted two severe defeats on the Austro-Germans, taking 4,500 prisoners and large quantities of ammunition.

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—Meagre telephone advices to-day reported that probably a score of persons were killed in earthquake tremours that last night shook the Imperial Valley neighbourhood.

BERLIN (Bulletin), June 23.—Lemberg has been occupied by Austro-German troops. Kaiser Wilhelm himself entered city. Citizens joyous at return of Austrians.

AMSTERDAM, June 23.—A bachelor and spinster tax graduated according to age, has been imposed in a number of Austrian and German villages, to meet deficits caused by the war. Young bachelors and spinsters under 30 are lightly taxed, but in some instances those over 40 years of age are forced to pay $250.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Owing to new revolutionary activities in Haiti, the United States has sent the cruiser Washington with 700 blue jackets and 200 marines from Vera Cruz.

JUAREZ, Mexico, June 23.—Three hundred Villa wounded soldiers were burned to death when the Villa hospital was destroyed by fire to-day at Chihuahua City.

11,072 BRITISH OFFICERS ARE KILLED OR WOUNDED

LONDON, June 23.—The British army casualty lists ending June 9 show that since the beginning of the war 3,372 officers have been killed, 6,651 wounded and 1,049 put down as missing, making a total of 11,072. From May 19 to June 9 703 officers were killed, 1,407 wounded, and 150 reported missing, or 2,269 in all.

These figures bring out the fact that the proportion of killed to wounded runs one to two, which is probably due as much to the fact that the line officers of the lower grades are the first to leave the trenches during attacks as to the use of high explosives.

During the last fortnight the Australian contingent lost 107 officers killed and 175 wounded, the Canadians 40 killed and 130 wounded, and the Indian troops 48 killed and 117 wounded, who, being officers, were in large part English. The Royal Field Artillery lost 30 officers killed and 62 wounded. In many regiments more officers were killed than wounded. The Leicesters had 18 killed and 14 wounded, while in the Dublin Fusiliers the proportion stood 17 to 7, in the Welsh Fusiliers 11 to 5 and in the Surreys 15 to 13.

With each casualty list a certain number of officers and men are transferred from the missing to the killed, owing to the finding of their bodies. The number of the dead also is constantly increased by those succumbing to wounds.

Seven Austrians Capture Russian General and 393 Other Prisoners

AUSTRIAN HEADQUARTERS, via London, June 23. — The details of one of the most audacious achievements of the war—the capture of a Russian general, a colonel and almost four hundred men by a little squad of Austrian prisoners—has reached here.

The chief actor in the west was Lieutenant von Pindter, the commander of a patrol of landwehr and uhlans, who was captured by Cossacks while scouting in the rear of the retreating Russians after the battle of Tarnow in May.

The Russian cavalry brigade to which the Cossacks belonged was continuing its bivouac with Lieutenant von Pindter and the other Austrian prisoners when it came under the fire of Austrian artillery. Von Pindter, it is said, took advantage of the ensuing confusion and armed himself and six other prisoners with Russian rifles and ordered the general to surrender and made him and a colonel and ten other officers and 382 men prisoners and captured fifteen guns and a number of horses and carts of the transport column.

With the assistance of an Austrian machine gun detachment, which arrived later, von Pindter it is asserted took his prisoners and booty to the rear and turned them over to the corps headquarters.

Russians Are Preparing To Resume Offensive

Lemberg to be Evacuated But Grand Duke Nicholas Has Plans For Crushing Move Against the Germans

HILLS ARE VITAL

LONDON, June 23. — The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Mail sends a despatch telling of an official proclamation calling upon Russians to remain calm over the situation, as the day of retribution will come. It is issued by the general staff and is posted everywhere. It assures the nation that the official despatches explain the situation fully, and declares that gossip which goes beyond that is attributable to persons who are either timorous or evil disposed.

"The situation ought to become better every day," it says. "With regard to ammunition and the number of men who can be called to the colours still reaches many millions.

"It may be some time before Russia assumes a vigorous offensive again," it adds, "but it is quite certain that it will be assumed, with results that will be both crushing and durable. For ten months Russia has borne the chief burden and suffered the greatest losses of the allied cause, and has greatly helped the situation in the west. The time will come when she will emerge from her misfortunes stronger than ever. Meanwhile she confidently looks for her faithful allies to carry the war forward and give Germany no rest."

HILLS ARE VITAL

All despatches from Vienna, Petrograd and Berlin indicate that the Austro-Germans are closing in on Lembery on three sides, and in one direction there is a threat that an attempt will be made to envelope the town with attacking, cutting off the sole remaining railway into Russian Poland. The situation to-night appears to be that the centre of General Von Mackensen's army, having pursued the Russians through the gap between Lakes Dronsdowiecki and Czerlanski, drove them out of trenches three miles to the east of that point. This retreat of the Russian centre caused the right and left flanks to fall back precipitately until they had reached a ridge of hills a few miles to the east of the capital. Here they are making their last stand outside the city, for if they lose the hills Lemberg itself will be absolutely at the mercy of the heavy guns of the Teutons.

The southern drive which came over the Dneister from Stryj has passed Kumano, and is now approaching the capital, but it is still in a position to deflect to the east and effect a junction with an enveloping column from the north.

The dangerous element to the Russians is the drive being made by the German left wing, which, after taking Rawka Ruska, struck south east along the line of railway and captured Zolkiew, about 12 miles north of Lemberg.

White ants in Australia have developed an appetite for the lead covering and insulation of cables which is proving costly to telephone companies.

Cut Worm Is Causing Havoc

Emily Township Farmer Testifies to the Destructive Proclivities of the Insect

Mr. John C. O'Leary, of King's Wharg, Emily, states that the ravages from the cut worm was alarming in parts of the above township. Whole fields of grain have been destroyed by the silent worker, which seems to perform his nefarious work at night. The pest even had the audacity to attack Mrs. O'Leary's tomatoes, and swept them all out in one night, severing the stalk off close to the earth. From making their attacks between sunset and sunrise, Mr. O'Leary thinks it would not be inappropriate to name the undesirables German worms.

Two large fields of grain, one belonging to Mr. J. Devine and containing 12 acres of barley, was completely destroyed, as was also another ten-acre field of wheat owned by Mr. John Corbett. The fields may possibly be seeded to millet or buckwheat, which will obviate a total loss of a year's crop. The ground in which the worm works most destructively is in sod. An examination of the ground by digging down revealed the fact that thousands of worms were found under the sod which had been turned down last fall and furnished a place of rest for them during the day after their night of destructiveness. The worm is a brown colour, and more than one inch in length.

Apart from this drawback, Mr. O'Leary claims that crops in Emily were never better, and a banner harvest is expected.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Whenever Red would hang anything like this on Isaac, the rest of the boys would break'out into joyous laughter, and Isaac would smile crooked, like a man who had mistook the ketchup for the beer bottle but he never got mad at Red. He was on the outs with Shorty all the time, but he liked Red better 'n any of us.

That was a fine open winter and 'specially enjoyed by me after servin' out a string o' Wyoming winters. We had so much more range than we needed that it actually hurt my conscience, but we didn't get a chance to buy in much more stuff. Still, it was pleasant to look forward to a fat winter and not overly much to do except keep the stuff more or less bunched and visit around.

That little band of outlaw bulls used to bother us some, but none of the boys wanted to shoot 'em so we let 'em have their fun. Sometimes they wouldn't be seen for a week and then they'd try to break back into the herd and start to fightin' with the new bulls. That sacred Brahma, humpbacked, dun-coloured cow took up a lot more time than she was entitled to, also. The boys simply couldn't let her alone and had herded her so much that now, when she didn't have no other amusement on hand, she'd fall in and be handled as easy as a flock o' work mules for a little while, and then she'd wave farewell with her tail and nothin' on the place could head her.

All of our stuff was branded, and like him as anything else. It was in der. That brand o' Jim's was as much like him bas anything else. It was in the form of the eye part of a hook and eye contraption, and he held out that this meant Leo which was the pet name for lion, and was a sign in the sky which told what kind of work a feller ought to do if he happened to be born under it.

I pointed out that I had heard tell about the stars bein' thousands of miles up in the air which made it purty tricky to pick out just which one a feller happened to be born under; but this didn't phase him none; he ran for a book and read to me out of this book as though it had to be settled just 'cause it was found in a book. I asked him to look in the book and see if he had been born square under the star which said that he was cut out natural to be nothin' else but a cowman, and then he got sarcastic and said that the stars didn't have time to trifle with small matters but just pointed out big things in a general way.

Books was the worst temptation Jim Jimison had to contend with. If he wanted to find out if he had good grazin' on his own range, his first move would be to look in a dictionary.

I happened over to the old hermit's purty frequent and once in a while, Kate would take a ride with me. Finally one day I sez to Josiah straight

"Oh, he's out west from Elliot," sez Josiah.

"What's he doin'?" sez I.

"Herdin' goats," sez the old hermit, without crackin' a smile.

"What do ya mean?" sez I, thinkin' that Tom Smith had picked him up a gang and had gone back to the road.

"I mean herdin' goats," sez Josiah. "Goats are small, four-footed animals covered with hair, and wearin' horns and whiskers. They're somethin' like free-thinkin' sheep, and not easy imposed upon. Some folks eat—"

"I know what real goats are," sez I, "but hanged if ever I thought Tom Smith would bother with them."

"A feller wanted to try out the experiment," sez Josiah, "and Tom Smith thought that whoever it is that is lookin' for him, would look for him next to last in a goat-herd."

That evenin' me an' Kate took a little ride out across Red Deer Crick, and on the way back I asked her offhand, when Tom Smith had been down last. Her cheeks were already rosy with the ride, but they lit up like coffee boilin' over, her eyes shone out like the home-lamps springin' into view around a curve, and little quivers danced about her mouth and nose. I had allus thought it must have been a curious sight to see the good Lord moldin' clay into the shape of human beings, and what a great change it must 'a' made when he blew into 'em the breath of life; but now I saw it all—The breath of life was the fire of love.

I looked steady into her face and she looked back steady into mine, sighed, and gave a half-sad smile. "Do you love Tom Smith?" sez I. She nodded her head slow without shiftin' her eyes.

"How much do you know about him?" sez I.

Our ponies were on a walk and so close together that once in a while we brushed, but as I looked down at her face and saw the different expressions flit across it, we seemed a good ways apart. "I know that he has been an outlaw," sez she in a low tone, "and that they want him for killing a deputy United States Marshal but, it doesn't make any difference."

"It makes the difference between a man goin' where he will, and hidin' out with somethin' all the time hangin' over him," sez I.

"I mean, it doesn't make any difference in my feelin's for him," sez Kate. "Oh, I've changed so much in the last year! A year ago I was just an ordinary girl, trying to live comfortably in a castle of make-believe; but the air in the castle was damp and dead, while the air outside here is filled with life even when it sweeps in cold gusts against me. With each new pain has come new strength and new knowledge, until now, if I become the wife of an outlaw, I am fit to be an outlaw's wife."

The' was a challenge in her voice that made her words sink in with a bite, and while she was talkin' it occurred to me what the old hermit had said about women bein' no kin of the angels no matter how good they were. When I realized that Kate was nothin' but a she-man, it suddenly rolled up in my chest that I was a free man and able to hold what I took, and that I needed her for a mate.

But the' allus seems some sort of a wall between me and a woman, and I reckon if one was to set out to get me with an automatic, I'd be spendin' my time tryin' to recollect somethin' I'd heard about manners all the time she was busy plumpin' lead into me. Then, again, I was pledged to befriend Tom Smith, and I intended to do it until he had reached the end of his string.

"The's generally two roads to every place," sez I. "If fittin' yourself to be the wife of an outlaw is the best you can do as a last resort, why, I'll give ya any help I can to make your start comfortable; but if I was you, I'd try to make Tom Smith fit to stop bein' an outlaw first."

"He's fit right now," sez she, "and you know it; but how is he goin' to get a chance to start new again?"

"If a colt starts out to shy at somethin' real, you can reason it out of him in time," sez I; "but if he shies at shadders, I don't know how to tell when he can be trusted. Do you know exactly what they have again' him?"

"The thing they would try him for is the murder of the deputy marshal," sez she, with her eyes cast down and her voice purty squeamish in spite of her brags of a moment before. "He is innocent of that but circumstantial evidence is again' him and he sez they allus try a man like him on his general reputation, and just charge him with whatever crime has the heaviest sentence. Even if they didn't find him for years, it would allus be hangin' over his head and spoilin' his life."

"There's allus Canada and Mexico," sez I, "and I would sure have given Canada a chance before tryin' high life in a Kansas City livery stable. What is his object in stickin' around here?"

She looked off over the brown brakes and didn't speak for some time. "He just got sick and hungry for a taste of the plains when he saw the colour in your face and the light in your eyes," sez she. "He fought again' it, but when you started to talk to him, he couldn't hold out any longer; and then he is trying to get word to some friends of his, members of his old gang who he felt under obligations to."

"No kin to the angels, sure enough," thought I to myself, and I kept on thinkin' for some little time. I recollected that when I had first heard that it wasn't polite for a girl to have any choice as to who she married, but that she must continue to sit with a smile on her lips and her back again' the wall waitin' for some man to grab her wrist and waltz off with her, it had looked to me consid'able like a one-sided bet. Then, after I had got thoroughly resignated to such an arrangement, here I was lookin' down on a girl who didn't think well of the rules o' that game either, and for the life of me, if I had been her own father, I couldn't have thought up a single argument to scold her with.

"Has Tom Smith asked you to marry him?" sez I.

"No," sez she, "he don't feel that he can."

"On account of some other woman?" sez I.

"Of course not," sez she, flashin' her eyes at me. "On account of the government bein' after him."

"How do you know it isn't some other woman?" sez I.

She tightened her lips and looked cross at me for a moment, and then her face lighted with confidence; "I can tell that by his eyes," sez she, and though I knew there was another woman and was ready to bet on who it was, I didn't have the heart to prod her any farther, so we picked up a gallop and rode him with the wind in our faces.

Shortly before Christmas, Isaac came bowlin' in from Dan Cooper's one day, sayin' that they didn't seem as friendly as common, and that as far as he was concerned, they'd have to pointedly invite him before ever he visited them again for anything longer than a meal or so. Red cackled his tinniest laugh and looked as wise as a tree full of owls, but he wouldn't give any explanation and so we were all taken off our guard when a little girl infant came to Mrs. Cooper on Christmas morning, and we didn't airy one have a present for it.

"New Years' is the day for makin' calls," sez Red, "and we'll all post over there on New Year's and make that baby welcome."

So durin' the week we all went down to Gabe Hummage's store at Elliot at different times, even Isaac who had got over his pout in short order, and picked us out such gifts as said that Gabe hadn't showed out much judgment in layin' in a stock for infants. The' was only two dolls in the whole stock, and Red bought 'em both; but the' was plenty of mittens, shawls, and such-like, and Missourie bragged so much about a piece of flowered silk he found that the' was no puttin' up with him. Isaac bought a picture book and a spellin' book, and he thought so well of his own taste, that he preached a long sermon to us on the folly of useless presents.

When New Year's came around we arrayed ourselves in all the pomp and glory we could rummage out and went over in a body, firin' our guns in the air and givin' the long yell when we got near to the house. We none of us was much experienced about young babies, and Isaac acted as though he expected the child would step to the middle of the floor and make him a bow when he offered her his gift, so we were somewhat set back when Dan brought out an odd shaped bundle into the settin'-room and called us up to have a look.

SUFFERED FROM BILIOUS HEADACHE.

At Times Thought She Would Go Mad.

Headaches are one of the most aggravating troubles a person can have. They are many and varying; but when the headache starts you may be sure that there is some other chief cause of this most painful difficulty. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that there is some other baneful disease which is liable to assert itself unless the cause of the headache is removed. Get rid of the headache and thus perhaps save yourself many years of trial and suffering.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and has also proved itself to be a remedy that cures where all others fail. It does this by removing the cause of the trouble.

Miss Mary A. Roberts, Hampton, N.B., writes: "For about two years I have suffered from bilious headache. At times I thought I would really go mad. Not long ago a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters which I did, and after taking three bottles I have never been troubled with any kind of a headache. I think that B.B.B. is one of the wonders of the world. I can safely recommend it to all who suffer from bilious headache."

Burdock Blood Bitters is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the papers, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 334 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. It will only cost you a quarter to buy a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and put this medicine to the test. We are sure that you will be thankful to the writer for describing his cure to you. GIRL AND A BEAR

Brave "Little Sister" Gets Reward for Capturing "A Great Ferocious Monster."

By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

"I should die of fright," declared Netta Farbes. "I am sure I should." Why, just think of it, Beauty—way off on the very edge of civilization, wild animals, savages and mountain outlaws! No, thank you, not for me!"

"But David will be there," explained Beatrice Merrill, the bride of a week, and she spoke in a simple confident way that indicated her brave bright husband to be a power of valor and strength in her estimation.

"Well, that is a good deal, I will confess," admitted Netta. "But David can't be with you all of the time, can he? If he's going to be the great cattle king he thinks he is, he must have a lot of work to do. I'm sure you will faint at the first sight of a fierce cowboy, and as to those Indians—think of seeing them creeping—creeping—creeping through the grass, with their hideous tomahawks and scalping knives—ugh!" and the imaginative miss shivered in incipient hysterics.

Beatrice only smiled sweetly, optimistically. It was true she had been brought up tenderly, the only child of fond doting parents, shielded from every rude alarm, her girlhood experience a path of ever-blooming roses.

But it was true also that the rugged earnest figure of David Merrill had come into her life as a hero. His love had filled her existence magically. One

There Burst From a Copse a Great Shagged Bear.

And David—Oh, so grand and splendid when he goes off on a horse that would scare you! And me, poor little me—gained ten pounds already, brown as a berry, and oh, so happy in this lovely peaceful spot, so sweet and solemn in the clear morning sunlight, that I reverently call it God's land!

"As to the mountain outlaws—book! Once there was a few of them, but they have been driven off the trail. There's a band, they say, with a leader named Buckskin Joe. They say he is a bad, desperate fellow. There's a thousand dollars offered for his capture, so it isn't likely he'll ever dare to venture near a ranche where half a dozen brave, powerful herders would be glad to make a target of him. Bugaboo, all the horrid things you predicted! Come out and see me, and see what real men look like!"

In fact Beatrice had become so in love with her new life, that one morning when she found the vicinity of the house deserted she was not one bit worried. David the day before had made a famous sale and had gone off to a distance to negotiate for a new herd. Most of the men had accompanied him. The others had been given a holiday and had gone to Last Limit, where a circus had come along.

Beatrice went about her pleasant home tasks happy as a sprite, singing merrily, planning with delight a famous strawberry pie of gigantic proportions for her formidable horde when they should return, ravenous and delighted, at supper time. She had gathered a great apron full of the rich, luscious fruit in the ravine about a quarter of a mile from the house, when she heard shots and shouts in the distance. These died away, and she started for the house leisurely, attributing the commotion to some hurrah exploits of the cowboys on a neighboring ranch.

Then suddenly Beatrice uttered a sharp cry. There burst from a copse a great shagged bear. Its mouth was foaming, the blood was trickling down from its face, and it swung along at a fearful rate in the direction of the house.

"I won't faint!" determined Beatrice—"Although I hardly know what to do. Oh, dear!"

She fluttered like a frightened butterfly. Seeking refuge or eatables, the bear tore through the little house garden, aimed for the open cellar doors, darted down the steps, and then—Beatrice ran fast as she could, reached the house, slammed down the cellar doors and set the heavy oaken bars across the heavy planks. Then she ran into the house, locked and bolted the door leading into the cellar and—sat down to cry.

It was only as a relief to her overwrought excitement that the tears came, for Beatrice felt fairly triumphant. She had controlled her fright, she had caged the enemy. What an exploit to write to Netta about! What a grand thing to narrate to her husband! How the gallant cowboys would praise and make a veritable heroine of her! Beatrice was very proud of her first exploit in capturing "a wild savage denizen of the primeval forest."

Beatrice valiantly took down the house rifle from the antlers over the dining room clock and placed it on the table. Then she got the axe from the yard. Next she added the poker to this warlike equipment.

She listened for some demonstrations from below. The "frenzied growls," the "frightful leaps," she had read about as pertaining to bears, did not ensue as she had expected. She wondered if the infuriated animal had gone to sleep. She hoped he had not discovered the old cupboard in which she kept the butter and milk.

About an hour later Beatrice heard the tramp of horses and the sound of human voices along the trail. Six mounted men came into view. Their leader doffed his hat as he drove up to the doorway where Beatrice stood.

"We are looking for a stray bear," he began.

"Oh, yes!" announced Beatrice eagerly, "a great ferocious monster—"

"Not at all—a harmless toothless old animal escaped from the circus in Last Limit, but valuable as a trick bear, and $100 offered for its capture."

"Why, what is this?" inquired David Merrill, as he and his hearty crowd sat down to the smoking supper that evening, and he found a little heap of bank notes under his plate.

Then Beatrice told her story, with dancing eyes. And David swung her up in the air and kissed her at its termination, while the enthusiastic cowboys gave "Hurra!" with an admiring echo for their brave "little sister."

Doctor Said She Had Bright's Disease.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER.

Bright's disease is a term applied to one of the most serious of all diseases of the kidneys, the symptoms of which are often of a severe character.

Severe pains in the back appear at first and are followed by disturbances of the urinary organs which show that the urine contains a large amount of albumen. Dropsy is also another forerunner of the dreaded Bright's disease. On the first sign of any kidney trouble you should at once put the kidneys right by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. The pill that cures kidney troubles only.

Mrs. C. A. Heistand, Mooswa, Alta., writes: "Last May I was taken down sick. The doctor told me I had Bright's disease. My kidneys got so bad I could not rest day or night. The doctor's medicine did not give me any relief. I used four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they put me in good shape again."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pill, so when you ask for "Doan's" do not accept any others with similar names.

Price, 50c per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BROUGHT WEALTH TO PERU

Guano Beds, Consisting of Most Wonderful of Known Fertilizers, Sold for Immense Sum.

It is said that Humboldt added the greatest wealth to the reports of his discoveries when he called the serious attention of Europe to the guano beds of Peru.

Near midway of the equator and the tropic of capricorn on the Peruvian coast are the Chincha islands, whose guano deposits have been worth more in money than the copper, gold and silver of the world's best mines. For this great fertilizer $1,000,000,000 had been paid up to the time that exports were prohibited by Peru itself.

The islands are small, high and rocky, barren and uninviting to the last degree; yet it is said there is no other spot of equal size on the earth's surface from which so much wealth has been taken.

In some cases the deposits reached a depth of 160 to 180 feet and are calculated to be thousands of years old.

Nowhere else in the world are marine birds found in so great quantities as along this coast. Their presence in such immense numbers is due to the quantities of fish found there, upon which the birds feed. Cormorants, pelicans, seagulls and marine swallows, numbering hundreds of thousands, may be seen flying low to or from the islands.

But the birds alone could not have produced the Peruvian guano. It was necessary to have the rainless climate of these islands in order to accomplish the result.

"Rain so seldom falls that aged men can count on the fingers of one hand," says one commentator, "the times in their lives when they have seen this marvelous thing—water falling from the skies."

It is on this account that Peruvian guano in its natural state, never having been exposed to rain or dampness, has retained its nitrogen and is of such great value. Some guano contains all three elements of plant life—nitrates, phosphates and potash—and all of it contains two elements—phosphates and fixed nitrogen. It sells as high as $100 a ton.

The First Language.

No one of the existing languages has any legitimate claim to be considered the original of the family of languages, standing to the others as Latin, for instance, stands to Italian and French. Of an original primitive language of mankind the most patient research has found no trace. All of them—Assyrian, Phoenician, Hebrew, Arabic—are sister languages, pointing back to an earlier parent language, which has long disappeared. Since the historical period man has done little in the way of the absolute creation of language. The work had already been accomplished ages before the birth of written inscriptions.—New York American.

Synopsis of Ninety-first Crop Report

Area Devoted to Fodder Corn in the Province Increased by 22,000 Acres—Farmers Require 36,018 Men to Help With Farm Work

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY

WINNIPEG, Man., June 23.—The Manitoba Department of Agriculture has just issued its ninety-first crop bulletin, which will be read with keen interest throughout not only Manitoba but the entire country.

It is a thoroughly satisfactory report, but there are two features to which special attention is directed, namely: The farms need 36,018 men to help with farm work and harvesting, and the area of fodder corn in the province has been increased by over 22,000 acres.

A fairly full synopsis if the report follows:

Seeding and Crop Prospects.

Following an exceptionally fine winter, our spring opened earlier than usual. A few fields were in condition for drilling by the end of March, but wheat seeding was not general until the second week in April. From that rate rapid progress was made and the majority of farmers had finished sowing wheat by the end of April.

A few farmers risked sowing oats in April, but the greater portion of that grain was sown during the first two weeks of May; after which barley sowing became general. By the end of May practically all grain seeding was finished.

As the harvest of 1914 was an early one, and the autumn exceptionally favourable, an unusually large area of land had been fall ploughed and harrowed. This enabled the farmers to make rapid progress and also facilitated the preparation of a good seed bed.

During the mouth of May there were a few windy days when some of the lighter soils suffered from drifting, otherwise the weather was decidedly favourable during that month.

Severe frosts from the 6th to the 9th of June, cutting down fodder corn and tender garden vegetables in most parts of the province, but only slightly checking the grain crops.

The usual June rains have been abundant anod very generally distributed.

Our reports show that the area devoted to grasses and other fodder crops has again greatly increased; this is particularly true in the case of fodder corn, rye grass and brome. Both timothy and clover show a slightly reduced acreage.

Judging by the largely increased number of cattle and sheep, our farmers are more than ever realising that mixed farming is the only permanent system of agriculture for this or any other country.

The department is endeavouring to further the development of the sheep industry by co-operating with the farmers in the preparation and sale of their wool.

Proper Thing Now Is to Peel Off Soiled Skin

Those who abhor sticky, greasy, shiny, streaked complexions should religiously avoid creams, powders and rouges during the heated days. There's no need for them, anyway, since the virtues of mercolized wax have become known. No amount of perspiration will produce any evidence that you've been using the wax. As it is applied at bedtime and washed off in the morning, the complexion never looks like a make-up. Mercolized wax gradually takes off a bad complexion, instead of adding anything to make it worse. It has none of the disadvantages of cosmetics and accomplishes much more in keeping the complexion beautifully white, satiny and youthful. Just get an ounce of it at your druggist's and see what a few days treatment will do. Use like cold cream.

Another effective summer treatment—best tending to cause wrinkles and flabbiness—is a skin-tightener made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Its use (as a face bath) leaves no trace.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

NEW ONE-PIECE DESIGN.

By Anabel Worthington.

This one-piece corset cover is distinctly new. It goes on over the head and fastens with strap extensions on the front and back. The front straps button first in the back, and then the back straps are drawn forward and buttoned in the front. It is a very simple design and very easily made. The back fits perfectly plain, in the style of a brassiere, but the lower part of the front is gathered, the gathers obeyed underneath with a piece of the material.

Longcloth, damask, even crêpe de Chine, might be used, with as much or as little trimming as one cares to put on it. The design would be very pretty, with buttonhole edges and eyelets for the ribbon, with perhaps a spray or embroidered initial at the front. To make as illustrated you would need 1¼ yards of 36 inch material, with 3¼ yards of edging, 2¼ yards of beading and 2¼ yards of ribbon. The pattern, No. 7,170, can be obtained in six sizes, from 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Stoney Lake Swept By Violent Wind Storm

Resorts Getting Busy—More New Cottages

Stoney Lake was visited by another hurricane on Saturday. For the most part the wind prevailed from the south; though at times we were treated to a regular old "sou' wester." The wind began to rise during the night, and by eight o'clock the lakes were an angry mass of black and white. The "Empress" had difficulty making landings at some points, and to make matters worse, she was loaded down with freight and passengers. The storm continued throughout the day, and the indications of a quiet day on Sunday were not very promising. However, the cottagers were favoured with an ideal Sabbath.

Lumber for a new cottage was taken into Cassidy's Bay on Saturday, by the "Stoney Lake."

Mrs. Charles Munro of Wingham, who, with her family, is holidaying at "Upsidedown," landed a five-pound bass last Friday in Mackenzie's Bay.

Mr. E. Guillet and Mr. Levi Payne both residents of Horseshoe Island, celebrated the opening of fishing in true style by capturing two 'lunge each.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McCabe have arrived at the Victoria House, at McCracken's Landing. Mr. McCabe is a true disciple of the rod, and usually carries his luck with him, but this season the creatures of the deep must be taking him for a professor of natural history, for almost every known variety of living thing peculiar to water have attacked themselves to his bait. At the present time he is going strong on turtles (not doves).

Mr. W. G. Morrow spent Sunday at "Oakdene."

Stoney Lake seems to be a favourite happy-hunting-ground for those afflicted with that dread disease known as Honeymoonitis. The latest victims are Mr. and Mrs. Wright of Detroit, Mich., but, according to last reports, are doing nicely.

Miss Gertrude Chapole of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. Ivor Brock at "Shingleshanty."

Mr. Dawson Kennedy is the guest of Mr. Richard Winch at "Yarrow Brae."

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knapman, Miss Ruth and Master Jack opened up their cottage, "Forest Home," on Saturday.

Dr. Willoughby and family of Toronto have arrived at "Aird Cairn" for the season.

Misses Madaline and Ethel Morrison and Miss Hazel Eaton of Peterborough are the first arrivals for the season at "Happy-go-Lucky," Kawartha Park.

Wild strawberries are a plentiful crop this spring owing to the heavy rainfall.

WONDERFUL BILIOUS REMEDY ACTUALLY PREVENTS ATTACKS

There are two great causes of biliousness,—they are constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken, they not only correct constipated bowels, but act upon the liver as well.

Quite unlike ordinary medicines which purge and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the conditions which cause biliousness and thus permanent cures are effected. No person who occasionally uses Dr. Hamilton's Pills will ever suffer from the headache, bad stomach or bilious complaint. Get a 25c. box today.

No Salaries During War

LONDON, June 23.—The voluntary relinquishment of their salaries by members of the House of Commons for the period of the war, was suggested in the House by Sir Arthur B Markham, Liberal. Premier Asquith promised to consider the question although he said that he thought it was a matter for the House itself to decide.

Mr. Markham's plea was based on the "necessity of economy and retrenchment in all branches of the public service," but he said he was willing that members with private incomes less than 400 pounds ($2000) should continue to draw the emolument of 400 pounds, paid to members of the House.

MANY PETERBOROUGH PEOPLE AT THE ENNISMORE PICNIC

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick and His Congregation Met Their Friends in a Pleasant Affair at Tara Grove — Quiet and Enjoyable Time.

The Ennismore picnic was restored to its position in the calendar of summer events on Tuesday, after a lapse of several years. But time had not altered its character, dimmed its pleasures nor diminished the sociability of its assemblage.

In the crowd that sought Tara Grove and gathered in ever changing groups were many familiar faces and others, too, that appeared for the first time. They had come from the neighbouring countryside, from Lakefield and Lindsay, and even from Hastings and Norwood. As for Peterborough's representation it seemed that every other person one met was from the city. Motor cars were strung along both sides of the road a distance over one hundred yards, and others were "parked" in the Grove. Most of them were from Peterborough. So many citizens were present that every one of them felt at home, although some might not have been widely acquainted among Ennismore's folk. This large attendance was a manifest evidence of the popularity of Rev. Father M. F. Fitzpatrick of St. Martin's Church, who worked assiduously with his congregation for the success of the picnic. As several of the visitors expressed it, they were eager to promote a worthy cause, and such they recognized in the ministrations of the Pastor of St. Martin's parish. On his part, Father Fitzpatrick tried to extend his greetings to all his visitors, and to express to them his appreciation of their presence. He busied himself on every hand and earned the assurance that everyone had thoroughly enjoyed the outing.

While the afternoon was rather cool the rain clouds divided west of Tara Grove and J. Pluvius held himself welcomely aloof, distributing his favours far to the north and south.

List of Speeches.

While it is unnecessary to give a list of all the Peterborough visitors, mention should be made of the interlude of speeches which added an interesting feature to the afternoon's entertainment.

Rev. Peter McGuire of Downeyville was chairman, and his native wit sparkled in all his introductions. He remarked that while every mind was heavy with thoughts of the present crisis, a certain amount of pleasure was not out of place. He exchanged sallies of banter with G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., and R. J. Soden, and with other speakers who followed. Father McGuire remarked upon the pleasing fact of the presence of so many of Father Fitzpatrick's Protestant friends, and in his behalf expressed to all a deep appreciation of their attendance. He mentioned, as did many of the older people native to the Township, the illness of the Hon. J. R. Stratton, who had attended many of the picnics, and whom the people would hope to see restored to health.

Mr. Gillespie, Mr. Soden and Rev. Dean McColl spoke briefly and felicitously. R. R. Hall abridged in a short address a stirring reference to the events through which the Empire is passing and to the principles in the conflict. All must unite, he said, determined to do our part that the British Empire and British freedom may be maintained.

Mr. Jas. Kendry, V. J. McElderry, John R. Corkery and Harry Phelan expressed their good opinion of Father Fitzpatrick and his congregation, and their pleasure in being present.

Ald. Duffus spoke of the duty which everyone should feel in assisting in the success of every good cause. The picnic illustrated the union of all classes for such a purpose, and also for the pleasure of intermingling. In the same way the people of Canada had joined together and with the other parts of the Empire, in a great cause for the success of which every Canadian should stand together, shoulder to shoulder. The farming community had a great task in working for a maximum production. Ennismore homes were happy; they possessed every advantage that Canada had to offer. Ald. Duffus closed with particular reference to the duties presented to young men.

Chief Howard did not escape Rev. Father McGuire's wit. The Chief said it was his first attendance at the Ennismore picnic, but he hoped it would not be the last. He added a story or two that were well received.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien congratulated Ennismore people upon their picnic, their splendid Church and their school. In all these, he said, were evidences of the people's co-operation with their Pastor.

Mr. Robert Fair was warmly received as an Irishman among the Irish. He congratulated Father Fitzpatrick for his host of friends, and the people for their successful picnic, and added an Irish story in conclusion.

Other Incidents.

During the greater part of the afternoon the young people enjoyed "square dancing," the music for which was played by an archestra composed of Mr. and Mrs. John Flood, Mr. Cadagan, Leo. Conway, and J. K. Galvin. Mr. Will Conway was floor director.

Mr. P. J. Scollard was in charge of an ice cream booth, with Miss Josephine Brick and other assistants. Peter Galvin managed the other, with Miss Killen, Miss Mary Crough and Miss Bridget Cavanagh had charge of the sale of tickets for a large easy chair. A fish pond and other attractions were busy all afternoon.

A supper that included cold chicken in the meats, salads, and an abundance of other good things, was in itself, a testimonial to the efforts of the ladies of the parish who, in their own unassuming way, contributed the major share of the picnic's success.

A list of races proved quite an attraction. Among the entries were some of the Y.M.C.A. boys, who went up with Mr. Carson, physical director. The results will be published later.

Striking Your "Funny Bone"

When you bump your nose or chin you bump the flesh and bone and not a nerve, consequently you feel a sensation or pain just where the blow was struck. If you strike the point of your elbow it will be just the same, it's only when you strike that little hollow between the big central bone of the elbow and the little inside bone that the tickling, tingling sensation is felt. In the little hollow you strike one of the large trunk nerves that spring between the vertebra at the base of the neck and runs through the arm to the wrist. In the hollow of the elbow the nerve lies over a bone. When you strike that spot you feel a tingling sensation which isn't exactly funny, but because it tickles the bone is called the "funny bone."

A Message To Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this painful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point.

All good druggists have Sargol, or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervousness dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh builder.

Diamonds of the first water are absolutely pure—but when it comes to milk of the first water, well that's different.

Sarah Carter Is Identified

As Sarah Edwards Who Made Several Sensational Attempts to Escape With Her Soldier Lover

LINDSAY, June 23—Sarah Carter, who was arrested as a vagrant in Toronto on June 21st, according to allegations, is no one else than Sarah Edwards, who was a ward of the Children's Aid Society in Lindsay for over a year, and who was employed as a domestic in a Victoria avenue home. Many times she made several sensational attempts to escape with her soldier lover, Private Carter, and finally succeeded.

The last seen of her was one morning a few weeks ago, when with her lover she was seen making a march east on the G.T.R. towards Peterborough. It is supposed that the young couple were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony in that city, going from there to Toronto, where both were arrested and are now held awaiting trial.

HOW SOLDIERS LIVE AND FIGHT IN THE TRENCHES.

LONDON, June 23.—When it rains the trenches are half filled with water. The cold is always of the damp, penetrating, dreadful kind that chills to the very marrow. Hot food is served three times a day to the men in the trenches by other soldiers, who scurry like rabbits through long uncovered tunnels running back from the works concealing the guns.

These men in the trenches must have good food in order that they can have good blood, and if they have good blood, they have good courage, they keep warm because their circulation is good and their extremities are warm from exercise. Many men are invalided, however, because their blood and their stomach were not right to withstand the awful hardships of this winter campaign.

When you do not properly digest your food your blood becomes thin and every organ of the body soon feels the effect. The result is—headaches, sleeplessness, nervousness and many other symptoms—due to accumulation of poisons in the body. Unless the stomach is given aid at this stage—more serious illnesses follow. Now is the time to help your weakened stomach—now is the time to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (in tablet or liquid form). It has the same power to set you right as it has been proved to have in thousands of other cases. It will help your stomach so that the food you eat will nourish and sustain you and make good reviving blood. It will enable you to get rid of the waste a sluggish liver and irregular bowels have permitted to accumulate in your system.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is composed of known native healing remedial roots and herbs with no alcohol nor narcotic drugs to give you harmful habits. It can now be obtained in tablet or liquid form from dealers, or send 50 stamps for box of tablets.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada, at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ontario.

THE INVASION OF ALSACE CONTINUES

AUSTRIAN FORTRESS IS SURROUNDED

THE FRENCH CONTINUE THEIR VICTORIOUS ADVANCE INTO ALSACE PROVINCE

Have Occupied Sonderbach on the East Bank of River Fecht Two Miles South-east of Metzeral--Terrific Battles at Several Points Along the Western Battle Line---French Gain in Western Argonne.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 23.—(Official statement).—Continuing their advance into Alsace, the French troops have occupied Sonderach on the east bank of the River Fecht, two miles south-east of Metzeral.

Terrific battles are being waged at several points along the battle line, reaching from the sea coast to the Swiss frontier. In Western Argonne the French have rushed and captured another German trench. Near Lintrey the Germans hurled thousands of shells in a vain attempt to recover the lost positions. In the Vosges around La Fontainellas, the Germans have launched a violent offensive by hurling superior forces against the French positions. The Germans temporarily occupied 200 yards of French trenches, but a quick counter-attack drove the enemy out of most of the new ground. North of Arras the most desperate fighting of the past twelve hours has occurred east of the "labyrinth." The Germans made an onslaught on the "labyrinth" with hand grenades and artillery, but were driven off.

FORTRESS IS SURROUNDED.

ROME, June 23.—The Austrian fortress of Malborget is now practically surrounded. The Italian Alpinists have captured nearly all the positions around the town, which is undergoing a terrific bombardment. North of Goritz, an Italian machine gun squadron crept through the woods and inflicted heavy losses on an advancing column of thirty thousand Austrians.

STEAMER TORPEDOED.

LONDON, June 23.—The British steamer Belgrave was torpedoed off the coast of Pembrokeshire, and it is believed the crew is lost. The ship was towed into Broadhaven to-day, bottom up.

VIENNA, June 23.—Though no details of the victory at Lemberg have been received here, it is not believed the Austria-German booty will be large. Reports to headquarters indicated that the enemy withdrew heavy guns and ammunition supplies several days ago, and the movement of the main body of the Russian troops over the railway to Brody began early in the week.

In the final charge at the western gates of Lemberg it is probable that a small body of Russian defenders were either annihilated or captured as was the case at Przemysl.

The moral effect of the re-capture of the city overshadows the military victory. The capital of the great Austrian province had been reclaimed from the enemy. The Russian grip upon Galicia has been loosened, if not entirely shaken, and the people of Austria have been raised to a high pitch of enthusiasm over the Austro-German success.

Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, was occupied by the Russians on September 2, 1914, about one month after the outbreak of hostilities, in the course of the early Russian drive into Austria. It has therefore been in Russian control for over ten months.

BERLIN, Via Amsterdam, June 23.—The Balkan situation is causing grave concern in official circles here. The German Minister of Bulgaria, Dr. Mechahelles, will arrive to-morrow for a conference with the Foreign Secretary, Von Jagow. It was considered significant that the Government should make the announcement to-day that "he will return." The affairs in the Balkans at present completely overshadows the German-American situation. It is everywhere accepted that an amicable understanding will be reached between Berlin and Washington. The Allies are known to have made a new offer to Bulgaria within the past few days to secure Bulgarian intervention. Bulgaria is believed to have presented the substance of this offer to the German Minister, who is en route from Sofia to learn what Germany and Austria will offer as a counter-proposal.

BERLIN, June 23.—(Via Wireless).—Sixty thousand Russian troops and nine cannon were captured in the Austro-German drive on Lemberg, according to a semi-official statement given here to-day. These figures cover the fighting for Lemberg since June 12.

DEPENDS ON MUNITIONS.

LONDON, June 23.—Minister of Munitions Lloyd George, in introducing the Government's munitions proposals in the Commons this afternoon, announced that arragements had been made to establish employment bureaus to hire skilled workers for ammunition factories. Trades unions will co-operate.

"Ultimate victory for the Allies depends solely on the supply of war munitions," said Lloyd George. "Great Britain undoubtedly has a superiority over Germany, both in number of men and their quality. If England is in earnest she can alone produce more ammunition than Germany and Austria combined."

OTTAWA, June 23.—The Canadian casualties are 9,265 — killed 1,473, wounded 5,908, missing 1,884.

NEW BOARD TO INVESTIGATE SECOND CHARGE

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, Man., June 23.—When the Royal Commission opened this morning the chairman said he had been told by Hon. A. B. Hudson that he—the chief justice himself—was likely to be called as witness on the Fullerton charges. In view of this fact it would be improper for the present commission to go into the matter. The Commission, he said, would recommend to the Government that a new board be appointed to go into the second charge.

HOW CANADIAN GAINED THE V.C.

Capt. Scrimger, of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, Rescued Wounded Officer Under Terrible Shell Fire — Col.-Sergt. Hall Killed While Trying to Aid Wounded.

CORP. FISHER'S DEED

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, June 23.—Victoria Crosses have been awarded three members of the Canadian contingent, Capt. F. A. C. Scrimger, Canadian Army Medical Corps, Col. Sergt. F. W. Hall, 5th Battalion, and Fred Fisher, Toronto, 13th Battalion.

Captain Scrimger was in charge of a dressing station for wounded that was being heavily shelled. He directed the removal of the wounded with great coolness and personally carried to a stable a badly wounded officer. He attempted to reach a safer place, but finding this impossible, remained with the officer, facing a terrible shell fire for several hours until assistance came.

Colour Sergeant Hall made two attempts to aid a wounded man near Ypres on April 24 though under heavy fire. He dragged a British soldier to within fifteen yards of the British trenches on the first attempt and called for help. He stooped to lift the wounded man and was shot in the head and mortally wounded.

Corporal Fisher was killed in action near St. Julien on April 23 while attempting to bring a gun into action. Previously he had advanced a machine gun into action under heavy fire and had assisted in covering the retreat of a British battery. Four of his men were killed, but he received reinforcements and was again advancing when killed.

GETTING READY FOR STREET PAVING

Surface Drainage Work is Under Way—Will Take Some Time

The city has commenced the construction of surface drains on streets that are to be paved this summer. This will occasion some delay to the paving contractors, who will not get under way until sufficient streets have been put in shape for the asphalt. Some few days must elapse after the surface drains are in, so as to give the filling a chance to subside to its original position. When this part of the work is completed, the paving contractors will commence paving operations.

Meeting of the City Council

Ratepayers Will Have Another Opportunity of Seeing the Civic Legislators in Action

As anticipated another special meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. The proposed construction of three or four blocks of concrete pavement will be the vehicle for what may prove to be an all night session. Each one of the aldermen will want to be "heard." The extent of the discussion will depend upon the oratorical proclivities of the aldermen. There is more than one member of the City Council who is prepared to stake his reputation on a piece of concrete pavement which it is proposed to lay as an experiment. After two Council meetings held within the past week, the difficulty has resolved itself into a question of whether three or four blocks shall be laid, and on what street. This the civic legislators will attempt to solve to-night. One side is prepared to vote on three blocks of concrete, and the other side insist on four blocks being laid. This is in marked contract to a previous meeting when the Council endorsed a proposal to construct thirty thousand yards of asphaltic pavement following a discussion lasting two hours.

WOUNDED OFFICERS ARE APPOINTED TO HIGHER COMMANDS

Capt. Dansereau to Command New French Regiment and Other Canadian Officers Injured in Action are Promoted

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

OTTAWA, June 23.—Announcement was made to-night by Major-General Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, of the appointment of several commanding officers for some of the new regiments, the formation of which was outlined by General Hughes in Montreal some weeks ago. Capt. J. A. Dansereau, Montreal, recently returned from the front, where he was wounded in the head and shoulder, while acting as adjutant of the 15th Battalion, will be promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel to command the new French-Canadian Regiment. Capt. W. A. Loury, of Calgary, of the 10th Battalion, who arrived in Canada some days ago from France, where he was severely wounded in the body and leg, will command one of the new Western battalions. Major Naismith, of Calgary, also home on sick leave, will also be given command of a Western regiment. Major Kirkcaldy of the 8th Battalion, recently wounded in France, will command the new regiment to be formed in Manitoba, while Major McKinery of the Princess Patricias, also a wounded officer, will be given the command, and the recruiting of the new Edmonton Regiment. Major Ross of Victoria, B.C., of the 16th Battalion, and wounded in the arm in France, will command the new Western Highland Regiment.

General Hughes has also adopted the policy of having [illegible] regiments commanded by [illegible] who have served in France [illegible] be able to lead the [illegible] to the most modern methods in warfare.

He will recognize the services of all officers who, though wounded, will be able to return to the front, and thus give the new officers serving under them the benefit of their experiences.

Capt. Dansereau's promotion will be most popular in the Province of Quebec and Montreal especially, where his father is honorably known in journalism. When Gen. Hughes informed Capt. Dansereau of his promotion to-day at Valcartier the young officer paid a high tribute to his former commanding officer, Col. John Currie, M.P., for whom he acted as adjutant after the death of Capt. Darling.

Capt. Dansereau stated that Col. Currie was one of the bravest men on the battlefield of St. Julien, and that his care and affection for his men were remarkable. Col. Currie had on the field of battle many narrow escapes, but he kept with his [illegible] as [illegible].

The new [illegible] officers will commence work immediately throughout the country.

A CHALLENGE TO THE NATIVE-BORN

Machinery to Keep Pace With the Offers of Service Has Been Provided—Now It's a Question of the Response Being Equal to the Demand, Says Solicitor-General.

CANADA'S TEST NOW

ORILLIA, June 22.—In the course of an impressive address here this evening before the Orillia Canadian Club, the Hon. Arthur Meighen, Solicitor General, said:

"Up to the present the problem has been for the government to create machinery to keep pace with the offers of service; but the machinery has been provided; and now it is a question of the response being equal to the demand. The call has gone out for 35,0000 more men. It is a challenge to the native born. In a month we shall know what the response has been and how Canada has met the test. I am not an alarmist and I do not know of any occasion on which people with British blood in their veins have been frightened by words, but I believe that it may come to this—that every physically fit Canadian will have to join in the fight for the existence of the British Empire, and the continuance of civilization."

The minister did not despair of universal peace. He believed it would be brought about by the development of a deeper interest in foreign politics and of more respect for the rights of little nations.

Butcher Charged With Violation of the Health Act

Allowed His Pigs to Drink Blood of Beef Before it Was Sterilized and is Fined $20

A local butcher was this morning fined $20.00 in Police Court for feeding uncooked blood to his pigs. The information was laid by Sanitary Inspector Spence, who visited the slaughter house of the defendant while a beef was being dressed. He found the pigs drinking from the trough into which some of the blood had been washed.

If the blood is to be fed it must be steamed or boiled, according to the reading of the health act. The defendant claimed that he caught the blood in a pail and put it in a pot, and what the Sanitary Inspector saw was the wash from the floor.

THE PETERBORO' ARTILLERYMEN NEED COMFORTS

Lieut. Peter Campbell in a Letter to the Examiner Tells of Meeting Some of the Well Known Boys From This City at the Front

WHO WILL HELP?

In a letter to a member of The Examiner Staff, Lieut. Gordon (Pete) Campbell, son of Mr. Peter Campbell, of the Bank of Montreal, who is machine gun officer of the 48th Highlanders, at the front, tells of meeting some of the Peterborough artillery men there. He says:

"I was walking down the canal this morning about 4 o'clock with four other officers of the 48th to check over the trenches and the position of the coming attack, when I saw a lot of artillery fellows in swimming. "Hello Pete," about four fellows, and first thing you know I am shaking hands with Ned Simmons, Morty McGill, Earl Downie and somebody else. I knew well but couldn't place, which annoyed me as I sort of fancy myself remembering fellows. Meeting those boys out, put the idea of writing you in my mind, as it isn't a bed of roses here, especially for the Tommie who, however never kicks or grouches. Those real Peterborough fellows, born and bred there looked powerful good to me. I asked Major Ralston and Lieut. Storms, the latter the 'Varsity Rugby player, who are officers of their battery, about them, and they cannot speak too highly of them. Storms, in a very impressive tone, allowed they sure had plenty of grit, and all spoke well of poor Happy O'Toole. The officers are all well looked after in every way, but some of those fellows are not. The best way to send things is right to the man himself. I would suggest that your paper try to get some of those fellows cigarettes, sox, knitted mufflers and mitts (the nights are cold). All the other clothing is well supplied.

Pete (Lieut. Vivian) Fessenden, with Major Osborne, were overcome by gas and woke up in Saxony. It is a cinch they never surrendered. Pete in my estimation was the best subaltern in the battalion, and a real soldier. Harold Matthews was gassed, but is back on the job. Harold said he was rather glad to get back. He allows there is a sort of fascination to the whole show.

There is the situation as shown by Lieut. Campbell's letter. Peterborough's artillerymen have been apparently neglected. The message is for the people of Peterborough. Will they act upon it and see that the Peterborough boys in the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, are remembered.

Anticipated Period in Reserve Trenches is at Last a Fact and Canadian Officers are Being Given a Week's Furlough in England.

THE SECOND DIVISION

Special to The Examiner and The Toronto Daily News by W. A. Willison

LONDON, June 23.—The re-organization of the first Canadian division is now in progress and the anticipated period in the reserve trenches is at last a fact. After enduring terrific fighting at Ypres and Festubert, in which many battalions suffered heavy losses in officers and men, the regiments are now having an opportunity to train reserves and bring their detachments up to fighting strength.

The hope of the officers that they might get a few days' holidays is at last being realized. Gens. Clarke Kennedy and Lieut. Jolliffe, both of the Thirteenth Battalion, arrived in London to-day. They are the first officers to secure leave since the division went to the front some months ago. They have been granted seven days. I understand the same policy will be followed for other battalions until the officers who have been fighting since the division left England last February, all have had furlough.

LOST HEAVILY.

There can be no question that after the battle of St. Julien the Canadian division was in great need of a protected period for purposes of reorganization. Men in the ranks were properly given commissions and green drafts received some measure of training before the [illegible], but in that engagement the third brigade again lost heavily, while in the recent fighting the first brigade was badly cut up and the second also suffered as a result of this heavy fighting. While the division is not by any means disorganized, it is in need of some period of easier work, to give an opportunity of bringing the battalions up to full [illegible] new drafts and instructing new officers. Every effort is being made to keep the division properly reinforced. Some indication of the fierce character of the recent fighting is contained in a letter from one officer of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. He declares in the struggle during the middle of last week that one battalion of the first brigade lost a score of officers in half an hour. This report is not official, but the heavy casualties in the first battalion give probability to the officer's story.

The Second Division.

Brigade manoeuvres have not yet started for the second division. The officers of the fourth brigade are still away taking special courses. Officers of the 19th Battalion whom I have seen say these are not likely to start until next week, as the majority of officers are still engaged in special courses at Scarborough, Camberley and other military centres.

Officers and men, while anxious to go to France, are quite alive to the desperate nature of the work awaiting them, and are fully seized of the importance of having adequate training before their departure.

Appointed Manager

Mr. W. H. Lacey, B.O., the eyesight specialist, who has been temporarily managing the business of the Tait Optical Co. in this city for the past four months, during the absence of Mr. Tait, following on the demise of his father, has now been definitely appointed manager of this establishment. Mr. Lacey has had wide experience in the optical business, being a graduate of the Northern Illinois College of Ophthalmology, Chicago, and the Northampton Institute. He was for some years with Fitzy & Son, London, England, Optician to [illegible] Majesties the King and Queen. Mr. Tait's patients will find the same courtesy and willingness to oblige as they experienced heretofore. Any persons suffering from eye trouble should consult our specialist. Advertisement.

THE SILVER BULLET.

In this material age when money counts for so much, and its acquirement enlists all our energies, we will naturally be proud of the Mother Country. We are proud of our rich relations, or proud of being on speaking terms with a millionaire. We can be proud of Britain as our rich relation; probably, in the matter of liquid assets, the richest nation in the world. Parliament has authorized a loan of 5,000 million dollars to be subscribed by the people of Great Britain; and there is little doubt that the amount will easily be raised, with the rate at 4½ per cent. and the income of the British people 10,000 million dollars per year. There seems to be no lack of Lloyd George's silver bullets, whatever may be the shortage in other forms of ammunition.

TWO SPIRITS.

General De Wet, the former Boer leader, who was proven guilty of treason by revolting against British rule, in South Africa, escaped with an easy penalty—a fine of $10,000 and imprisonment for six years—an easy punishment because the death penalty could, according to law, have been as justifiably imposed. But that's the big blundering, generous way of the British spirit—which to the Huns of Germany is weakness. It is the same spirit that made the mass of Boers in South Africa, loyal citizens of the Empire. If De Wet had been responsible to Germany; if he had committed similar treason against Germany, he would have long ago been a mass of rotting clay—he would very probably have been shot without a trial. Here we see again exemplified the cardinal difference between the British spirit and the German spirit.

IRRELEVANT WRATH.

The Toronto News demands that the "charges" against Hon. Robert Rogers should be "put into plain language, or that his assailants should be treated as "slanderers." Mr. Rogers' claim to distinction as a minister is that he "knows how to win elections," unexplained or glossed, is something to think about. How would that do for "a charge" to begin with? A man's reputation in a community is not a result of "charges" being "put into plain language and established." The News "will attempt no defence of corruption." Will it help to expose corruption? Will it, as one might expect it could do, from the confidences it enjoys, explain the burning of telegrams relating to the Manitoba Parliament Buildings matter, in which the name of Hon. Robert Rogers, Mr. Roblin and Dr. Montague appeared? When suppression of evidence is resorted to, can we expect good results from an investigation "to the bottom," which the News demands? We know a lot of things that may not be easily supported by evidence, especially if the evidence is shovelled into the incinerator, with other damaging things associated with corruption.

SHALL WE CELEBRATE?

Shall we celebrate, in some definite public manner, our national birthday, July 1st? At first blush this year would seem to be an unbecoming year for popular jubilation of any kind. It may be in most things, but not for the forty-eighth anniversary of Canada's natal day. Never in any year since Canada became a dominion, has there been so much cause for rejoicing over what Confederation has brought us. We have mightily progressed in material things. But this year above all Canada has come to her own. She has taken a new place in the sisterhood of the Empire. We have splendidly responded to the call to help the Mother Country, and the world of civilization in the fight for the fruits of civilization; and not only that, but we have won martial glory. Our soldiers have, in the fiery test of battle, in the baptism of fire, shown themselves worthy of the best. Canada has won praise from the King to the rawest Tommy Atkins. Her soldiers en masse and individually, have won distinction and deserved it. We are proud of their work; and in no way besides, have we failed to measure up manfully to the demands and expectations, which our place as the first of the Dominions created. We have good warrant, for celebrating Dominion Day this year—gloriously as well as gratefully.

SELF-EVIDENT.

The Germans are hopeful, and persevering; they still seem to think, that they can make the world believe that Great Britain, not Germany, brought on the present awful war. Only a few days ago General Von Bernhardi, the apologist and mouthpiece of the German militarists, in an article in the New York Sun, tried to show that the war was due to the militarism of France, and the navalism of Great Britain. In this, of course, he lies, and he knows he lies. In a book written in the spring of 1911, Bernhardi, himself, declared that Germany had two great objects in view—the humiliation of France and world domination. In proof that he did not lie then, is the fact that Germany had armed herself to the teeth, was in the highest possible state of military preparation for bringing on the war which she actually did bring on. She thought "the day" had come, and she struck. A proof that Britain is not responsible for the present war is the fact, of her absolute military unpreparedness. If she had had intention of aggressive warfare, she didn't show it in word or action. As Lloyd George said at Manchester, the proof that Britain did not want war is that Britain did not prepare for war. The question is not worth arguing, the truth is too self-evident.

FUSSY IMPERIALISM.

The journal of the Royal Colonial Institute, "United Empire," is greatly wrought up over the proposal for a conference of Dominion and Imperial ministers to arrange for the participation of the former in the settlement of terms of peace when war ceases. This recognition of the importance of the Dominions in Imperial politics is as flattering as it is unnecessary. The relations of the Dominions to the Empire are so fixed by common consent, as to remove any fear that their counsel and influence in the settlement of peace will not be welcomed as warmly as have their contributions to waging war. The present relations in question, have come about without any definite pact; they were not created; they grew like all our constitutional relations; we are bound to the Mother Country by no hard and fast lines; the bond of affection and mutual interest is stronger than any law-made strand could be. The British Empire is an evolution, not a creation, by the definite ipse dixit of any authority; and it is the same spirit that has fixed, or fixes, from time to time, the relations of the Dominions to the central authority. We have grown closer to the Mother Country by almost imperceptible gradations. The trust between the Mother Country and the Dominions is reciprocal. We, the Dominions, were trusted to do our duty to the common imperial interest; and we have done it without hint, invitation or compulsion. When the day of peace settlement arrives, the Dominions will step into the counsels of the powers as automatically and necessarily as the Mother Country itself. There seems to be no necessity for an Imperial Council to arrange or deal with a res gesta. The place of the Dominions is assured, and there need be no fear that it will be overlooked when the time comes. The Dominion premiers as well as the home government are busy enough with devising and arranging means to bring peace as speedily as possible, without diverting their attention to a problem, which, if let wisely alone, will solve itself. This is the wrong time to be fussing over trifles—over matters of form. The spirit is right, and the outcome will be right, without unnecessary distraction from the pressing duties of the moment.

LABOUR NOT TO BE CAUGHT.

W. J. Bryan addressed a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall, New York City, on Saturday evening last, in an effort to get the Labour men to endorse his peace propaganda. One of the leading Labourites invited to the platform was Mr. Samuel Gompers, who did not accept, but sent instead a letter which read in part as follows:

> I have no hesitancy in saying to you that in my judgment there are some things that are even more abhorrent than war; that is, to be robbed of the birthright of freedom, justice, safety and character.
>
> Against any attempt of any person or group of persons or nation or nations who may be engaged in an effort to undermine or destroy these fundamentals of normal, human existence and development I would not only fight to defeat it, but prevail upon every red-blooded, liberty and humanity-loving man to resist to the last degree.

Gompers knows that organized labour would not be in the powerful position it is to-day if it had adopted a peace-at-any price policy, or if it had failed to put up a stiff fight when it believed its freedom to be jeopardized. Hence the opposition of Mr. Gompers and other Labour leaders in Great Britain and the United States to compulsory arbitration, whether the proposal comes from Capital or from pacifists like Mr. Bryan.—Brantford Expositor.

How Greed For the Bawbees Got Scotch Firm Into Trouble

The news that two directors of the firm of William Jacks and Co., of Glasgow, have been sentenced to pay a fine of $10,000 each, and to be imprisoned for six months—a sentence which the cablegrams tell us is regarded by many as too light—shows that their case has taken a more serious form than it seemed to have when it was first mentioned. Canada is interested in the matter, inasmuch as the firm have large transactions with this country, and the goods which were supplied to the enemy were a cargo of iron ore shipped by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company from their mines at Bell Island, Newfoundland. Jacks and Co. are agents for the company, and through them quite a business was done in the shipping of iron ore to Germany. The breaking out of war, of course, put an end to the business. There were, however, at that time, three cargoes of ore on their way across the sea. Two of these cargoes were intercepted and diverted to British ports. It was claimed that similar efforts were made as respects the Norwegian ship which carried the other cargo, but the captain, whether intentionally or through misunderstanding, is not at this moment apparent, went to Rotterdam, where the cargo of ore fell into the possession of German agents, and in due course found its way to the furnaces of the Krupp steel works. It is evident that the court which heard the case was not satisfied that Jacks and Co. had done all that they should have done to prevent the cargo falling into German hands.

The cargo is one of much interest because of its unusual character, and also because of the prominence of the firm concerned. William Jacks and Co. are the successor of the old Kidston firm which in the last century had extensive business relations with British North America. Mr. William Jacks, who died some years ago, and whose name the firm had retained, was a relative of Sir Gilbert Parker and a prominent member of the British House of Commons. He was one of the Liberals who broke away from his party on the Home Rule question, but later he returned to the fold and became again a follower of Gladstone. Mr. A. Bonar Law, the Canadian born M.P., who, on the retirement of Mr. Arthur Balfour, became leader of the Conservative party, and is now Colonial Secretary in the Coalition Cabinet, was a member of the firm of William Jacks and Co. until his political activities required him to retire from business. The firm has been one of high standing, and the many people in this country who have had relations with it will learn with surprise of the trouble into which it has fallen in this case.—Journal of Commerce.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TWO CLOSE BATTLES EXPECTED IN CITY LEAGUE ON SATURDAY

Saturday's games in the City Ball League should be unusually interesting. The first game will see the Classics and East City teams hooked up. The Classics seem to be the jinx team for Dan McCabe's outfit, having beaten the East Citys twice. Kinn, Swanson and Co. say they will change the situation Saturday. In the second game the strengthened Empires will clash with the Thistles. The latter are hot after East Citys and need Saturday's game badly, but judging by the fight the Empires gave the East Citys Saturday, Louis Weotas' team will have their work cut out for them.

"SCOTTY" DAVIDSON IS REPORTED KILLED

KINGSTON, June 22.—Three Canadian soldiers—one of whom was the famous "Scotty" Davidson, of Portsmouth, yesterday reported killed—held a whole trench successfully against the Germans in recent fighting in which the Canadians took part "somewhere in France," for which gallant action it is reported at the front that "Scotty" has been recommended for the Distinguished Conduct Medal by the officer commanding the brigade.

This information was given in a letter to Mr. James Metcalfe, of this city, from one of his sons who is at the front with the first Canadian division.

Hockey Star.

His many friends in the city, as well as the Frontenac O.H.A. Hockey Club, of which he was one of the members, will hear with pleasure of the manner in which he conducted himself, and, judging from his past performances in sport circles, it is just what one would expect. "Scotty" made his mark at hockey and is known from one coast to the other as one of the best players in the game. He first showed in the limelight on the Frontenacs several years ago, when they won the championship two years in succession. Then he went west, where he helped bring the championship to Calgary in 1912. He played at different places in the west and around the coast and then came to Toronto, where he joined the Toronto professional team, with which team he was when he enlisted.

When at Salisbury Plains he was selected as a scout and acted in this capacity for some time, during his early days in France. Later he was picked out as a bomb-thrower, which work he has been doing for some

French Hospital in Champagne Country a Haven For the Maimed

An interesting glimpse into the French military hospital at Epernay, is afforded by Robert de Leneau, in the Figaro.

"The hospital is admirable," he says. "The wards are clean and spacious, the buildings are surrounded by a fine park where convalescents are strolling about.

"All the patients praise the hard work of the sisters, the vigilance of the military surgeons, and the paternal care of Dr. Veron of Epernap, who spends the entire time there. I met him hurrying to perform an operation.

"'You must excuse me,' he said, 'I have a great amount of work to do this morning. I think I can save this poor chap—it makes me happy.'

"The wards open upon the garden. Through the windows one hears the roar of the cannon. From afar off one can follow the battle raging beyond Rheims, fifteen kilometres away. It is what interests the men. They talk of nothing else; their sufferings are forgotten. They express their regret at not being out there in the trenches under the shells.

"Under the beautiful trees are two smaller buildings. One is for the tetanus cases, nearly all German, who seem to be more affected by tetanus than are our men. The other is the mortuary chapel.

"Of the two main buildings one ward is for women, some of whom have been the victims of the Germans. One of these poor creatures told me the story of her marytrdom, Mrs. L'Heureux-Lacomte, of Le Bakil, a village south east of Epernay. During the Prussian occupation a soldier attacked her daughter, and shot her when she tried to rescue her daughter.

"'He did not look any more vicious than any of the others,' she sobs. 'That very evening he had been telling me about his wife and children. It does not seem possible'——and she breaks down. Poor martyr, by this time she has probably ceased to sob.

"Compared to such horrors the misery of the soldiers seems nothing. They are taken care of by the men of the hospital corps and they talk with affection of the nurses, who never leave their posts. But they have one favourite, Sister Barbara. From the instant that we set foot in the hospital we heard nothing but the praises of Sister Barbara. Everyone in Epernay is proud of her, everyone but herself who accomplishes her daily work piously, simply, gaily.

"'An admirable woman,' said one of the residents. 'She has laboured here for twenty years, and has never had a day's rest. One can count by the thousand the poor creatures whom she has helped to live and to die. She has words for all, of consolation, of edification, of cheer. And she is not afraid to spead her mind, either.'

"I saw Sister Barbara, saw her as she went actively from one patient to another, encouraging one soldier, coaxing another. From the beginning of the war she has been doing this. She has spent many hours taking care of the German wounded. She trounces them roundly with her tongue.

"'Oh, the bandits! The bad men,' she says, but she sat up three whole nights with a little Bavarian lieutenant, and she did other deeds of extraordinary self sacrifice for other German patients, so that one cannot judge of her kindness exclusively by what she tells herself."

BIRTHDAY OF THE PRINCE OF WALES TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 23.—Edward, Prince of Wales, attained his majority today. The young heir to the British throne remained in Flanders, where he has seen service for six months, but all London celebrated his 21st birthday. At the young prince's express request, the customary public demonstration and messages of congratulations were withheld until after the war.

London's celebration took form in the annual observance of Alexandra day. The city was decorated with artificial pink roses, the queen mother's favourite flower. Hundreds of white clad society women and girls thronged the streets and hotels, selling roses for the benefit of charities. Last year 80,000 pounds sterling was realized from sales, and this year the sum expected is a hundred thousand pounds.

The queen mother rode through the streets and was showered with roses.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

Victor, Sergt. Peter, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, Hampstead Military Hospital, London N. W., England, (wounded).

King, Gunner Harry (346 Downie street) Canadian Field Artillery, 1st Canadian Division, Oaklaw Manor Hospital, Shrewsbury, London, Eng. (wounded.)

Mullin, Pte. Chas., 5th Battalion, 1st Canadian contingent, St. Vincens Hospital, Paderborn, Germany. (Prisoner of war and wounded.)

Pte. H. Caillaird, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, London Military Hospital, Lower Clapton, N. W., Eng., wounded.

Sergt. A. F. Field, Prisoner of War, 2nd Battalion, Canadians, Hospital des Soeurs Evangeliques, Oberhausen, Rhineland, Germany; prisoner of war, and wounded.

Mongour, Pte. Chas., 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, 1st Southern General Hospital, Edgbaston, Birmingham, Eng.

Fallen, Pte. Gordon J., 14th Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, 2nd Southern General Hospital, New Southmead Infirmary, Bristol, Eng.

LAWN BOWLING

Some of the new bowlers are making wonderful progress. Some of the older bowlers will have to play with great care and precision if they wish to maintain their lea.

In addition to the schedule games, three hard fought games were played last evening during which the new members held up their ends in great style.

The Club has received an invitation from Millbrook to send down two or three rinks to-morrow. A number of the members are going down to battle for the honours.

An invitation has also been received from Oshawa, asking Peterborough to send as many rinks as possible on the 30th inst. on the occasion of their annual tournament.

The schedule games are being played this week; the results will be given later.

The games for the Fitzgerald prize are finished. The winners turned out to be the R. M. Waddell rink.

Games are very close and entered into with a good deal of rivalry, being anyone's game till the last end. The greens were in excellent shape, making bowling a real pleasure. Scores follow:

40,000 BUSHELS OF IRISH "GRAPES"

Will Be Produced by the School Children of Ontario

Ontario's rural school kiddies will produce this season over 40,000 bushels of Ontario's finest potatoes. These will be sold under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture direct to the purchasing consumers, and the entire proceeds will be devoted to the Red Cross work.

Such, it was announced at the Parliament buildings, yesterday, has been the result of the competitive garden plot idea inaugurated by the department. It has also been decided to present to the girl or boy in each county who produces the largest amount of potatoes in weight a silver medal. The children are participating in some forty counties, and the competitors number 12,000. The competition provides for one-eighth of an acre lots.

The potato seed, which was the finest obtainable from the Agricultural College, was given free by the department, and the potatoes grown are to be exhibited at the various local fairs held in the respective counties.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, June 23.—Live stock receipts fair, market dragging. Prices: Extra choice steers, $9.25 to $9.50; sprin glambs, $10 to $11.50; hogs, off cars, $9.35 to $9.40, f.o.b. $9.25, f.o.b. $8.86.

ATTRACTIVE FEATURE AT THE BIG SHOW

A Good Night's Amusement at a Small Cost at the Exhibition Grounds

The Summer Carnival, held on the Exhibition Grounds, was last night at the zenith of its glory. Everything was in ship shape, and in "apple-pie" order.

The fun went fast and furious, notwithstanding the evening was cool, especially so for a midsummer night.

Some very clever work with motorcycles was shown at the bowl of death—the motor drome—where the skilled and intrepid riders flirted with death. The machines were ridden at a terrific rate of speed on the inside of a huge bowl, the sides of which were nearly perpendicular.

In the Thelma Cabbaret Mr. Johnson, the "handcuff king," released himself from a pair of handcuffs pronounced by no less an authority than Mr. Sam Newhall, to be securely fastened. While handcuffed he was placed inside a large packing case the lid of which was firmly nailed. The case was subsequently corded with many fathoms of rope, yet notwithstanding all these difficulties, in a few seconds Mr. Johnson was to be seen outside the case—a free man!

Then there was the Palmistry and Telepathic Palace, where your fortune, your disposition, and all the rest of it are to be learned.

The Circus Show contained many wonders. For instance, the Octopus or Devil Fish, Electrices, the lady who tames electricity, the Cigarette Fiend, Queenie, the smallest colt in the world, weighing only 53 pounds, the living skeleton and the human fish, with many other curiosities all included in the price of admission.

Then, there were the "merry go rounds," or galloping horses, so beloved by the children, and for the matter of that, by their elders.

The fine orchestra attached gave out bright and popular airs. This together with the band and the Highland pipers provided plenty of music.

There were other side shows, the Pony, Dog and Monkey Circus, and many attractions in the way of games. There is "Willy, the War Lord," waiting to have his teeth knocked out, which will assuredly happen in due course.

To-night in the Thelma Cabaret the sum of fifty dollars will be given to any person who can nail, lock or tie up Mr. Johnson in his packing case so as to prevent his escape in 50 seconds.

This show has the merit of being all-Canadian and the owners have certainly brought together a host of attractions.

GOLF

Those players for the Stratton Trophy who have not yet handed in their cards, are reminded that they only have until the 26th of June, inclusive, to play the first round. After that date the draw for the second round will be made.

All cards must be handed in to Mrs. Read.

Russians Treating Prisoners With Kindness and Courtesy

A correspondent of the Prager Tageblatt in an article fof that newspaper, writes of the respect and courtesy shown to an old German, a veteran of the wars of 1866 and 1870. Jacob Linger, seventy-five years old, fell into the hands of the Russians, when they were making their advance in Eastt Prussia in August, 1914.

Shortly after his capture he was given his horse and cart to convey the wounded soldiers from the front to the hospitals. Linker had done his work faithfully, and was highly respected by his comrades, many of whom were Russians, and the superior officers. When he had been in the service for several months he became ill and was taken to one of the Russian hospitals. There he became acquainted with the wounded soldiers that had been brought from the battlefield, and when the Tsar inspected the men Linker had an opportunity to talk to the Emperor of All the Russias.

When questioned, he told of his life and mentioned that he had been in the Polish revolution of 1863. The Tsar patted the old veteran on the shoulder. Seeing the possibility of a pardon, Linker asked if he could return to his home and take the waggon with him. The request was granted, and after being photographed with the royal family, he left with a special escort. Upon his arrival he found his family was well treated by the Russian soldiers that were quartering in the village.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The first band concert of the season was given in King Edward park last evening. Despite the inclemency of the weather, a fairly large crowd turned out.

Council Meeting.

The Council will meet this evening to settle the possible a difference that has arisen over one block of concrete paving. One faction is determined to have three blocks constructed this year, while the other faction will insist on four blocks.

Excessive Flushing.

The paving contractors claim that the city is reducing the life of the asphaltic pavement by five years due to excessive flushing. Ald. Green promises to look into the matter with a view of simplifying the street cleaning schedule.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Woodstock at present, is suffering from the biggest measles' epidemic in its history and the authorities are alarmed. There are nearly 100 cases.

Has Resigned.

Mr. S. Bartleman, superintendent of the Galt Water Commission, has resigned and Mr. Peter Cowan has been appointed in his place.

Board Account.

[illegible] the Canadian Bank of Commerce has agreed to carry the school board account and grant a line of credit of $135,000.

Resignation Accepted.

The resignation of Ald. John Keyes of the Stratford Council, has been accepted.

Concrete Roadway.

The property owners of Fort Erie have voted to accept the proposal of the Niagara Falls Park Commission to pay thirty-five per ent. of the cost of a concrete railway, continuation of the Niagara boulevard.

NO GARMENT worn during the warm months of July and August is of more importance than your brassiere. The right model gives your figure a trim, neat appearance above the waist line, and also accentuates the beauty of your sheer waists.

GOSSARD BRASSIERES are sold by us in a wide variety of models, and in every style you can obtain some exclusive material and pattern to conform with your waists and lingerie. Each model is designed for a special type of figure, and we can fit your figure perfectly at prices ranging from 75c to $1.50.

THE NAME GOSSARD on these brassieres is sufficient to guarantee their fit, workmanship and wearing service. In addition to this, we give them our unqualified approval and recommend them to our customers.

Ask to see the many models. They fit better, look better, wear better, because they are "Gossards."

CHIEF THOMPSON READS PAPER AT THE CONVENTION of Chiefs of Police From All Parts of Canada—Discipline and Department Was His Subject

TORONTO, June 9.—Chiefs of Police from all parts of Canada congregated in the city yesterday for the annual Police Chiefs' convention, which is being held in the City Hall this year.

A civic welcome was tendered the Chiefs at the morning session. Mayor Church gave them the key to the city and told them 'to go to it.' He declared that the police should receive better treatment at the hands of the citizens, as well as better pay. 'There is a better day dawning for the policemen,' declared his Worship. "Citizens are beginning to understand just what a policeman does, and that he should benefit the same as people in other walks of life."

To-day Chief Thompson of Peterborough, read the following paper on Discipline and Deportment:

In taking up this matter of discipline and deportment, I would first observe that the success of any squad, precinct or district, depends largely upon its executive head, and he must see to it that a few general principles are followed without question.

Obedience.

To obey strictly, and execute promptly the lawful orders of a superior officer is one of the first requirements of any department. In fact, obedience is the foundation on which all police efficiency is built, and without it all the proper authorities on the force would be nothing more than a jangling mob. It is a quality that is demanded from every member of the force, from patrolman to inspector. It is enough to know that the person giving the orders is in command. He may be a man you do not like, but you must omit the personal factor and respect his position and authority.

Orders must be strictly carried out. It is not enough to comply with that part that you deem sufficient, nor is it proper or permissible When you are ordered to do a thing in a certain way for you to obtain the same results by other methods.

Orders must be promptly carried out. When an officer is given an order, it is not for him to question its value or the manner prescribed for its fulfillment. When you understand what the order calls for, carry it out to the best of your ability and in a manner that admits of no misunderstanding.

Do not criticise the actions or orders of those placed in authority over you. You must assume that they are responsible, that they understand what they are trying to accomplish, and have reasons for wanting things done in the very way they prescribe. You must not assume that because you know of another way in which the same results might be obtained that they are wrong and you are right.

Your superior will be judged by the final results obtained through such methods as he may pursue, whereas your responsibility ceases when you carry out his orders.

Department.

Police departments are often gauged by the acts of its individual members. If you favourably impress persons they will judge the entire department by that impression. Every officer, whether on or off duty, on patrol, or in reserve, or at home will be liable to criticism, and he should therefore conduct himself in an exemplary manner.

Bear in mind you serve, not only for the eyes of the public, and if you do not conduct yourself in a gentlemanly manner, you will be quickly observed. Do not do anything that is not gentlemanly; mind your own business, and do not meddle with or criticise business people or other persons who pass over your beat.

It is better to talk too little than too much. An act committed or a story told by a private individual might be construed as unimportant. Idle gossip must not be indulged in concerning yourself or the Department, as a blasted reputation is seldom recovered, and a gossip never makes a good policeman.

Strength of Character.

Excellent physique alone does not make a good police officer. He should possess sufficient strength of character, will power, and moral courage to successfully resist any temptation to do wrong. Often people engaged in undertakings requiring police protection will endeavour to induce you to overlook a violation of the law, and may, if arrested, seek either directly or indirectly through their friends to have you give weak or evasive testimony in court, so that the ends of justice may be defeated.

Be jealous of your character and reputation, social companionship, and intimate acquaintance with such persons should be avoided, for in the majority of cases they seek your friendship with an ulterior object in view.

Courtesy.

An officer should be courteous to everyone regardless of their position in life. Persons seeking information, assistance and advice are entitled to courteous and gentlemanly attention.

Courtesy.

It is not courteous to be abrupt and short in your answers. You may be required to answer the same question a great many times during your tour of duty, and the repetition will become tiresome, but do not lose your temper, or change your manners; the last person to ask the question is as interested as the first, and is quite as much entitled to the proper information and a civil answer as the first one.

Ambition.

From the first tour of duty you perform, it should be your aim to prepare yourself for promotion, men who are ambitious for promotion make good policemen: They are attentive to their duty, jealous of their character and reputation, and as a result of their careful study of the rules and regulations, ways and customs of the department and the laws, are mentally well-equipped.

There is an excuse for one man knowing how to do some one particular thing better than another. He may have had to specialize it. There is, however, no excuse for any police officer not knowing the rules and regulations, laws and ordinances of the Department, as well as another. The information is available, and if one does not prepare himself on these subjects it is due to his own neglect, and carelessness.

Whatever duty you are called upon to perform, keep a curb upon your temper. It has been said and I believe rightly so, that an angry man is as unfit for duty as a drunken man and is not capable of exercising that discretion which a constable is so often called upon to exercise. Do not be over zealous or meddlesome. These are dangerous faults. Do your duty, but no more. A meddlesome constable who interferes unnecessarily upon every trifling occasion, is likely to stir up ill-feeling against the Force, and does more harm than good. An over zealous man who is always thinking of himself, and desiring to call attention to his own activity is very likely to fall into a habit of exaggeration, which is a fatal fault. You will no doubt remember that in an earlier part of my paper I make mention of the fact that a constable may, through influence, be induced to give weak and evasive testimony. My paper would not be complete if I did not draw attention to the fact that there is a danger of the over zealous constable being too anxious for convictions, and is likely to form a habit of exaggerating his testimony. The latter habit is more dangerous than the previously mentioned one, and the constable loses the confidence of judges, juries and magistrates, and his testimony becomes of little value.

It may often occur in a department that officers will have to be pulled up or disciplined for some act of disobedience. This will be a time when the real discipline of the Force will be tested.

The head of the Department will have to be very firm, and without fear or favour meet out such punishment as he deems wise, and the members of the Force must stand by their official head without regard to friendship or personality so that the discipline of the Force may be maintained.

You cannot be loyal and be a knocker, a grumbler, or a shirker. just one man of this type in a Department is a nuisance and a centre of dissatisfaction. You should therefore try and discourage such tendencies in yourself and in those with whom you come in contact. Most grievances are fancied ones, and the longer you entertain them the greater they appear.

If something is interfering with you or your duty and you feel that you are not getting a square deal, do not grumble; go to the person in immediate control and explain the circumstances and you will find that he can and will rectify any legitimate grievance.

I trust that I have at least to some small degree been able to touch upon some points in Police duties that may be of some assistance to the members of this association.

We, as Chief Constables, should endeavour to give to our municipalities an honest and clean police service, and we should at all times so conduct ourselves that our integrity would never be questiond.

THAW'S FOURTH ATTEMPT.

Fifty Witnesses Will Be Called in Trial to Set Him Free.

NEW YORK, June 22.— Fifty witnesses summoned in behalf of Harry K. Thaw in his effort to prove that he is now sane and entitled to be set free from the Matteawan Asylum, were ready to testify in his sanity trial beginning before Supreme Court Justice Hendrick and a jury.

This was Thaw's fourth attempt to obtain his freedom from custody by means of a Habeas Corpus, but was the first instance in which his plea was heard by a jury.

A GOOD THING

When It Comes Along Don't Let It Get Away From You.

"I really feel that it is hardly possible to say too much in favour of Grape-Nuts as a health food," writes a Chicago lady.

"For 9 or 10 years I had suffered from indigestion and chronic constipation, caused by the continued use of coffee and rich, heavy foods. My ailments made my life so wretched that I was eager to try anything that held out a promise of help. And that is how I happened to buy a package of Grape-Nuts last spring.

"The [illegible] experiments. For in Grape-Nuts I found exactly what I wanted [illegible]. From the day I began [illegible] noticed an improvement and in a very few weeks I found my health was being restored.

"My digestive apparatus now works perfectly and chronic constipation has been entirely relieved. I have gained in weight materially, and life is a very pleasant thing to me so long as I use Grape-Nuts once or twice a day. I have found by experiment that if I leave it off for a few days my health suffers.

"A physician in our town has great success in treating stomach troubles, and the secret of it is that he puts his patient on Grape-Nuts food—it always brings back the power of digestion."

WITNESS PROVES RETICENT AT THE STONE INQUEST

"Try to Tell the Truth" Urged Crown Attorney R. H. Greer —Clashes With Witness—Had No Quarrel With Murdered Man

WHITBY, Ont., June 23. — Crown Attorney R. H. Greer was met with evidence and hostility when he resumed his examination into the shooting of Wm. Stone, the telegraph operator, who was murdered, which was resumed before Coroner McGillivray yesterday afternoon. The Crown Attorney's queries were directed into finding out where Harry Birmingham, a chum of Stone's, and the last man to see him alive, was on the night of the shooting. Fred Thompson, a brother-in-law of Harry Birmingham's, said he could not tell how long his relative was out of work since he came to Whitby a year ago. "I do not pay any attention to his business," he remarked.

Clash With Witness.

Thompson proved to be a reticent witness and Crown Attorney Greer grew so impatient on one occasion that he said: "Why don't you try to tell the truth?" "I am," replied the witness.

Thompson is a foreman on the G. T.R., and he said he knew Stone well. He lives about fifty yards north of the station. Birmingham resides with him. Witness said that, although he was in the station twice a day, he did not know Stone had a revolver.

"Did you know Birmingham had a revolver?"

"Not until after the shooting. He did not say how long he had had it."

"Did you ask him if he had had it before Stone was shot?" "I don't know. What did I want to ask him for?"

On the night of the shooting Thompson did not know at what time Birmingham came into the house.

"I can't tell you what time I went to bed."

Crown Attorney Greer: "If there was ever a night in your life you should remember I should think that was it. Get down to hard pan and tell me something."

Witness: "I am trying to."

"Not the Truth," Says Crown.

Mr. Greer: "You are not. It is a very strange thing you can tell me the conversations that passed between you and the man at the station after the shooting and you cannot remember anything of the night before."

"Do you expect me to believe that?" remarked the Crown Attorney when Thompson declared he had never spoken to Birmingham about the shooting.

"You know that is not the truth and so do I. I want you to tell me some of the truth.

Following this report the witness said Birmingham had told him he had been at the station between 10 and 11 o'clock on the night of the tragedy.

"Did you ask him what time he left the station?" "No."

"You are not interested yet?" "No."

Col. Farewell Lends Hand.

Thompson said Stone had on several occasions visited his house to see a Miss Gormley, of Pikering, Ontario. He could not tell whether Stone had made any visits late at night. Miss Gormley was a friend of Mrs. Thompson's and her visit lasted three weeks.

"Did you know Birmingham had commenced to learn telegraph operating?" "I do not know."

Crown Attorney Greer: "You are telling the most remarkably small piece of truth I have ever heard." At this point Crown Attorney Col. Farewell took up the examination of Thompson. The witness showed a disposition to answer the questions with greater freedom.

"You have an elastic memory," remarked the colonel.

"Mrs. William Stone, mother of the deceased, the next witness, showed the effects of the suffering she had undergone. She was supported by her daughter and spoke in a whisper When the news of the shooting was broken to her she and her husband were asleep.

"I woke him up and he went to the door. Patterson said he was wanted at the station. I was frightened and started to scream. I did not know what had happened until my husband came back for Patterson, and said: "Your boy is not feeling well."

Father's Recent Death.

Col. Farewell touched upon the death of William Stone, sr., who was killed by a train Saturday evening. He had been subpoenaed to attend this inquest.

"H[illegible]," replied the witness.

"W[illegible]he say after he left the house?" "He said 'I can stand it no longer.'"

"Did he say he would not come to the inquest?" He said he could not stand it. He said: 'They are going to put me in jail for life.'"

After replying, Mrs. Stone broke into tears.

The insurance upon her son's life amounted to $2,000 in two policies.

No Quarrel With Stone.

After the murder of Stone, Birmingham is alleged to have made the statement that he had heard a shot fired. When questioned, Mrs. Thompson said she thought the shot might have been fired at her brother. For ten minutes the woman fenced with the Crown Attorney. At last he appealed to the coroner and the witness immediately changed her first answer.

"The story you told here, is it true."

"Yes, as far as I know. I have not told any lies that I know of."

"Have you been over to comfort Mrs. Stone?"

"No; the family are strangers to me."

"Do you remember Birmingham saying anything about having a quarrel with Stone?" "No."

PETERBOROUGH BOYS AT THE FRONT WOULD APPRECIATE CHOCOLATE

Capt. C. H. Ackerman Writing Before He Was Wounded in Action at Festubert Says the Men Prefer Chocolate.

In the following letter to Mr. A. Cranfield, Capt. C. H. Ackerman refers to the receipt of tobacco from C. G.E. men who collected a fund and forwarded the supply:

France, June 6, 1915.

My dear Cranfield,—Your letter of May 13 received last night and it came as a very pleasant surprise indeed.

I will be very pleased to distribute personally the packages of tobacco when the parcel arrives, to the Peterborough fellows left and I know they will mail the cards without delay. It is almost impossible for me to give you anything like an accurate estimate of the number of Peterborough fellows with our battalion, as nearly every day fellows are returning to duty from hospital and others are going to hospital, so you see how uncertain it would be.

Last week while we were in the trenches we lost Corp. Carpenter killed and Mongour wounded by a shell that landed and burst in their dug-out; one (Carpenter) was killed and five others wounded. Mongour's wound I understand was only slight.

You ask me to suggest something that the fellows are in need of. I may say that for the past month or so we have been receiving any amount of tobacco and igarettes, in some cases more than they could smoke. We got a government issue once a week, besides private contributions from outside, so I would suggest chocolate. It is very hard to buy good chocolate in this part of France and occasionally we receive some from England that we all appreciate more than cigarettes.

Yes, we have been having a very strenuous time up until about a week ago, but we came out of the trenches last Monday night to a nice bivouac in an orchard where we have been enjoying the first real rest since Ypres.

I could go on writing and tell you more of our experiences if time permitted, but must close as I have many letters to write and see in the Peterborough papers other more interesting accounts of our experiences than I could write.

Kindly extend the sincere thanks the efforts the Peterborough people of all the Peterborough fellows for have taken to make us comfortable, I remain,

Yours very truly,
C. H. Ackerman, Capt.

ROUMANIA WILL SOON ENTER WAR WITH ALLIES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 23—The negotiations between Roumania and the Allies looking toward Roumania's entrance upon the war, appear to be near an end. Russia's opposition to Roumania's possession of Czernowitz, capital of Bukowina, in case of the success of the Triple Entante Allies, according to the news, reaching Paris, virtually has been abandoned, and but one difficulty remains. That is Serbia's desire to possess the narrow triangle in Hungary opposite Belgrade, including Panesova, as a protection for the Serbian capital.

On the other hand Roumania is said to assert that with Semlin in Serbian hands, as has been proposed Belgrade needs no artificial ultra-Danubian bulwark and insists on the Danube, Theiss, Maros and Pruth rivers as her new frontiers in the existing Austro-Hungarian territory.

Realizing the present difficulties of Russia and the value of Roumanian assistance by Roumania, it is said that Roumania is satisfied to await the result of the pressure of the Allies on Serbia before she makes a move. Roumania's situation is considered here as particularly strong in view of the admitted arrangement with Bulgaria under which Bulgaria would be bound to enter war with Roumania and operate against Constantinople.

LARGE NUMBER OF LICENSES ISSUED EACH YEAR BY THE CITY

Last Year the City Collected $6,937.34 Through This Means —Thirty-six Licenses Issued for Eating Houses—Some Licenses Are Issued as a Means of Regulating Business

This is the season of the year when a large number of licenses are issued at the city hall. The larger number of them represent renewals. As a number of cases licenses are issued by the city as a means of regulating certain classes of business, such as laundries, eating houses, etc. By the compulsory act of taking out a license the owners of such premises must conform to existing by-laws, and must be prepared to submit to periodical inspections at the hands of the various officials employed by the city, such as the Sanitary Inspector, Plumbing Inspector and Police officials. Last year the City Treasury was enriched to the extent of $6,937.34, as a result of licenses issued. This year may see a falling off in the number of licenses asked for. Last year's list was made up as follows:

Licenses Issued for 1914.

Thirty-six licenses for eating houses, at $5 each	$180.00
Sixteen licenses for cigarettes, at $40 each	640.00
Sixty-one licenses for milk vendors, at $1 each	61.00
Eleven licenses for laundries at $1 each	11.00
Seven licenses for second-hand stores, at $10 each	70.00
Eighteen butcher shop licenses and two pork shop licenses at $10 and $5, respectively	195.00
Ten plumbers' licenses at $10 each	100.00
Forty-one express licenses, at $5 each and upwards, according to number of vehicles in use	280.00
Nine licenses for pool and billiard rooms, at $40 for each table in use	1173.34
Nine pedlars license at from $30 each and upward, according to methods employed	410.00

TURKS SHELLED ALLIES' LINES

But Their Hearts Failed Them After They Had Massed For a Charge

LONDON, June 23.— "Between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening of June 19," says an official communication from the headquarters of the Mediterranean expeditionary force, "the Turks expended some 450 high explosive shells on our left and centre trenches and were seen massing for an attack. The enemy's heart failed him and the attack degenerated into a fire action.

"At 7.30 o'clock one of our brigades attacked a Turkish trench, but were unsuccessful, and the Turks in counter-attacks effected a lodgment in the lines at an awkward salient captured by us on the 4th. As the brigade was unable to recover the lost trench, the Fifth Royal Scots, backed by a company of the Worcester Regiment, came to their help. This attack was ably organized and brilliantly carried out to a successful issue.

Prisoners state that the Turks expected that their bombardment with high explosives would have cleared us out altogether and were much disappointed at so little impression being made, though the trenches were much damaged.

"The Turkish dead are estimated at three hundred in front of one brigade alone, and one thousand in all parts is a low estimate."

War Toll Is 7,600,000 Men

Drain of 750,000 Per Month, But It is Calculated War Could Last 3 More Years

ESTIMATES OF EXPERTS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 22 — Based on the official statement of Premire Asquith that Great Britain's casualties to date amount to 258,000, military experts here figure that the casualties of all the armies involved in the European war total more than 7,600,000 men. Of this number probably 1,500,000 have been killed, 4,500,000 wounded and the rest are missing.

A large part of the men reported as missing are military prisoners. The statement on Great Britain's losses shows that there are approximately three soldiers wounded to every one killed. Military authorities of the United States say that a considerable number of patients cared for in European military hospitals are returning to the front.

English Losses Lightest.

It is generally believed here that England's losses are not as great, proportionately, as those of the other countries involved in the conflict, but by pro-rating her losses in the armies of other nations the conclusion is reached that the casualties of the land forces are as follows:

Germany and Austria	3,000,000
Russia	2,500,000
France	1,500,000
Great Britain	250,000
Servia	250,000
Turks, South Africans, East Africans, Italians	100,000
Total	7,600,000

According to the figures almost one-third of the organized war strength of Germany, Austria France, England, Russia, Turkey and Italy has been dissipated.

750,000 Every Month.

At this rate of losses—750,000 a month—a simple calculation reveals that in a little more than two years from the beginning of the war the entire military establishments of all these countries as it stood on July 31, 1914, will have been wiped out. If the war extends into 1917 it then will be conducted by what in the beginning was the unorganized strength of the countries engaged. Of this raw material Great Britain has commenced organization on a large scale. The unorganized men of war age in the various countries at the outbreak of hostilities was as follows:

Germany	6,580,000
France	4,100,000
Russia	11,900,000
Austria-Hungary	1,800,000
Italy	940,000
Great Britain	3,700,000
Total	27,520,000

THE BURDENS OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

JUDGMENT HAS BEEN RESERVED

In Connection With City's Appeal From Award of Arbitration Board

Judgment has been reserved in connection with the appeal by the city from the award of the arbitrators as to damages, etc., for the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, which was expropriated by the city. The city based its appeal on the grounds that the award was excessive. The award amounted to $154,615.00.

Argument in connection with the appeal was heard yesterday in Osgoode Hall, Toronto, before Mr. Justice Britton. The appearances were Mr. M. K. Cowan of Toronto, City Solicitor G. N. Gordon, and for the Company, Mr. W. N. Tilley. Mr. S. Johnson appeared for Ewing and Ross, trustees.

BIG PROGRAMME FOR Y. M. C. A. BOYS' CAMP

A big treat is in store for the boys who are going to the Y.M.C.A. boys' camp this year. A number of the business men of the city have placed their automobiles at the service of the "Y" and are going to take the boys to camp in their cars. This will be a fine trip for the boys through the beautiful farm land of Smith township. Arrangements have been made to bring the boys back by steamer through the Trent Canal and over the lift-lock. The management is doing everything in their power to make this one of the best camps in the history of the association. Thirty boys have enrolled their names so far, which means that the camp will be a good success. The list will close Saturday, June 26th. All names must be in by that date, so the management will know how many automobiles to provide for.

Boys' Camp Daily Programme.

6.30 a.m. reveille. Every boy appears in front of his tent for setting up exercise.
6.50, morning dip.
7.00, flag raised.
7.30, breakfast.
8.15, Bible study.
9.00, camp duties.
Baseball league, boating, fishing, and all kinds of games, with a swim at 11.00 o'clock.
12.00, dinner.

Afternoon.

The afternoon is devoted to athletic sports, boating, fishing, hikes, ramble through the woods, berry picking, observation trips, and a good swim at four o'clock. Supper at 6.00 o'clock

Evening.

7.00 p.m., group games.
8.00. When comes the most pleasant feature of camp life, the camp fire with its jolly times, singing, story telling, corn roast.
9.30. All quiet for a nine hour sleep.

Motor boat trips will be made to the following places: Fairy Lake, Burleigh Falls, Mount Julian, Viamede Boschink Narrows, Crow's Landing McCracken's Landing, Juniper Island South Beach, Young's Point.

Field Day.

Friday afternoon, July 2nd, field day, when a good programme of sports will be run off.

Friday afternoon, July 9th, aquatic sports. This is the big event of the boys' camp. All kinds of water sports, great to watch, full of excitement, all kinds of laughs.

The day's programme will conclude with a big camp fire, a concert and corn roast. Prizes will be presented to the winners at the evening concert.

Suggests Isolation Hospital As a Home For Convalescent Soldiers

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The writer has noted with interest the correspondence that has taken place in the daily press in regard to the use of the Y.M.C.A. building or other public buildings in Peterborough for convalescent hospital for our returned soldiers.

Peterborough owes a debt to our Member for bringing this matter sharply to the attention of the people and the Daily Press, who, for the last two months, has been noting offers (from almost every town and city in the country) to the Government.

We have in Peterborough, the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital on one of the most beautiful situations that there is in the city. It is already equipped with everything necessary to make it an ideal resting place or home. It has large verandahs, beautiful grounds, is handy to the river, and it would appear to the writer, that it could accommodate a large number of invalid soldiers. I think the records will show that at no time within the last year or two has here been more than half a dozen patients, at any one time, in the hospital. Probably the average is one or two and I would suggest that arrangements be made to obtain a modern house with, say, four or five bedrooms, to be used as a temporary Isolation Hospital, until the end of the war, and use this splendid equipment we have for the present urgent needs. It may not be generally known, but there is in Peterborough at the present time, two or three soldiers who should be properly cared for. In one case the wife of the soldier is trying to attend to her daily duties and look after a very sick man as well. This is not as it should be and no time should be lost in settling this question. There will be a large number of men whose nerves will be shattered, and it might require months of rest cure to put them back in a condition that they will be able to follow their former occupations.

As to the question of financing this institution: I would suggest that our fraernal organizations (including the Benefit Society of the Canadian General Electric Company) also our Patriotic Committee, assess their members a few cents per month, and the Secretaries of these organizations would then act as collectors. I would further suggest that our two members get together and call a meeting of the medical men nurses, officers of the Benefit Societies, Board of Health City and County officials and deal with this mater in a straight, business manner, and not leave it for individual, spasmodic efforts as it is going to be a question of whether Peterborough continues in its magnificent work or neglect one of the very important necessities of the time.

I trust you will pardon the length of this letter. We all know that it is not necessary to ask the support of the Press as that is always given to every good work in the city.

Certain Statements Are Embarrassing

Motion to Have Them Eliminated From Statement of Claim

The following motion was heard in Osgoode Hall, Toronto, yesterday: McNish vs. Peterborough Review; Meharry vs. Peterborough Review.—J. M. Pickup, for defendant Gowan, and E. C. Cattanach, for defendant Review, in each action, moved to strike out certain paragraphs of statement of claim as embarrassing. S. J. Birnbaum for plaintiff. Enlarged to June 28. Time for defence extended until motions disposed of.

Signal Honours For Many Officers and Men For Gallantry in The Field

LONDON, June 23.—A supplement to the London Gazette published last night gives a long list from Field Marshal Sir John French of Canadians "whom I recommend for gallant and distinguished service in the field." All branches of the service have representatives in the list. A number of general and brigade staff officers are mentioned, as are nearly all the battalian commanders and senior artillery officers. In a number of cases the second in command of infantry battalions is mentioned as well as the O.C., while many junior officers and a number of men have also been recognized.

The fact that the Canadian army medical units are doing splendid work is indicated by the numerous cases of medical officers' names in the list. All the commanding officers of hospitals are mentioned for honours, as well as many of the junior officers. It is also worthy of note that two of the nursing sisters are mentioned.

The members of the general headquarters staff whose names appear on the list are: Lieut.-Gen. E. A. H. Alderson, G.O.C., 1st Canadian division (England); Lieut.-Col. G. L. F. Foster, A.D.M.S (Ottawa); Major Beatty, D.S.O., A.D.C. (England); Lieut.-Col. G. C. W. Gordon-Hall (England); Capt. E. S. Clifford, D. S.O. (England); Lieut. Col. Romer (England), Lieut.-Col. R. J. F. Hayter (England), Lieut.-Col. Hughes, Lieut.-Col. Betty (England), Lieut.-Col. Kemmis, Lieut.-Col. Wood, Major Beatty (England), Captains Chisholm, Clark, MacBrien Pope and Ware.

In a later list Liept.-Col. G. T. Hamilton formerly of the Royal Artillery now attached to the Canadian headquarters staff, is named. Two nursing sisters, Matron Miss Campbell and Miss Richardson, are also mentioned for distinguished service.

Local Clergy at Lindsay Affair

LINDSAY, June 23.—His Lordship Bishop O'Brien attended the annual commencement exercises at St. Joseph's Academy last night. With him were Monsignor Casey, Rev. Father Phelan, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father Hayes, and Rev. Father Ferguson. Bishop O'Brien gave a splendid address.

Band Concert in King Edward Park

Addresses were made by His Worship Mayor Buller and a number of the Aldermen at the opening band concert that was given in King Edward Park last evening. A well balanced and enjoyable programme of music was rendered by the Salvation Army Band. There was a fairly large attendance despite the threatening weather.

$500 BLAZE ON WARE STREET

A fire at the residence of Mrs. J. H. Campbell, 26 Ware Street did considerable damage shortly after noon, to-day. A driving shed adjoining the house caught fire and was badly burned, along with the barn in connection but the house escaped the flames. The damage will amount to $500 or $600. Chief Howard said that he had considerable trouble in keeping sightseers out of the way and several gardens were trampled by the crowd. Finally the hose was turned on the spectators. One man, in rescuing a clock from the house, was overcome by smoke and fell through the door, cutting his face on the clock.

FRUIT BULLETIN

Of interest to housewives. Official notice is given to buy canning strawberries now. Have your grocer secure Niagara Peninsula grown kind, they are now at their best and require less sugar. Gooseberries about ready. Speak to your grocer.

MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES

Honour for Major J. H. Fessenden of Peterborough

A Peterborough boy is among those mentioned by Sir John French for gallant and meritorious service in the field in the person of Major J. H. Fessenden of the Royal Army Service Corps, a son of Mr. Cortez Fessenden of the Collegiate Institute. Major Fessenden, who is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, has been serving in the British army for a number of years and was a member of the first British expeditionary force, having been at the front for nearly ten months. His brother, Lieut. Vivien Fessenden of the 15th Battalion, C.E.F., is a prisoner in Germany.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Ethel Hetherington of Peterborough is spending her vacation at Star Cottage, Upper Lakes.

Miss Kavanagh returned to Ottawa to-day after spending a week, the guest of Miss Hurley, Hunter Street.

WEDDING BELLS

STRONG—HUTCHINSON.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Charlotte St. Methodist Parsonage this afternoon when Mr. Henry Strong, of Hope Township, was married to Miss Mary Hutchinson, of Cavan Township.

LAPRES—KELLY.

A very quiet wedding was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at 8 o'clock when Hedweige Hilda Kelly, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Kelly, Downie street, was united in marriage to J. Arthur Lapres of Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. J. Kelly of Parry Sound, brother of the bride. Miss Annie Kelly, her sister, attended the bride and Mr. M. Tansey of Montreal, was best man. Mr. J. J. Gallagher of Toronto and formerly of Montreal, was among those present.

After a honeymoon through the Great Lakes, Mr. and Mrs. Lapres will return to Montreal, where they will reside.

Many Enjoyed the Strawberries

The grounds of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church were in gala attire last evening, the occasion being a Strawberry Festival, under the auspices of the C. L. A. of the Church. In spite of the many counter attractions in the City, including the Band Concert at King Edward Park, and the regular weekly marchout of the 57th Regiment, there was a large number of people present to enjoy the event.

OFFER OF HOME FOR SOLDIERS

Has Been Received From the Proprietor of the Burleigh Falls Hotel

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has received an offer from the proprietor of the Burleigh Falls hotel, signifying his willingness to have the house used after the close of the tourist season, for the care of invalided soldiers. This would be used in conjunction with the main home to be located in Peterborough.

Mr. Burnham has addressed a communication to the Peterborough Club suggesting that the building be converted into a home for convalescent soldiers. The matter is in the hands of the Executive committee of the club and will be considered upon the return to the city of Mr. E. G. Patterson, President of the Club.

Hungarian Writer Calls Down Curse on Germany

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 23.— Mr. Sander Nadas, eminent Hungarian auther and journalist, writes an interesting article in the Pesti utar, which has just reached here, about the sinking of the Lusitania. What strikes me as significant is that the censor should have allowed such an article to appear in a Hungarian newspaper, for it records what Germany's own allies have to say about her methods of warfare when the censer is absent minded, or, perhaps, of the same opinion. Translated into English the article runs:

"I simply trembled when I read that the Lusitania was sunk —this great swimming city, which had her own streets, street corners, swimming baths, and tennis grounds. She had everything on board but tram cars, and yet sank in twenty minutes. The German newspapers tell me I should rejoice over this German 'victory,' but though I have always heeded what the newspapers say, this time, somehow or other, I could not obey. I turned pale at the idea that an English planned, German made submarine had torpedoed the Lusitania; that two thousand people were shrieking in the water as they tried to avoid the inevitable death.

"How could these unfortunate souls be blamed for going about their business? Why had they to suffer because there is war between nations, and because a mad student murdered the Crown Prince of Austria, or because Austria deemed it necessary to begin a punitive expedition against Servia?

"Why had these poor children to suffer because Germany hates England so much that words cannot be found to express it?

"Why had these children to be thrown into the water?

"They were not soldiers or marines. They were not trained or armed Why could they not have been allowed to land?

"I know that there is war that England wants to starve out Germany. Yet I cannot rejoice over the murder of two thousand women and children. When God or fate brought about the destruction of the Titanic one questioned the divine goodness. When men do it we are asked to rejoice. I refuse to do so, even if the whole German press shrieked it into my ears, for in reading the details of the sinking of the Lusitania all the horrors of death seemed to pass before me. I could only weep over it and not rejoice. Whether the people were English or Americans, one can only pity them and curse the hand that brought it all about."

WAR CAUSES TAX RATE TO SOAR IN HOLLAND

The published statement of the receipts of the Netherlands government from all forms of taxation and state enterprises for the month of April, shows that while the war is not only increasing the cost of running the Dutch government, it is also decreasing its revenues. This is sad news for the Hollanders, who already find the burden of the expenses of the mobilization well nigh intolerable, when added to the ordinary expenses of life. Long before the war, taxes in the Netherlands were remarkably high. Every Dutch child started life with the handicap of his share in over $200,000 per day of taxes for expenditures which are unknown in any other country of the world. In Holland it is an existence tax; for it costs that much to maintain dykes to keep a great part of the Netherlands from being overrun by the sea.

The annual budget in Holland is carefully calculated to produce a certain figure through taxes; when the revenues fall below that figure, as in the month of April, extra imposts are necessary and lead to growing dissatisfaction among the people who pay taxes. This year, the month of April exhibits a shortage of $4,262,894, compared with the revenues of the corresponding month of last year. So great is this deficit in proportion, and so close have the figures this year, in the first three months, run to the figures of last year, receipts for the same period, that, with the April deficit, the revenues for the four months of 1915 show a loss of $3,183,709 over the same period of 1914.

The principal deficits lie in the receipts from the inheritance taxes, and in the excise on sugar. The former fall $1,000,000 short of last year's figures, while the latter falls by $338,000

Major Campbell's Wounds Mortal

MOUNT FOREST, Ont., June 23.—Major F. W. Campbell, who was wounded on June 17th and died of wounds in a hospital at Boulogne, France, on June 19, had lived most of his life a mile or two from the town. For more than twenty-one years he had been connected with the 30th Wellington Rifles. He served in South Africa with the first contingent. When the present war broke out he volunteered and went to Valcartier, taking with him about twenty members of "E" Company, 30th Regiment, of which company he had charge. At Valcartier he was given command of the machine gun section of the 1st Brigade. He was in the fight on Hill 60, coming through unhurt. He went to the front as a Lieutenant, and for services rendered on the field he was promoted to the rank of Major. He leaves a wife and three small children.

Mrs. A. R. Campbell, 421 Stewart Street, Peterborough, is a relative. She received word of Major Campbell's death from his sister, Miss Cora Campbell who resides in Mount Forest.

Will Make Important Concessions in the Interests of Humanity

Germany in Her Reply to Second American Note Will Give Assurance That the Lives of All Neutrals Will Be Safeguarded.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

(By Carl W. Ackerman.)

BERLIN, via The Hague, June 24.—Germany in her reply to the second American note, will make important concessions in the interests of those "principles of humanity" for which President Wilson declared America was contending. This was the positive assurance I received to-day.

Germany may even give assurance that the lives of all neutrals will be safeguarded. It is possible that the German reply, now in preliminary stages of formation, may suggest certain distinguished marks for vessels carrying non-contraband cargoes to insure them against submarine attacks. Chancellor Von Bethmann Holweg desires that Germany's answer go forward to Washington as soon as possible. But in view of its bearing on future international law, German diplomats are proceeding cautiously in framing a reply. The German answer, it is stated, will mark a distinct advance toward securing "freedom of the seas," for which Foreign Secretary Von Jagow assured the United Press in a recent interview, Germany is fighting. The answer, therefore, may be delayed for two weeks, but it is hoped that it will renew a feeling of friendliness between the two nations.

The public is disposed to view the suspension of the Tages Zeitung quite calmly. The feeling here is that no citizen should sanction a criticism of the leaders of the Empire at a time like the present.

"On To Paris" Was Cry That Ran Through Berlin To-day After Capture of Lemberg

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, via The Hague, June 24.—"On to Paris" was the cry that ran through Berlin to-day on a wave of enthusiasm that has followed the capture of Lemberg. Popular sentiment unanimously favours the abandonment of the Galicia offensive in favour of a gigantic drive on the French capital. In streets, in shops, everywhere that people gathered to talk of the victory over the Russians, was voiced the belief that Galician army hosts should be hurried from their scenes of triumph in the East and hurled against the French and British lines in Northern France. Obviously no hint has come from the War Office regarding what is to follow the fall of Lemberg, but well informed military men here to-day doubted that Mackensen's armies would be seen in action along the Franco-Flanders line in the near future. General belief is that Germany will send reinforcements into the Russian Baltic Provinces and renew Riga upon Riga. The Kaiser is said to be determined to deal the Czar's armies a blow from which they cannot well recover, before starting a fresh offensive in the West.

WARNEFORD'S EXPLOIT SPOILS HUN PLANS

SPECIAL CABLE:

BASEL, Switzerland, June 22, via Paris, June 24.—Despatches reaching here from Germany set forth that a meeting of aerial experts was held recently at Friedrichshafen to discuss the question of constructing on top of all Zeppelin airships launched in the future, a gun platform on which to mount machine guns. These would be used to drive away enemy aeroplanes and protect the Zeppelins from attacks such as that delivered over Belgium by the British aviator Warneford.

The opinion was expressed at this conference that Warneford had exploded the theory of Count Zeppelin that his airships cannot be approached and attacked by aeroplanes.

Another message reaching here from Germany says that Emperor William, when he heard of the death of Aviator Warneford, said: "He was a brave enemy."

World-Wide Popularity of Tea.

"In the tea trade there is much talk of enormous increases in the drinking of tea everywhere since the war began. Russia, already a large consumer of tea, is taking more and more to the beverage now that vodka is banned. In France tea is, beginning to threaten the supremacy of coffee. The greater demand means higher prices in our households, especially as there is said to be no corresponding increase in the supply. Dealers are naturally uneasy as to the position." —London (Eng.) Dr. Dernberg's Steamer Detained

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, June 24.—The Norwegian steamer Bergensfjord, with Dr. Dernburg, the German propagandist and wife aboard, has been detained at Kirkwall, with the Swedish steamer Varing from Savannah. The Bergensfjord was due to reach Bergen today, but the action of the British authorities in stopping the steamer is not at all unusual. It is understood that Scandinavian vessels crossing the war zone have agreed to enter Kirkwall for inspection to prevent controversies over their cargoes.

THE WESTERN FAIR

London's Popular Exhibition

The management of the Western Fair of London, Ontario, is very busy arranging for the big Exhibition which takes place this year September 10th to 18th. On account of the Military Authorities using the Grounds and Buildings during the winter, a large amount of work is necessary to be done, but the Board of Directors were only too glad to be able to help in any way in these war times. The new steel Grand Stand is in course of erection, and will be completed in good time. It is 340 feet long by 80 feet wide and will seat 5,000 people, every sitting being a good one. It is of steel construction on cement footings, and absolute safety to the public was the first thing considered in its erection. There will be three twenty foot entrances through the Grand Stand to the paddock in front. A certain number of sittings will be in the reserved section at 50c., and the balance will be the same price as other years, 25c. There will be an excellent programme of attractions. Price lists, entry forms and all information supplied by writing the Secretary, A. M. Hunt, London, Ontario.

Removes Hairy Growths Without Pain or Bother

(Modes of To-day)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delatone handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdred delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.

MAKES SHELLS FOR THE ALLIES

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., June 24.—German capital is providing the sinews of war for her enemy allies, and within a very few months high power shells manufactured by an American concern dominated by Berlin capitalists — and owned by them in large measure—will be sent screaming at the German battle lines from British and French field guns.

Already it is known that a vast percentage of the war munitions being purchased in this country by England, France, and Russia are being supplied by the Bethlehem Steel Company, of which Mr. Charles M. Schwab is the head. But it has not been generally known that the contracts under which the steel company obtains its supply of coke and other fuel to keep its blast and open hearth furnaces going are held by a concern seventy per cent. of which is owned by the Deutches Bank, easily among the most powerful financial institutions of Germany, and known the world over because of its financial strength.

Wife and Lover Held in Plot To Kill Husband

BRISTOL, Tenn., June 23. — Mrs. Eva Jones and Dr. W. G. Long, a dentist, are under indictment on the charge of attempting to kill William H. Jones, the woman's husband. Both of the accused are being held in jail.

Numerous letters filled with endearing terms were exhibited at the preliminary hearing, and in these Mrs. Jones is referred to as a "soul wife."

The arrest of Dr. Long and Mrs. Jones followed an attempt of thirteen-year-old Ralph Jones to kill his father with a revolver. The father wrenched the weapon from the boy's hands.

It developed that Ralph had been serving as a courier for Dr. Long and his mother, and had been carrying letters for the two. When his father got possession of one of these letters and refused to deliver it to his wife Ralph hurried to Dr. Long and related how his father had intercepted him and taken the letter. The boy returned to his home armed with a revolver. He afterwards told on the witness stand that Dr. Long gave him the revolver and told him to get the letter.

Letters found in Dr. Long's pockets and others discovered later revealed, it is alleged, desire on the part of the dentist to get rid of the husband of Mrs. Jones, and in these letters he referred to Jones as a "dog" and "coward" and the one person standing in the way of his and Mrs. Jones' eternal happiness.

The letters were filled with expressions of deep infatuation, and told of experiences in the office of the dentist, when he expressed his joy to have her in his arms.

Dr. Long met Mrs. Jones, a tall, handsome woman, several months ago, when she came to his office to have dental work done.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

He seemed mighty proud of it, but when we saw the shape and colour of its face we thought he was puttin' up some sort of a joke on us until it began to cry. Then we knew it was a real baby, but we doubted in our hearts if it was worth savin'. It had a way of twistin' up its face, which wasn't much to begin with, and it would then pump itself full of air usin' curious, squeaky little gasps. When it had everything fixed to suit it, it would uncork a squall that fair made your hair stand on end, but Dan wasn't a mite scared and said they never broke nothin' by cryin'.

Still, it worried us into a heat and finally, after Dan had explained to us five or six times that cryin' was about the only exercise a child of that age could get, Isaac sez: "What does make it cry so?"

"He's cryin', you chump," sez Shorty, "because he don't know how to cuss you out for bringin' him a spellin'-book;" and those two tied into each other so keen that we had to set 'em outside.

Mrs. Cooper was sittin' up in a chair and we all went in and shook hands with her and told her we belonged to that baby's outfit, come what would, and Dan got out a jug of some extra fine stuff he'd brought in himself, and all in all, it was about as festive a New Year's as I can look back on, but Red finally notified us that it would be polite to leave just as soon as ever we was able.

A couple o' days after this, I happened over to the hermit's and he told me to make ready for the worst norther I'd ever heard of, and he was so earnest about it that I turned to and made ready at once. We had got a little careless the winter had been so open, and the stuff had sprangled out some, but next day we threw the hosses into the timber and the cows in sheltered pockets where the wind wouldn't cut 'em, and even then the norther mighty near whipped us out.

Cows from up north of us kept driftin' down and it was mighty hard to cut 'em past our stuff without our stuff gettin' the panic and headin' south. I kept Jim ridin' as long as any of us could ride but on the second night, we gave up and went to shelter; for the sleet was drivin' on a straight level and ya couldn't get the oldest pony on the place to head into it. We knew that the hosses were all right, for they could live out the winter on cottonwood bark if th' was any need for it; but I was mightily worried about the cows when I finally floundered into the bunk-shack too tired to eat. At the very start-off the temperature had dropped fifty degrees in two hours and the wind drove it in 'til a feller's heart ached. We had kept in the shelter as much as possible soothin' the cows and only dashin' out to keep the stragglers movin' when they drifted down on our stuff, but it had drained us to the bone and we were near blind into the bargain.

The wind died out after three days but the cold stuck and the sleet had been packed into a solid sheet. The hosses didn't seem to suffer much but the cows were beginnin' to moan mournful. We hadn't lost any, quite the opposite, we had gained by the hundred, and these squatters didn't make the prospect any rosier.

I finally got so sore at sight of the she stuff we had bought from below that I stole most of Jim's straw-stacks and skidded it out to them, and they didn't leave so much as a flake of chaff, but it seemed to put new heart into 'em. Finally the slopes began to melt and the buffalo grass below was freshened by the snow-water, so they mighty soon picked up again.

We had thought we were gettin' it purty rough till reports began to trickle in, and then we got ashamed of ourselves. Cows get word of a norther long before it arrives and unless they're mighty well placed they start driftin' to the south immediate; and, it's a curious thing, but the teeth of a norther don't travel a fourth as fast as the wind in it, so stuff that gets a good start can keep ahead of it for days. The trouble is, that they get in a daze, plunge over cliffs, pile up in hollows, starve and suffocate and die without seemin' to know whether they're awake or asleep.

The main outcome of this storm was that Jim limison got enough interested in the cow-business to see the difference between management and luck, and he began to work out big schemes on paper. At first this looked like just a new way of sidesteppin' the practical end again, but it wasn't long until he was able to convince me that after he'd got his tables of man-power, grass, interest and such-like to teamin' well, he was goin' to handle the Lion Head in a way ot keep a foreman from gettin' lonesome.

Old Baldy Hagus had sure enough got religion down at the meetin's, and all durin' the winter he used to tote around a little beetle-built Bible and read verses out of it so solemn that it seemed most a shame to watch him close when he got ready to leave. About three weeks after the norther, as he was ridin' through a little mott o' timber on the Supply road, some feller flashed at him with a Winchester at long range, plumped the little beetle-built Bible he was wearin' in his heart-pocket, and sank the bullet clear to the inside cover, which was about the only other unusual happenin' which took place that winter.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE.
Also a Photygraph.

During rough weather the old hermit ruminated at one side of his open fireplace, but the next time I happened over that way, I found him perched at the door of his cabin, his hawk-eyes gazin' the same as usual out of his own world into some other. "We're goin' to have an early spring," sez he, after I'd started my own pipe and sat down beside him.

"I don't see any signs of it, myself," sez I.

"You didn't see any signs of the norther, either, did ya?" sez he.

"No, I didn't," sez I. "What signs do you go by?"

"Do you know exactly why sap goes up into a tree in the spring?" sez he.

"No," sez I, "not exactly."

"Neither does the tree," sez he, puffin' thoughtful.

"What's that got to do with it?" sez I.

"Well," sez he, as though it was a bother to talk at all, "time was when the slightest change in the weight of the air told us what to get ready for and we believed it like little children, and did it; but after we got puffed out with reason, we doubted everything. When a feller takes a doze after he's once waked up morning, he gets duller and duller until after a time he's no more use awake than asleep. After man began to study about what he was moved to do he began to lost track of the hints he kept gettin'; but the animals, and especially the little fellers who have to live by their wits, they get busy just the minute word comes to 'em. It allus pays to keep one eye on the little fellers. Tom Smith didn't lose a goat."

"I'm glad of that," sez I, "but I'd be more glad to hear that he had outgrown goats altogether. What do you reckon is goin' to become of him?"

Josiah shook his head. "His kind die young," sez he. "He can pull again' the collar with the best of 'em, and for a long stretch, too; but then if he does happen to get a jerk or a kick, he's mighty likely to tear up things so they can't be patched. I own I don't knew what'd be best for him to do."

"Does he come here often?" sez I.

"Well, not as often as he'd be welcome," sez Josiah. "Kate is deep-hearted, Happy Hawkins, and it grieves me to think of what's most likely to happen to her. Still, she's a whole lot of our nature that keeps on workin', as true as the sap goin' up in the tree, and the older I get the less I feel like takin' charge of any other body's life."

Kate had wintered through in great shape and hidin' out had put her senses in mighty fine tune. Wild turkeys seemed to think a sight of her neighbourhood and it had kept her busy dodgin' the hunters, but it was mighty agreeable to watch her nostrils dilate and her eyes sharpen at the slightest sound. Her muscles were full of spring, she could toss a piece o' lead mighty close to what she aimed at, her fingers reached whatever she sent 'em after without any help from her eyes, and I had to admit that she had sure enough qualified to be the wife of an outlaw. She wore the fawn-skin suit all the time now, for her father was better and she was out doors constant.

She was mighty fidgetty that afternoon and delivered her answers sort of off-hand, like the way a hungry hoss kicks at a fly, and after a bit she sez: "Do you think 'at Tom Smith wants to see you?"

"Oh," sez I, "so it's him you're expectin'."

She pinked up a little, tossed her head and then nodded it.

"Well," sez I, "he's one o' these fickle fellers who never care much about seein' a body unless he's got some sort of a job for 'em, and unless you can think of some way that I'd be useful to him, why, I think I'll trot along home."

"He's no such a thing," sez she, bristlin' up in a flash. "He'd do anything on earth for you, but he don't want to get you into any trouble. He'll be here in a few minutes, now."

"Guess I'll stay and nod to him," sez I, and sure enough in about ten minutes a feller came lopin' up on a wiry little cayuse, and seemed surprised to see me.

I doubt some if I'd known him if we had just chanced to pass on the road for he hadn't touched a razor to his face since the last time I'd seen him, and had a purty fair stand of youthful whiskers.

"If you keep company with goats much longer, Tom Smith," sez I, "you'll be sproutin' horns, too."

He was glad enough to see me and told me some o' the trouble he'd been havin' with the goats, which he claimed was the provokin'est critters on earth. He said they'd run ten miles just to climb a hill and chuckle at the poor human what had to chase 'em; but that he'd had a Mexican boy helpin' him out through the winter.

Here are some of the many features applying exclusively to Dunlop Traction Tread Bicycle tires—the only tire with a built-into tread—the V-shaped top of the tire is made by iron moulds after the tire proper is completed. That means a skid-resisting surface which cannot tear off, as so often happens with ordinary-made bicycle tires.

The only bicycle tire that is practically puncture-proof. Your wheel is making revolutions on a series of "V's" which contain no air. Thus the air-containing portion of the tire is kept clear of the ground.

Don't fail to equip your mount with Dunlop Traction Tread, or Dunlop Special, the rubber-studded bicycle tire. B113

UNSTRUNG, UNSTEADY SHAKY NERVES
MAY BE TONED UP BY USING MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. John Harper, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for the heart and nervous system. I was confined to a grocery store for twelve years, and had to give up business, as I became terribly run down and nervous, and had heart trouble, and I am sure I am gaining very fast now. I feel that nothing did me any good until I tried your Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am positive they will cure me. The nerves of one hand would tremble and then seem to go numb so that I could not write or sew. Now my hand is quite steady, as you can see by my handwriting. This is a big change which delights me so much for I thought all was done that could be done. I was about to give up in despair when I tried this last remedy, and even after I had only taken half a box the change started to come."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the enfeebled, enervated, exhausted, overworked system to full constitutional power.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

JOE'S NEW HOUSE

Stone the Builders Rejected Became the Foundation of Structure of Comfort.

By FLORENCE LILLIAN HENDERSON.

There were two loyal hearts to smile encouragingly after Walter Rose and wish him an earnest God-speed when he left Riverdale. Mercy Darrow bade him adieu through swimming eyes, but she had given him words of blissful cheer and comfort. Little Joe Dockrill, cripple as he was, lifted himself on his crutches and waved encouragingly and hopefully.

"You know what is best, dear," Walter's fiancee had told him. "If you think the prospects in the city are encouraging, you should go there."

"It is only for a year, sweetheart," said Walter. "You and your parents are practically dependent on your married sister. All I have is the lot and the old house, ready to fall down any day. I could not think of taking you there."

"It would be home with you, anywhere, dear," declared Mercy bravely.

"Yes, but the old folks have a comfortable home. I stuck to father from a sense of duty, because he was attached to the old place. If I can get enough ahead to put up even a small cottage I can always earn a comfortable living. Look after little Joe, won't you, Mercy?" added the stalwart, honest-faced fellow, with a fond glance at the little cripple.

Spent Several Evenings Going Over the Plans.

"Don't you fear!" chirped in Joe himself valiantly. "I'll look after myself. Why, you've fitted me out like a prince, Uncle Walter, and I'm going to make you proud of me. I'll help get that house up you want so bad. I've got an idea and I'm going to carry it out."

Pretty patient Mercy went home rather mournfully. Little Joe returned home, the honest tear drops in his eyes, but whistling cheerily, for he had some very hopeful ideas under that bright, curly pate of his.

Walter Rose was not "Uncle Walter" at all, although the little fellow called him that. Joe was a waif, an orphan city lad turned out of charitable institutions when he had outgrown the age limit, wandered to Riverdale and run down by an automobile and crippled for life. For two months the homeless little fellow was kept in the hospital. Then he was again turned adrift, his sole assets a pair of crutches.

It was tender-hearted Mercy, true to name and nature, who took him in, but her sister resented the intrusion. Then Mercy spoke to Walter about the friendless outcast. Walter took him to the old house. His father was very old and feeble. He needed constant attention, and took a great fancy to the bright, jolly little stranger.

Joe was so cheery, so accommodating, so handy, despite his crippled condition, that within a month Walter felt that he had secured a treasure. Little Joe made the long evenings lively. He was a faithful attendant upon aged Mr. Rose, and nearly the last smile upon the lips of the old man was for the lad who had so brightened his final hours on earth.

Joe had taken a great interest in the plans Walter had drawn for the new house. When the latter decided to go to the city, he wanted to arrange for the care of his little charge with a neighbor.

"No, Uncle Walter; no, positively!" asserted Joe. "I've planned it all out. Let me stay here, only leave old Dobbin and the wagon. I can't do much real work, but I can drive, and I'll pick up enough odd jobs about town to keep me comfortably and sometimes to put aside for that famous new house you're going to build. See if I don't!"

Walter agreed to this, but with some reluctancy and misgivings as he looked at the thin, wistful face and crippled condition of his charge. And now Joe was the only occupant of the lonely old house that shook dangerously when the wind blew hard, and only a portion of which was at all habitable.

"I'm going to set up light housekeeping in the dining room and move my cot there," planned Joe. "Just as soon as I get it fixed just as I want it —then for the plans of the new house."

Daytimes after Joe drove down to the depot and waited around for a chance to haul a trunk or carry a valise or package in the old wagon. He had to have help with the heavier freight, but then his charges were light. At the end of a month Joe had enough ready cash to provide for his limited living needs. Then he started in on what he called his "grand idea!"

He spent several evenings going over the plans for the new house. He measured and calculated. With the aid of a builder's book he had picked up, Joe was able to figure out just what kind and how much of lumber, brick, stone and the like was needed. He even got so far as to actually estimate the number of nails in the anticipated construction!

Every week he wrote to Walter in the city. Three times a week he drove around to see Mercy. She had no time to visit him, for she had to slave hard to please her narrow-minded, complaining sister. Joe was so cheery and courageous that he brightened up her spirits considerably, despite the fact that her lover did not write the most hopeful letters in the world.

With the end of the year Walter Rose wrote that he had not done as well in the city as he had anticipated. He was homesick, however, and was coming back to Riverdale, to be among friends, even if he had to work a little harder and wait a little longer for that new house.

Walter was puzzled at the gaiety and suppressed excitement of little Joe as the latter met him at the depot with old Dobbin and the wagon. The animal looked well kept, the vehicle was freshly painted. Walter sighed as they came in sight of the old house. It was a discouraging home-coming.

"I had hoped when I came back here," he told his companion, "that I would surely have earned and saved enough to provide a neat home nest for Mercy and the old folks. Instead of that I have less than $500, a mere beginning. Why, what's that?"

Well might Walter stare! The old place looked like a lumber yard. Piled up symetrically were old boards, laths, shingles, rubble stone and dimension stone sufficient to lay a pretentious foundation, and heap after heap of bricks.

"It's the result of my grand idea!" cried Joe proudly. "You know they are doing a lot of tearing down and rebuilding in the new factory town of Blairsville, eight miles away. What you see yonder is waste stuff thrown away—nails that they let drop to the ground, stone, brick and lumber that the wrecking crews bury or burn up. I've picked up over two hundred loads that they were glad to give me to get rid of, and, say, Uncle Walter! there's enough bricks—I've counted them—to build as fine a house as was ever put up in Riverdale!"

"You blessed little fellow!" said Mercy, when an hour later she knew that the new house was a certainty, and tears of joy fell upon the bright golden head as she kissed Joe gratefully.

And, lo! the stone that the builders had rejected had become the foundation of a structure of comfort, love and happiness!

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

IN FIVE GATHERED SECTIONS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Skirts made of a succession of ruffles are quite the thing and have the advantage of being new this season. The design is suitable for silks, voiles and all the soft summery fabrics. The waist is preferably made of the same material, or a bolero of the material with an underblouse of something else is worn with the skirt. Hemstitching may be used to finish the lower edges of the ruffle sections, or, if preferred, a cord may be used. The lower edge of each ruffle is turned over the cord and then the gathered upper edge of the ruffle below is stitched underneath at the same time that the cord is stitched.

Even the hem of skirts nowadays is cord finished, or sometimes bound with the material, as in the illustration. For medium size, 3¼ yards of material 36 inches wide would be required. The pattern, No. 7,159, can be obtained in six sizes, from 22 to 32 inches waist measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Lakefield Council in Regular Session

Tenders Will Be Asked for Firemen's Supplies—Court of Revision

The following are the minutes of a regular meeting of the Municipal Council of the corporation of the village of Lakefield, held in the town hall on Monday, June 14th, 1915:

There were present, H. G. Fitzgerald, Esq., Reeve, and Councillors Charlton, Griffin, Kennedy and Madill.

The minutes of last regular meeting and of special meeting of 11th of June were read and approved.

A communication from the secretary of the Hydro-Electric Railway Association of Ontario was read and received.

An application from the township of Smith for the use of a pick plough was read and received.

It was moved by Coun. Griffin, seconded by Coun. Charlton, that the township of Smith be granted the use of the pick plough on condition that the pick be sharpened on its return and Smith Council be responsible for any damage.—Carried.

A deputation of firemen addressed the Council, stating the requirements of the fire brigade and the rate of wages for their service.

Moved by Coun. Charlton, seconded by Coun Griffin, that the Council supply rubber coats, 8 pair rubber boots and one ladder at least 35 feet long; also pay the wage scale asked for by the fire chief, and that the Council ask for tenders for the coats and hats.—Carried.

The Finance committee presented a report recommending the payment of the following accounts: Gerald Fitzgerald, blacksmithing, $2.95; Lakefield News, printing, $3.95; Jno. Charlton, 306 ft. plank, $7.65; J. M. Bygott, teaming, $15.55; Robt. White, 78 hours at 15c., $11.40; Wm. Childs, rep. to flag pole, $5.00; L. Madill, 60 hrs. at 40c., $27.60; Jno. Millage, 59 hrs. at 40c., $23.60. Jas. Northcott, 59 hrs. at 15c., $8.85; Arch. Quinn, 29 hrs. at 15c., $4.35; Jno. Kemp, 29 hrs. at 15c., $4.35; T. Sabatino, 29 hrs. at 15c., $3.60; I. Watson, 47 hrs. at 15c., $7.05; J. Morrison, 24 hrs. at 15c., $3.60; D. Alford, 24 hrs. at 15c., $3.60; D. Darling, labour, $11.98; Jas. Sage, 10 hrs. at 15c., $1.50; Jas. Long 18 hrs. at 15c., $2.70; Wm. Edwards, 10 hrs. at 5c., $1.50; S. McKibbon, 5 hrs. at 15c., 75c.

The report was received and adopted on motion of Councillors Kennedy and Madill.

The Council then adjourned.

Minutes of a meeting of the Court of Revision for the village of Lakefield held in the town hall on Monday, June 14th, 1915, at 7.30 p.m.

There were present H. P. Fitzgerald, Esq., Reeve, and Councillors Charlton, Griffin, Kennedy and Madill, all of whom made the required declaration of office.

The following appeals were heard and disposed of:

1st. Arthur Payne, subject, assessed too high.

Moved by Coun. Griffin, seconded by Coun. Charlton, that the assessment of Arthur Payne's property be confirmed.—Carried.

2nd. E. R. Tate, subject, valuation too high.

Moved by Coun. Charlton, seconded by Coun. Griffin, that the assessment of Mr. E. R. Tate be confirmed.—Carried.

3rd. J. A. Galvin, subject, assessment for dog.

Moved by Coun. Kennedy, seconded by Coun. Madill, that J. A. Galvin's assessment for a dog be struck off as he has no dog.—Carried.

4th. W. D. E. Strickland, subject, assessment too high.

Moved by Coun. Kennedy, seconded by Coun. Madill, that W. D. E. Strickland's appeal being received too late, this court cannot legally deal with it.—Carried.

The Court of Revision then adjourned.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

BY THE SEASHORE.

A holiday by the seashore is the form of vacation most appreciated by thousands of people from the inland centres. Portland and its environs abound with attractions to suit all tastes, from the quiet retirement of Cape Elizabeth and Cushings Island to Old Orchard and Kennebunk, popular chiefly for their beaches and surf bathing. "Mountains of New England and the Sea," issued by the Grand Trunk Railway system contain full information, complete list of hotels and boarding houses, etc, and may be had on application to C. E. ASSERT GERMANY CALLS BOYS OF 17 TO SERVICE.

HARVEY, N.D., June 23.—Practically captives in a small town of Alsace, Germany, within fifteen miles of the firing line, for six months, Mrs. Albert Weill and her three daughters of this city have just reached home. That German boys of only 17 years have been called to service in the German army, is the story brought home by these women. In the district where they are located back of the German lines, very few men remained, those remaining being unfit for military service.

Wool is Bringing a High Price--Butter Holds its Position With Practically No Recession--Hogs Are Down--Wheat Now $1.15---Additional Comment.

MARKET FEATURES.

Live hogs—$8.85.
Wool—Prices high.
Bacon and ham—Firm.
Cheese—Firmer.

The worst fears of the farmers have lifted as June gradually unrolled itself, bringing plenty of moisture and a sufficiency of heat. There might have been a little more sunshine received, but rain was most needed and therefore most necessary. Every road radiating from Peterborough stretches along as a thin ribbon of dusty grey through endless fields of rich green wheat, barley, rye, oats and other crops. On every hand the country presents a pleasant prospect smiling back to faces from which all traces of anxiety have passed. There is a rich promise of an abundant harvest, a cornucopia of field products. Pea fields show tiny pods, potatoes are well developed, and corn is sprouting lustily.

Strawberries are freely offered at 10 cents a box; raspberries promise a good crop. Mother Nature teems with manifold bounties. Let us hope the promise of a great harvest will reach its full fruition.

Dairy Products, Etc.

Butter holds up firmly. As one prominent retailer remarked, the price is abnormal for this season and none of the present generation has ever seen June-end butter bringing almost 30 cents. If the price holds to the midsummer turn there will be no low figures this season. Cheese regained a little ground this week. It was reported firmer after a steady decline to 15 cents. It is not expected to rebound to 18 cents, at least not just yet. Eggs are gradually gathering up firmness.

Butter, dairy	26-28c.
Butter, creamery	30 to 32c
Cheese	20 to 25c.
Eggs, new laid, doz.	21-23c
Turkeys, lb.	25c
Geese	18c
Ducks 1b.	20c
Chickens, per pair	$1.40, $1.60
Cream, qt.	33c to 35c

Live hogs at $8.85 indicate the decline from $9.25 of two weeks ago. And while this price is easier, bacon and hams are much firmer under an increased demand. All pork lines are firm and are selling freely this week.

Spring lamb is a feature of the market and is retailing at from 25 to 30 cents a pound.

Beef cuts are steady. Drovers report that there are practically no offerings in this vicinity and apparently most of the wholesale supply is coming from Toronto.

Bacon, per lb.	28c to 30c
Ham	25c to 30c
Cooked hams	35c.
Pork	15c to 22c
Spare ribs	10c.
Spring lamb	25c to 30c
Veal	20c to 23c
Rib roast	20c-25c.
Porterhouse steak	30c-32c
Sirloin steak	25c-28c
Round steak	22c-25c
Live hogs, cwt.	$8.85

Grain and Hay.

Wheat has continued as the leading backslider and Ontario prices are now around $1.15, with no bolstering source in sight. Oats are also easier with the best price hovering at 60 cents or a fraction above it. Bran is down to $1.00 a ton, with the demand rather light. Barley is also less firm in its quotations.

Wheat, per bushel	$1.15
Barley	70c
Oats	60c
Peas	$2.15
Shorts, ton	$20.00
Bran	$25.00
Buckwheat, per bush	85c.
Bran	$28.00
Baled hay	$19 to $20
Loose hay	$20 and $23
Straw	$13.00

Flour.

Five Roses, Purity and Royal Household, per bag $4.00
Reindeer, Cream of the West, Quaker, etc. $3.60

Second patents are 30 cents lower. Flour has followed to a certain extent the downward moves of wheat. But at these prices the market is distinctly easy. It begins to look, says the Canadian Grocer, that the American wheat crop will reach 950,000,000 bushels, made up of 676,000,000 bushels of winter wheat, and 276,000,000 bushels of spring wheat. This total of 950,000,000 bushels is against that of last year of 891,000,000.

Wool and Hides.

The high prices for wool reached during the past week are still being maintained and receipts are being absorbed at current quotations. Many wool buyers have been busy of late scrambling for the offerings. One man stated that he had bought extensively in this section, having made the deals by telephone with farmers. When the buyer appeared in person he found that many of the offerings he had secured had been sold by buyers driving through, appearing in person and offering higher prices. This representative of a big house in Toronto was not highly impressed with what he called rural honour in his regard.

This is the big wool month and prices are holding up well since the removal of the embargo boosted them.

Hallam of Toronto says: Wool has been forced up by the competition of dealers until it has reached a point where some of the Canadian woollen mills will not take it on, claiming that they can purchase New Zealand and Australian wools (much of which is being imported) laid down at their mills, at a lower price on a scoured basis than they can purchase Canadian wools, while the present prices on Canadian wool is too high for the United States market, as they can lay down the Australian wool at their mills 7 1-2 per cent. cheaper than the Canadian manufacturer, which is much cheaper, figured on a scoured basis, than Canadian wool. The growers generally are marketing their clip, taking advantage of the extremely high prices now being paid.

Wool unwashed, coarse	21c
Wool, unwashed, fine	23c
Wool, washed, coarse	31
Wool, washed, fine	33c
Sheep skins, each	1.00 to $1.75
Calf skins, lb.	12c. to 13c.
Beef skins, lb.	10c. to 12c.
Tallow, rough, lb.	2c.
Tallow, refined, lb.	6c.

The Tea Market.

The tea market is again firm, although there is no actual advance in price. At the London auction on Tuesday, prices were reported 'very firm.' Teas are said to be of poorer quality, the market is therefore strong on the advances of the last two weeks, and while we are thankful for this lull in the storm it does not imply, by any means, a cessation of rise in prices. Calcutta auction opened a day or two ago on a par with London; prices were very firm and it is reported that Russia is a keen buyer. All rates are exceedingly high. There is no change to report in the Canadian situation. Manufacturers have made no further move to advance prices at present time. Canadian Grocer has pointed out now for some time that with the buying price being paid by Canadian concerns in London and Ceylon the prices to retailers in this country must soon be advanced still more if the tea men are going to make any money and maintain quality.

find ocean room for shipment. During the week, oats have notched a trifle and corn is up a cent or two. Oats, C.W. No. 2, 55c to 55½; No. 3, 53c to 53c; No. 1 feed, 51c to 52c; Ontario oats, 54c to 55c; American corn, 85c to 86½c; Canadian corn, 72c; peas, $1.80 to $1.60; barley, malting, 70c to 72c; feed, 65c; rye, $1.05 to $1.10; buckwheat, 75c to 77c. On the Montreal market quotations rule as follows: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 55½c; extra No. 1 feed, 55½c; local white, 52c to 53c; buckwheat, 73c to 75c; feed barley, 72½c.

EGGS AND POULTRY

The storage season is over and egg receipts from now on will be taken care of by the retail trade. Receipts have declined greatly, however, and the market should continue to improve. Several thousand cases have gone forward to the Old Country and there is a chance of more profitable export business this season. The price in the country runs at 19½c. Wholesalers quote to the trade here as follows: Eggs in cartons, 24c to 25c; selects, 23c to 24c; No. 1, 22c to 23c; No. 2, 12c to 13c. At Montreal straight gathered stock is selling at 21c and selected stock 24c to 25c.

Poultry quotations follow: Old fowl, live, 12c to 14c; dressed, 14c to 16c; spring broilers, live, 25c to 30c; chickens, 17c to 22c dressed; old turkeys, live, 15c to 20c; turkeys, dressed, 25c to 28c; ducks, 17c to 19c.

HIDES AND WOOL

The market is advancing. Hides, cured, 16c to 17c; part cured, 15c to 16c; green, 13½c to 14½c; calf skins, 16½c to 17½; part cured, 15½c to 16½c; deacons, 75c to $1 each; horse hides, No. 1, $3.75 to $4.25; No. 2, $3.25 to $3 each; sheepskins, 75c to $5; horse hair, 35c to 40c a lb.

Washed wool, coarse, is quoted 30c to 33c; medium, 33c to 36c; tub washed, coarse, 31c to 33c; fine, 33c to 35c; washed fleece, fine, 35c to 38c; washed rejects, 25c to 29c; unwashed, coarse, 25c to 28c; medium, 26c to 27c; fine, 27c to 29c.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

We quote as follows: Strawberries, box, 10c to 15c; potatoes, Ontario, bag, 45c Delaware, bag, 60c; new potatoes, bbl., $4 to $4.50.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The heavy make of cheese has been the biggest factor in knocking prices recently. There is a disposition in the trade to believe that perhaps prices have been reduced to an unwarranted degree. A large part of the exports, which are three times as great as last year, are in fulfilment of army orders, so there cannot be a great accumulation of cheese on the English market. Another factor that must be considered, however, is the heavy export from United States ports. On the Montreal market, 16c is an extreme price for finest Western and Eastern cheese is quoted 15c to 15½c for fine.

The butter market is characterized by a better undertone than a week ago. Demand has improved for both storage and present consumption, and there has been a fractional advance in price. British Columbia seems to be filling her requirements from Saskatchewan and Alberta, causing an advance in price there, which may make it possible to ship some Eastern creamery butter to Western Canada. The situation, however, is not so promising in the case of butter as of cheese.

LIVE STOCK

Trading was more lively at the Union Stock Yards this past week. Packers were in the market again. An additional feature of the business was the buying by commissioners on French account. The Frenchmen purchased only 200 head last week, but one of them stated to The Toronto Globe that it was their intention to buy on a larger scale this week if suitable beeves were offered. Trade started out with a good swing right in the first of the week by an advance of 15c a cwt. as compared with the week previous. Some good butcher stock sold as high as $7.85 and the bulk of choice weighty steers ran at $8.15 to $8.60. Canners were in strong demand and the stock trade quiet. Other quotations follow:

Handy choice steers, $8 to $8.40; butcher steers, good, $7.60 to $8; com. to med., $6.75 to $7.60; heifers, $6.75 to $8.10; choice cows, $6.75 to $7.25; com. to good, $5 to $6.75; butcher bulls, $6.25 to $7.00; feeders, $7 to $7.40; stockers, $5.00 to $7.25; canners and cutters, $4 to $5.50.

Milch cows were in fair demand for export to the United States, choice ones bringing $35 to $100; com. and med., $45 to $65; springers, $60 to $100. Calves ranged from $3 to $10, according to size and quality.

In the sheep line, spring lambs were firm, light sheep easy and heavy and bucks slow. Spring lambs, cwt., $10.50 to $14; light ewes, $6 to $6.25; heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5; culls, $3 to $4.25.

Packers are now quoting hogs $9 to $9.05 f.o.b., and $9.60 to $9.65 weighed off cars. They are talking lower prices for this week.

INDIAN RIVER NEWS

Special to The Examiner:

INDIAN RIVER, June 22.—As the fishing season is at hand and many are taking advantage of the occasion, Mr. Arthur Devlin and Richard Sullivan caught two very good ones at the mill dam on last Sunday.

Mr. M. Meade is building an extension wall to the barn of Mr. Wm. O'Leary.

Mr. Vincent McDonald, of Ottawa College, is home for a vacation.

Mr. John Devlin has just completed his new stables.

Mr. John McIntyre had the misfortune of losing his month-old colt which was ripped by a horned beast last Sunday.

The game of baseball on Saturday evening lost between Indian River East and West was as good as was expected. Donegan was in the box for the West and pitched fast ball. Mr. John Howley was in the box for the East, and although a new man pitched well. Mr. John Meade and Wm. Guerin of the veterans were good. Mr. John Sullivan said as Hon. President he was pleased with the game, and he thought Indian River could meet some of the teams of the surrounding district and have a match. He said he had a challenge from the Bethel team and had decided to play them a match on Tuesday, 29th June, on Bethel grounds. Mr. John Smith and Joseph Whibbs are two promising catchers.

Mr. Willis Yaux is on the sick list.

Mrs. Dennis Sullivan and Mrs. W. H. Allen are taking a trip to Chicago on Thursday next, to visit their brothers and sisters.

FARM AND DAIRY MARKETS

TORONTO, June 21.—"The one thing needed to revive trade is a notable victory for the allies," said a business man the other day; and many share in his belief. It is true that the present trade depression is partly psychological and notable victories would encourage optimism. But it must not be forgotten that the depression is not altogether due to war, that it started before the war began and was then attributed, and rightly, to over speculation. Before legitimate industry can again assume its former proportions much of the water must be squeezed out of real estate values. These values have been reduced somewhat, but the general tendency is to hold on, and who can blame the holders. It is regrettable that some must lose in order that prosperity may return for the many, but such is the case.

One of the most notable improvements in the farmers' market this week is the increase in wool quotations. The embargo prohibiting the export of wool from Canada worked beautifully for the wool manufacturers, but it was most discouraging to wool growers. Permission to ship wool to the United States on certain conditions has improved the situation immensely. In other lines wheat continues to toboggan downwards; coarse grains are fairly steady, in fact there have been few changes as a result of the week's operations.

WHEAT

The weather all over the wheat growing areas of America and in India, has been exceptionally favorable to the crop of 1915. This factor, combined with an increased acreage, is responsible for the big slump in wheat. This week we must record another decline. No. 1 Northern is quoted $1.27½ to $1.30½; No. 2, $1.25 to $1.28; No. 3, $1.22 to $1.25; Ontario wheat is in indifferent demand at $1.14 to $1.16.

COARSE GRAINS

A quiet trade has been done. The greatest difficulty confronting exporters is not to get bids on their grains, but to

TERRIFIC CANNONADE ON WESTERN FRONT

THE RUSSIANS WITHDRAW IN ORDERLY FASHION

FIERCE ARTILLERY DUELS ARE A FEATURE OF THE WESTERN FIGHTING

Several Sisters and Nurses Killed in Arras by German Shells--French Gunners Reply and Heavy Cannonade From Arras to Souchez Goes On For Hours---German Attack Easily Beaten Off.

TERRIBLE LOSSES AT THE DARDANELLES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 24.—Several sisters and nurses were killed by German shells that fell on the St. Sacrament Hospital during the heavy bombardment of Arras yesterday. Shells tumbled several buildings in ruins. The French gunners replied, and an artillery duel lasted for several hours. All along the battle front, from Arras to a point north of Souchez, a most violent cannonading has been going on since early yesterday.

Despatches reported an unsuccessful attempt by the enemy to drive in the French line near Dompierre. The Germans first exploded a mine under a section of French trenches and then shelled the adjacent earthworks. The French artillery sprayed the Germans before the trenches with deadly fire. The Germans attacked in considerable force but were easily repulsed.

PARIS, June 24.—Thousands of bodies literally carpeted the sandy slopes of the Gallipoli Peninsula in a seven-day bloody struggle at the Dardanelles, an official eye-witness statement reported to-day.

"Turkish trenches were piled high with bodies," said the eye-witness. "Often bursting shells on the slopes played queer roles, burying the dead under a shower of dirt and sand loosened by their explosion."

Recounting the fighting from June 1 to June 8, the eye-witness declared that the Allies pressed forward from 150 to 400 yards on a front of a mile and one-quarter.

FISHING BOATS SUNK.

LONDON, June 24.—Shipping circles received advices to-day that six small fishing vessels were shelled and sunk off the coast of Scotland by a German U boat.

TORONTO, June 24.—Sergeant Percy Ives, of the Royal Grenadiers (Third Battalion), who is among those gazetted for the distinguished conduct medal, died in a German hospital on May 9th, according to a letter received by his mother here just the other day.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 24.—A considerable increase in Inland Revenue receipts for May is recorded as compared with the same month in 1914. It is doubtless due to the war tax. There was actually a falling-off in the consumption of liquors and tobacco in Canada in recent months. The total income for the month was $1,844,644, an increase of $203,269 from May last.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 24.—"We have enough troops under arms at London, Niagara and Barriefield and other parts of Canada to discourage any attempt at invasions of Canada at any point by any armed parties of Germans or Austrians from the United States," declared an official of the Militia Department this morning, discussing the uneasiness at various points in Ontario in this regard, following the dynamiting of the Peabody Factory and attempts at Windsor and Meaford Armouries. It was learned, however, that the Militia authorities had taken special precautions at all points to guard factories where spies might slip in and do untold damage to workers and munitions with explosives.

HOSPITAL SUPPLIES NEEDED

By Queen's Canadian Military Hospital

The Queen's Canadian Military Hospital was organised at the commencement of the war by Canadians in London, England, for the special purpose of treating Canadian wounded. Sir William Osler, Bart., F.R.S., is Physician-in-Chief, and Lieut.-Col. Donald Armour, F.R.C.S., Surgeon-in-Chief; and the hospital is managed by a representative committee of which Mr. George Macaren Brown is chairman. It is beautifully situated at Beechborough Park, which is being kindly loaned for the purpose by Sir Arthur and Lady Markham.

The hospital, which is supported by voluntary contributions of friends in England and Canada, is urgently in need of funds and of all kinds of surgical supplies and dressings; especially gauze bandages. Any person desiring to assist the work of the hospital in caring for the Canadian wounded will kindly send funds or supplies to Lieut.-Col. Donald Armour, the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital, Beechborough Park, Shorncliffe, England.

An Early Settler of Galway

Mr. Flaherty is the Owner of 700 Acres of Land

Mr. John Flaherty of Mount Irwin, Post Office, Galway Township, is in the city. He will remain here until to-morrow, visiting friends and acquaintances. Mr. Flaherty is numbered among the early settlers of Galway, having resided in that Township for upwards of fifty-five years. He is the owner of seven hundred acres of land, which he uses for farming and ranching purposes.

MR. T. H. ADAMS BACK FROM WEST

Mr. T. H. Adams returned home last evening from a three-months' trip to the West. He was in most of the points in the three Western Provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, and declares that prospects for crops this winter have never been better in the history of the West. Business conditions, he states, should improve if the crop is taken off as well as it was put in.

PTE STUART HAYES IS NOW REPORTED DEAD OF WOUNDS

Father of 57th Boy Receives Word From France From Private Source That His Son Passed Away as Result of Injuries

GUNNER KING WOUNDED

The following intelligence from Guelph will be received with deep regret by the many friends of Pte. Hayes in Peterborough:

Guelph, June 23—Judge Hayes has received word that his son, Private Stuart Hayes, has died as the result of wounds received at St. Julien. He had been variously reported as wounded and missing, but the Judge received word from France to-day through private sources that his son is dead. Deceased was in his 21st year, a native of Peterborough, and educated at St. Jerome's College, Berlin. He was employed in the Bank of Montreal, but afterwards took up engineering and was working with a C.P.R. survey party when the war broke out. He immediately joined the Peterborough Rangers, and went with the first coningent to the front. His mother has died here since he left for the front.

WOUNDED AGAIN.

Gunner William King of Peterborough, is now reported to be suffering from dangerous wounds in the head, received in action June 22nd.

On May 14th the parents of Gunner King received notice that he was wounded in the shoulder by shrapnel the second day of the Battle of Langemarck, in April. Two weeks ago he again went to the front and he is now in No 1 General Hospital at Etretat. He was with the 1st Field Artillery Brigade and enlisted in the 24th Field Battery from here.

A letter received from Gunner King by his parents on Tuesday, last, said he was feling fine. That was the day he was so dangerously wounded.

PRISONER OF WAR.

In to-day's list appears the name of Pte. David Cummings of the 57th detachment, who is unofficially reported prisoner-of-war. Pte. Cummings was officially reported wounded after the Langemarck fight and later Pte. Heber Rogers mentioned him as being a prisoner in Giessen, Germany, where Pte. Rogers now is.

DETENTION LED TO SUICIDE

Miss Tuer, of Port Hope, Takes Her Own Life—Was Detained in Germany

TORONTO, June 24.—Melancholy, which seised her during an eight-weeks' detainment in Germany after the war broke out, caused Miss Tuer, whose relatives reside in Port Hope, to commit suicide in Toronto yesterday afternoon. About 1.30 p.m. yesterday deceased left a private hospital in the west end where she has been undergoing treatment, and purchased some carbolic acid in a down-town store. Then she went to a lavatory in the store of the Robert Simpson Co., where the poison was swallowed.

Those standing in the vicinity of the entrance to the lavatory were startled about 3 o'clock by seeing Miss Tuer collapse as she stepped from the door. The police ambulance hurried her to St. Michael's Hospital, where she died within a few minutes after admittance. The bottle was found beside her.

Miss Tuer, who was about 40 years of age, had been travelling in Germany, and was detained by the authorities for eight weeks. Miss Tuer immediately made her way to her relatives in Port Hope but the detention caused a nervous break down.

Her body was removed to the Morgue, but there will not be an inquest.

SERGT. FRED EDWARDS, of the 57th detachment of the 39th Battalion which will soon be in England.

PTE. STUART HAYES, of the 57th detachment. His father, Judge Hayes of Guelph, has received word that he died of wounds following the St. Julien fight.

LIEUT. ROGERS GOING DIRECTLY TO THE FRONT

Local Officer Has Been Appointed Transport Officer With the 1st Canadian Division and Will Leave Next Week

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Another Peterborough officer is off to the front next week in the person of Lieut. Claude H. Rogers, of the 57th Regiment and president of the Peterborough Canoe Company. Lieut. Rogers, who has been in training for some time with the Canadian Army Medical Corps is going directly to the front, having been appointed transport officer with the first Canadian Division. He is spending a few days at his home here before sailing.

A western exchange says of Capt. James Dennistoun, formerly of Peterborough:

Capt. James Dennistoun, who left Winnipeg with the 34th Fort Garry, is now attached to the 60th Rifles (Eighth Battalion) and is on the firing line. He is a son of Col. R. M. Dennistoun and is a graduate of the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont. His brother, Lieut. John R., who also left with the Fort Garrys, is attached to one of the cycle corps in France and has been at the front for several months.

The fee for membership is $1 for Associate and $2 for Active. Any person desiring to join may do so by notifying any of the committee, or the treasurer, Mrs. F. L. Roy, 308 Rubidge Street.

KAWARTHA CHAPTER, I.O.D.E.

The entire proceeds of the Bridge and Garden Party at Judge Huycke's on Monday afternoon and evening, are to be donated towards the purchase of sand-bags for use at the front, and for which urgent requests have been secured. Each company is asking for 1,000 bags. In many places they are used instead of trenches, as they can be quickly placed and act as an excellent shelter from behind which to shoot. One dollar pays for six sand-bags.

TWO PETERBORO' BOYS MENTIONED IN DESPATCHES

Major J. H. Fessenden of the Army Service Corps and Lieut. Jack Dennistoun of Cyclist Corps Share in the Honours

BOTH ARE WELL KNOWN

Two Peterborough boys were among those mentioned yesterday by Sir John French for gallant and meritorious conduct in the field. The two are Major J. H. Fessenden of the Royal Army Service Corps and Lieut. Jack Dennistoun of the Canadian Divisional Cyclists Corps. Major Fessenden is a son of Mr. Cortez Fessenden of the Collegiate Institute, while Lieut. Dennistoun is the second son of Lt.-Col. R. M. Dennistoun, formerly of Peterborough and the 57th Regt. and now in command of the 53rd Western Battalion Lieut. Jack Dennistoun was born in Peterborough and received his early education in this city. His brother, Capt. Jas. Dennistoun, enlisted with the Fort Garry Horse in the first contingent, and is now at the front with the 8th Battalion.

Will Open New Sunday School

Interesting Event Will Take Place in Brownton This Evening—City Officials Present

Another leaf will be added to the book of Salvation Army history this evening when a new Sunday School will be opened in Brownton. The new structure, which is located on Chamberlen street west, will be known as Byersville Sunday School. It is a frame building with a cement basement. It will accommodate between three and four hundred children. This is the second Sunday School that has been opened by the Salvation Army of this city within the past three months.

The event this evening will be marked by the presence of a number of civic officials, including Ald. G. W. Greer, who will occupy the chair. Ald. Duffus and other members of the City Council will be present. Tea will be served up until eight o'clock. An elaborate and interesting programme has been arrange and those who avail themselves of the opportunity to attend, will find nothing lacking in the way of entertainment.

BANK CLEARINGS

The clearings for the week ending to-day totalled $349,976, a decrease over the previous week of $41,690. The corresponding week last month the clearings were $351,352, while in the same week last year they totalled $392,982.

THE WEATHER

Cool weather for the latter half of June still prevails. This morning's temperature was 41 degrees; yesterday, 44 degrees. The highest yesterday was but 66 degrees.

RUSSIANS RETIRE IN PERFECT ORDER

SAYS GERMANY HAS NO CHANCE TO BEAT RUSSIA

Enemy Realizes Now That the Czar's Troops Should Have Been Dealt With First-Have 1000 Miles for Manoeuvring Purposes

A HOPELESS TASK

LONDON, June 24.—Discussing the situation which necessitated the Russian retirement in Galicia, the Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent says: "The Russians now realize that the war is still in its preliminary stages. The Galician campaign shows that Germany at least has realized the mistake made earlier in the war of ignoring Russia, which really of all the Allies was best prepared for war, and therefore ought to have been dealt with first. The Germans can repair their initial error only by bringing Russia to a decisive battle, but Russia has a thousand miles for manoeuvring ground before the vital parts of the nation can be reached. Therefore Germany has a hopeless task in attempting to force the hands of Grand Duke Nicholas."

Inquiry Into War Contracts Commences

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, June 24.— Sir Charles Davidson, the Royal Commissioner appointed by the Dominion government to inquire into the government war contracts, formally opened the inquiry in the Railway committee room, House of Commons, to-day. John Thompson, K.C., the Commission counsel, then proceeded to take up the Powell drug and hospital bandage contract, the evidence given being practically the same as was given before the Public Accounts committee.

Chief Justice Davidson said that the Commission's doors stood open to investigate any and all accusations of malversation or wrong-doing in the matter of war contracts and supplies.

Slav Right Wing Attacks Enemy's Flank, Wiping Out Three Companies and Checking Attempt to Press Eastward.

TAKE 1000 PRISONERS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, June 24.—The Russians are retiring from Lemberg in perfect order. North of the city the Slav right wing has attacked the enemy's flank, wiping out three companies and checking the enemy's attempt to press eastward south of Ravaruska. In south-east Galicia, the Russians have made 1,000 prisoners in a bayonet battle and are threatening the right flank of the Austro-Germans moving toward Volhynia. A great battle has been begun along the river Sereth, in south-eastern Galicia. The Austrians are bringing up reinforcements from the Czernowitz regions. The Russians are outnumbered, but occupy strategic positions of great importance.

Council Meeting On Tuesday Next

Proposed Construction of Three or Four Blocks of Concrete Pavement Will Be Discussed

Another special meeting of the City Council is in prospect for next Tuesday evening, when the question of concrete paving will be exhumed for the benefit of the Aldermen. City Engineer Parsons is expected in the city on Monday next. He will be consulted as to the most suitable street for concrete pavement and his recommendation will likely be ready for Tuesday evening. Discussing the situation this morning His Worship Mayor Buller sought to make it clear that Ald. Green was in no way responsible for the changes that were made in the by-laws passed at last night's meeting of the City Council. He said the matter was taken up with City Engineer Parsons, and certain changes were necessary in order to make the by-laws legal. The Council was at first of the opinion that they could cease paving half-way between a block, whereas the whole block must be completed. This necessitated an addition of several yards to the contracts which originally called for fifteen thousand yards each so that now they read "approximately" fifteen thousand yards which practically means between fifteen and sixteen thousand yards for each of the two contracts. When this amount is completed the Council must be consulted before any additional work is undertaken. McDonnel street was reserved for three or four blocks of concrete pavement as an experiment. This move was forestalled when it was learned that the railway company would lay tracks on that street. Some of the Aldermen claim they should have been consulted as to the changes that were proposed, and not have them left entirely in the hands of the City Engineer. The Mayor explained that this was done to expedite matters and not with any intent to deprive the Aldermen of their rights and privileges.

Bale From Peterboro' is Acknowledged

The Peterborough Progressive Club have received the following letter from Col. W. F. Gorrell, in charge of the Duchess of Connaught Canadian Hospital at Cliveden:

Cliveden, Taplow Berks.

Dear Madam,—With grateful appreciation we have pleasure in advising you that the bale of hospital supplies kindly donated by the Peterborough Progressive Club reached us in good order yesterday, May 23, and later will be officially acknowledged by the Commissioner, Col. Hodgetts in London. Again thanking you for the disinterested kindness shown in the donation tendered.

Yours very truly,
Col. W. F. Gorrell, O.C.

CONVALESCENT HOME.

If a like zeal and interest be practically manifested in the equipment and maintenance of a Convalescent Home for Peterborough soldiers, as that shown in selecting a suitable building for such a home, the results cannot fail to be gratifying. A lady, whose good sense and judgment, and interest in our soldiers, give weight to any recommendation she may make, has suggested as a suitable site for a Convalescent Home, "Trafalgar Place," the venerable building on Nichols Oval park, overlooking the bluff and the river. The site is simply suggested without any details as to the capacity for accommodation, which, however, could be enlarged by constructing temporary domestic offices, and leaving free the present offices for the greater accommodation of the inmates. One prime requirement of a home of this kind, is pleasant situation, secluded, yet accessible, and with the surroundings of trees and lawns and wide, open spaces. In this regard Trafalgar Place meets the requirements admirably, for no more delightful and salubrious environment than the quiet, restful, beautiful park could be found in this vicinity. However, it is not probable that the building [illegible] present occupied and will be continuously needed as the residence of the park caretaker and constable. It is simply unfortunate that the building with such ideal surroundings should not be available for the laudably patriotic purposes for which it is suggested.

DON'T "CHECK" MANITOBA.

There is a rumour of a proposal to appoint a Dominion Commission to investigate the Manitoba scandals. Anent this, let Manitoba mind its own business. Sir John years ago said: "You can't check Manitoba." Can we now do what Sir John said we had no right to do to Manitoba? If within their sphere of constitutional right the provinces should be left free to exercise their autonomy in regard to administration and legislative matters without Dominion interference, the provinces should be left free to deal with the results of their administration, good or bad, without Dominion interference, contrary to the letter and spirit of the Confederation act. Setting up cross currents in a stream does not tend to smooth progress. Dominion and provincial entanglements should be avoided. Let each do its business and meet its respective responsibility. Another objection has been suggested. Hon. Robert Rogers, would have a voice, and considering his western relations, a deciding voice in the appointment and selection of the personnel of a Dominion Commission to investigate Manitoba scandals. Mr. Rogers is "named" in connection with these scandals. The fact that the chairman of the Royal Commission investigating the Parliament Buildings scandals, refuses to investigate the new charges because he was named as a witness by the counsel making the charges, is a hint that Hon. Mr. Rogers should not be a party to appointing a commission to try charges in which he, himself, is involved. Manitoba should be left severely alone to deal with its own business. It needs no help to either obstruct or grumble.

WOMAN'S WORK AND REWARD.

On this page is printed a most interesting letter, upholding the claims of women to be considered for their effectiveness of service, in the social, civic, and political sphere. A careful reading of it should convince and convict, especially men, in relation to their former and possibly present—even in this enlightened age—indifference and dullness in respect of recognition of the true and rightful place of women in the human economy. The writer of the letter, Mrs. Hector Prenter, president of the Political Equality League of Toronto, makes out a good case in justification of the larger place, the wider and more beneficent activities women have come to hold and exercise in these days; in demonstrating the possibility of development of woman's capacity for usefulness and service; in a word, showing the benefits to the world of the new place womanhood has gained in the world, representing a wide distance between the instrumental status of the Modern Miss of boulevard woman; or the exaggerated stage of the age of chivalry, and the modern stage of enlightened recognition of capacity and duty of usefulness. The partial emancipation of woman, has its harvest, in the splendid activities developed especially in the present war. Incidental to this activity we get a demonstration of the practical benefits of the application of the spirit of cooperation, something that a few years ago we should not have regarded possible, considering the reciprocal jealousy of womankind, when their fuller consciousness is not stimulated by productive contact, when their hearts are not touched and opened by more or less systematic appeal to the nobler and tenderer qualities that exist in every normal woman's being.

In view of what woman has done; in view of what she can do; of the wisdom, the restraint, of the administrative and ministering ability of woman, why should not their rights to a share in government, or in the solution of civic and political problems, be conceded ungrudgingly and fully?

The frantic follies of the suffragettes of Britain have not helped woman's cause in regard to the franchise. But the suffragettes in Britain and elsewhere have purged themselves of their reproach by the splendid restraint, in respect of their "fad" they have shown by throwing themselves with equal ardor into the work that the war has created. The Examiner has long contended, for the principle of the political, civic and social equality of women with men—as something they deserve as a matter of principle and British justice; and as something they have earned by modern demonstration of their capacity for wise exercise of such equality. Women's right to the franchise, a practical equality with men, is on all fours with their right to live, and with our right to demand forms of service which women alone can give, or do give; services which justly warrant recognition of their right to a higher place than hewers of good and drawers of water, and subjects of a one-sided authority, arrogantly monopolizing a common right.

Canada has been foremost in many forms of service and achievement; but it is rearmost in recognising the womanhood of woman. Women have the suffrage in Federated Australia, New Zealand, Norway, Finland, and in thirteen of the United States of America. We should resent the idea that any of these countries is more enlightened or progressive than we are. What, then, of our denial of equality of rights of men and women, of justice and fair play, which half the world is fighting fiercely for to-day?

A WOMAN WARMLY CHAMPIONS WOMAN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS

Editor Examiner,—We have believed what we were taught, for so long that the formation of the first club for women was a tribute to human courage and human optimism. If these two qualities were exclusively masculine we, as women, would never have belonged even to a "Dorcas" Society. But courage and hope, and the spread of education, with the further help of the vacuum cleaner and Canada and the Kaiser, saw eye to mental faculties, and have given us the time to use them; and because the more highly developed the individual becomes, the greater is his or her need for social intercourse, and te wider is the "area of consciousness". So it is out of the awakened mind of a more enlightened womanhood, that we have our clubs for educational, social, and reform purposes. These gatherings of women received no very warm welcome from the men of a few years ago. On one point, at least, the average man of Canad and the Kaiser, saw eye to eye; "children, church and children" was womans' sphere. However, we realized our social responsibilities, and we formed our clubs, and while today we are far too busy to say "I told you so" to any of the Rip Van Winkles, who used us for the funny page, we know in our hearts that, as women, we could never have given our best contribution to our country to-day, if we had not learned how to work together and how to organize.

There are now many woman's clubs in Toronto and elsewhere. Chief among them are the Woman's Canadian Club, the Teachers' Association, the Canadian Business Woman's Club, the Liberal and Conservative Women's Associations, the many Chapters of the I.O.D.E. and, at least, six Equal Suffrage Societies. Each one of these bodies has more than justified its existence this terrible winter, in many practical ways; in fact theer are those who say that the war could not have been successfully carried on had it not been for the work of the Women's Clubs and Institutes in Toronto and every part of the Empire. The Women's Patriotic League of Canada, formed by club women of every class and creed and all shades of opinion has won unstinted praise for its wonderful work in relieving distress among the poor, and in supplying war needs; the local Council of Women, which represents some sixty affiliated societies, has also done its share of patriotic work, while continuing its efforts to secure mothers' pensions—a bit of progressive legislation which is urgently needed in Canada. In this connection the work of the local suffragists is well worth mention. Early in the Autumn all the members of the local societies banded themselves together under the name "United Suffragists of Toronto," to care for the nursing and expectant mothers among the unemployed—a work that proved to be a very tremendous undertaking, but which is so truly of value to the community that it is still being carried on by them with the co-operation of the Deparment of Public Health, and the splendid help of the civic nurses; and, while suffragists realize that charity is not a fundamental reform, there is a satisfaction in knowing that in caring for some three hundred women they have spared the lives of many future citizens—our Empire needs all its people. That any of them should perish of want in this new land would seem to be almost as great a tragedy as the world war.

If the Woman's Club has done nothing else it has done at least one thing, at this time, it has proved that whether as an individual, or as the mother of a family or as a society dame, or an ardent suffragist, the woman of to-day is always ready and is still willing to take up her age-old business of mending and caring for. If she were only allowed to express this conserving spirit of hers in our governments, it is surely not unreasonable to hope that in time the "cold world" might become the human world and a kinder, safer, place for the human being

BIG PROGRAMME IN SATURDAY'S DOUBLE HEADER

The game between Classics and East City on Saturday is providing a lot of talk for the fans. Twice this season Manager Vic Fowler's team have stepped into the East City gang and handed them a beating and they say they are going to do it again Saturday. On the other hand the League leaders say they will turn the tables as they may need the victory to keep their lead, provided the Thistles beat the Empires in the second game. The latter will be a battle royal, as Manager Johnston has a strengthened Empire team to throw out against the Thistles.

Lindsay Team To Play Here on July 3rd

At a meeting of the City Baseball League executive last night it was decided to play an exhibition game here on July 3rd with a picked team from Lindsay. The local team will be an all star one, selected from the four City League teams and will be picked by a committee composed of Messrs. Graham, Quinlan and Milloy.

LACROSSE

The following players: Fleming, Gilman, Dillon, Hatton, Mein, Crough, Brown, Cranfield, Best, Jackson Connell, Johnston, P. Dunford, Reynolds, Robertson, McCoy, Todd, H. Dunford, Dawson, Hamilton Halpin, Kelly, Kenneally, Spratt, McFadden F. Hickey, A. Olin, O'Connor, Hardy, F. Larone, and any others; are requested to turn out for practice tonight, at Nichols Oval, at 7 o'clock.

GOLF

Those players for the Stratton Trophy who have not yet handed in their cards, are reminded that they only have until the 26th of June, inclusive, to play the first round. After that date the draw for the second round will be made.

All cards must be handed in to Mrs. Heard.

C. H. PENNEFATHER,
d-145 Captain.

TENNIS

A meeting of the church and other tennis clubs of the city is called for next Monday evening at the Y.M.C.A. the object being the formation of a league. It is hoped that the different church tennis clubs and others interested will have a representative on hand.

PRISONERS' FARE POOR

Coarse Bread, Soup, Meat and Poor Coffee.

Announcement is made in the Canada Gazette published in London that the Canadian Red Cross Society have opened a department under Mrs. Rivers-Bulkely and Miss Stikeman of Montreal, to deal with the matter of supplying comforts to Canadian prisoners of war. The names of the prisoners and their place of interment are kept on record, and each man is supplied with a parcel of comforts. About once a month, or as often as is needed, parcels are sent containing, for each man, two shirts, one pair of socks, three towels, one pipe, one tooth-brush, one cake of soap, a packet of tobacco, writing paper, and a house-wife.

The fare provided for prisoners of war in Germany is not very generous; it consists of coarse bread, lentil soup, meat once a day, and some very poor coffee. To supplement this Miss Stikeman informs us, the society is sending out to each man every fortnight a parcel of food. These are called "dollar parcels," for the sum of about four shillings is expended on each. The contents of parcels vary. One week they consist of a packet of biscuits, a tin of beef, a box of sardines, a tin of condensed milk, a pot of marmalade, a cake, and a tin of acid drops. Another week a parcel may include a tin of cocoa and milk and a tin of beef brawn.

A Wyoming inventor's can opener consists of a pointed shaft, to be inserted into the centre of the top of a can along which is a wheel with a knife edge to be rolled around the can.

SERGT. DOWNES ON CHAMPIONSHIP FOOTBALL TEAM

Mrs. Downes, 591 Sherbrooke St., whose son, Sergt. E. Downes, formerly of the local Police Department, who is at the front with the 3rd Coldstream Guards, has received a photograph of the football team of the battalion, which won the championship of the 2nd Division. Sergt. Downes was a member of the team which won the silver cup donated by the Prince of Wales. The games were all played behind the trenches.

CONVICTS AT WORK FOR BRITISH ARMY

Under the Stimulus of Patriotism Idleness Has Almost Entirely Disappeared

Patriotism in prison sounds a paradox, but that it is to be found there, in no small degree, is testified from many quarters and is recorded officially in many reports which have been received at the British Home Office.

Far away from the rush and bustle of life, with little or no knowledge of what is happening in the outside world, the criminal, paying the penalty for his crime, might be thought to be the one person in the world not affected by the horrors and excitement of war or by the call to the nation to face the crisis with a spirit of heroism. He has his bodily wants attended to, his regular routine to perform, and anybody who is acquainted with prison life knows that in the vast majority of cases the chief complaint of the authorities is of the deliberate idleness of prisoners. But since the war started all that has been changed. The prisoners are keenly interested in the war and are allowed to hear once a week, usually from the chaplain after morning service on Sunday, some account of what is being done by the navy and army, in which many of them have relations fighting for their country.

The work in British prisons is almost entirely confined to the manufacture of articles for Government Departments. The labor conditions, and the opposition which would inevitably arise, make it impossible to engage upon work which competes with the occupation of the working classes outside. Since the war began the work of the prisoners has been devoted very largely to the manufacture of articles required by the navy and the army, and there the patriotism of the convicts has found an outlet. Idleness has almost completely disappeared. The men and women in the prisons have worked harder than they have ever done before and they have done so with the greatest good will. The output during the normal hours of labor has increased enormously, and the convicts in some of the prisons have even volunteered to work overtime. They have been engaged upon all kinds of easy work, making coalsacks for the navy, kit bags for the army, and various other articles of the kind, and they have done it willingly and well.

The pathos of it has appealed to Government officials, who are not really so hard-hearted as many people are inclined to believe. Mr. G. Morgan, the British Controller of the Post Office Stores Department, has stated that "the work of providing a sufficiency of suitable receptacles this year for the parcels and mails for our gallant soldiers in the Expeditionary Force has led to the purchase of a large number of special bags, many thousands of which had to be produced at short notice. It is here that the value of organised prison labor is illustrated. But for the fact that the Home Office had an abundant reserve of prisoners to make these bags, their supply at the time they were required would have presented a very ugly problem, and there is surely pathos in the fact that the unfortunate fellows for whom this employment had to be found worked with undisguised enthusiasm when informed of the destined object of their labor."

The daily average number of persons in the prisons is about 35,000, and it is hoped that the improvement which has been shown with regard to work will help them when they are discharged.

His Version.

A youngster in school was busy drawing. The teacher, to appear interested, approached him and said kindly:

"Well, Johnny, what are you drawing?"

"Why, I was making a picture of you, but it didn't look enough like you, so I put a tail on it and called it a dog."

Breaking Into Print.

"My cousin once wrote something and had luck—it was printed."

"What was it?"

"His marriage announcement."

Austrians Forced To Abandon The Positions

LONDON, June 24.—The Italians have taken all of the defenses surrounding Malborgeth, and are now storming the town itself, according to a despatch from Laibach, Austria, arriving here by way of Geneva.

Malborgeth has been the first important objective of an Italian army which has been slowly advancing along the railroad to Tarvis practically since the war began. Its fall, which now seems imminent, will go a long way toward clearing the road to Tarvis, through which one of the main railways from Trieste to the interior of the empire runs. The despatch says that the fighting has been of a very bitter character in the region, and that the Austrians are offering a strong resistance.

The same despatch says that Austrian reinforcements have stopped the Italian advance at Caporetto, and that 30,000 Austrians who debouched from the Ternova forest are now marching against the Italian positions north of Gorizia.

It is also stated that southeast of Flitsch the Italians have been forced back as far as the frontier by a strong Austrian force. Some of the ground gained in this advance was subsequently lost, the Austrians being forced to abandon Italian positions they had taken.

Austrian Claims.

The Austrian official report says: "During the first month of the war the Italians have gained no great success. Our troops in the southwest maintain their positions as in the beginning, on or near the frontier. On the Isonzo front, in the fortified frontier district from Flitsch to Malborgeth, on the Carinthian ridge, and on all the fronts of the Tyrol all enemy attempts at an advance have collapsed with heavy losses."

In the Trentino Alps.

The Italian advance on the Trentino Alps daily is growing more difficult, owing to the formidable lines of fortifications constructed by the Austrians in the valleys and on mountains, which are provided with excellent guns, dominating all the passes. Since the occupation of Cortina, May 30, the advance of the Italians on Austrian territory has been only a few miles in extent. On that front fighting is constantly going on among the highest mountains, having reached peaks, at an altitude of about ten thousand feet on the Marmolada group, which dominates the famous Dolomite road. From their positions on Tasca Peak, the Italians can see at Pordoi, the obelisk erected to mark the Dolomite Road, built by Emperor Francis Joseph. The command of this road between Falzarago and Prodestagno, it is considered by military observers, would be of great advantage to the Italians, as it would interrupt one of the biggest military arteries of the Austrians.

A Berlin Telegram says: "Despatches from the Italian front report serious reverses experienced by the Italians during the last four days in their attempts to storm the Austro-Hungarian line along the Isonzo River, a few miles from the Italian frontier. The attacks, the reports say, were preceded by three days of terrific artillery bombardment. The Italians then in thick lines of skirmishes, one behind the others charged repeatedly up the heights, the summits of which were held by the Austrians, only to be mowed down by the rifle and machine gun fire. The attacks were repeated six times in two days and each time are declared to have been repulsed with heavy losses. The attackers left large numbers of dead between the lines and many wounded could be seen making their way painfully down the rocky and precipitous slopes.

"Austrian women and girls are distinguishing themselves by carrying water and food to the army positions which at some places are at an altitude of 3,000 feet, and also by attending the wounded.

"Eugen Lenhoff, correspondent of the Zeitung Am Mittag, telegraphs an account of the Austrian fortifications on the south Tyrol front, which he was permitted to visit. The Austrians, he said, not content with entrenching on the surface, have blasted galleries in the interior of the mountain summits, which end in chambers for their artillery. The muzzles of the guns, the correspondent adds, "thus peep through concealed loopholes in the verticle cliffs from positions utterly inaccessible to the enemy. The infantry positions are similarly blasted into the face of the cliffs and are virtually impregnable. The Italians on this front are devoting their efforts to bringing up heavy artillery and the building of roads, and therefore have not yet launched a vigorous campaign.

Cruiser Struck By Torpedo

LONDON, June 23.—The British cruiser Roxburgh was torpedoed by a German submarine in the North Sea last Sunday, according to an official statement issued by the Admiralty this evening. The cruiser was not damaged so seriously as to prevent her making port. There were no casualties. No allusion is made to the fate of the German submarine that fired the torpedo.

The fact that a second shot was not fired might indicate that the submarine had been injured by gunfire from the Roxburgh. The admiralty announcement says nothing to this effect, however.

The British cruiser Roxburgh was of 10,850 tons displacement. She was built in 1901, and made 22 knots. Her crew is about 700.

A KNACK.

Oh, I am a woman whose house is a sight!
From garret to cellar there's nothing that's right.
For day after day I am striving and straining
To reach perfect neatness, but never attaining.
While I'm awshing the windows the carpets get dusty;
While I'm washing the windows the parlour grows musty;
My meals are behind time and always have been,
And I just get my bed made in time to get in.
The neighbours make comment, "Alas and alack!
Poor thing, she works hard and don't want to be slack;
But somehow or other, she hasn't a knack!"
Oh, a very fine thing 'tis to have a great knack!
Now I have a neighbour whose house is just right,
Whenever you enter from morning till night;
She gives a touch here and she gives a touch there,
And all is in order from cellar to stair.
Should I ask for the reason, her friends all quickly;
"Oh, she has a great knack for doing things well!"
It's not that she works any more than her neighbours.
But she knows how to get good results from her labours.
Oh, yes, it is plain she is blessed with a knack!

HASTINGS NEWS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

HASTINGS, June 22.—An interesting game of lacrosse was played on the grounds here on Friday last between Peterborough and Hastings seniors. The local team played well and were easily able to carry off the laurels from the visitors, the score standing 13 to 2 in favour of the home team.

Quite a large crowd was in attendance, friends of both sides, each one watching with interest the team from his own home town.

The steamer 'Stoney Lake' came down from Peterborough carrying a large party of excursionists under the auspices of the Woodmen of the World, who seemed to enjoy the day.

Several of our citizens attended the Conservative convention in Warkworth on Thursday last and report a good attendance.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were the recipients of a farewell address and presentation by the members of the Methodist congregation on Friday evening. A large number collected in the basement of the church to do honour to their departing pastor, after four years of faithful service. A good programme was rendered, after which the following address was read by Mrs. B. Preston and both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson presented with a purse containing some gold coins, the presentation being made by Mrs. Robt. Collins. The address reads:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, —We have learned with deep regret that you are about to leave us. The time has now come when the connection which has hitherto existed between us must be severed. Your aim amongst us has ever been a true and high one, and we have no hesitation in saying that your work has been where labour and talent are appreciated. We beg of you to accept these purses as a slight token of our love and esteem for your faithful work in the church.

We hope that wherever your lot may be cast that you may meet with many friends. Asking God to bless you in your work, we now bid you adieu.

Signed on behalf of the Methodist congregation, Mrs. B. Preston, Mrs. J. Hess, Mrs. Robt. Collins, Mrs. J. Stevenson.

Several pupils are writing on the Entrance exams. this week, their Public school being closed for that purpose.

The excursion to Peterborough on Friday 25th per steamer Stoney Lake promises to be one of the finest of the season, the boat being very commodious and giving plenty of room for all who may care to take the trip.

The junior lacrosse match at Norwood resulted in favour of the Norwood team.

Mr. A. Anderson of Ottawa, spent a few days in town recently.

The Adult Bible class in connection with the Methodist church, held their monthly business and social evening on Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Beavis. After the business had been disposed of a short programme was given, closing with refreshments. The president of the class Mr. A. Parsons, had the meeting in charge.

Mr. Robt. Reid of Peterborough, has been visiting Hastings friends.

Mr. W. Buck motored to Peterborough on Friday and spent the day.

Miss Bailey of Peterborough is visiting with Mrs. Wm. Warner.

Messrs. D. Cameron and W. Christie of Peterborough, were in town last week.

Mr. F. Runnels spent Thursday in Warkworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Carter of New Ontario, are renewing acquaintances in and around town.

Miss Nellie Murray of Peterborough is with her mother, here.

Mr. A. Scriven attended the C.O.F. convention held in St. Catharines, during the week.

Prest Bros. are at work decorating the interior of the Methodist Church.

The display of ready-to-wear ladies' garments by the Reid Co. of Peterborough has been much admired by those interested and no doubt many orders will be the result.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Two "Husbands" At the Front

An Extraordinary Story, From Glasgow

An extraordinary story of how a woman succeeded in drawing a double separation allowance by posing as the wife of two soldiers now serving at the front, was told before Sir John Dickinson at Bow Street, London, on Saturday afternoon, when Evelyn Mabel Ollerenshaw (26), of Battersea Park Road, was charged on remand with falsifying her marriage certificate and obtaining money by false pretences. Mr. William Lewis conducted the case on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Evidence given for the prosecution showed that upon the outbreak of the war the defendant falsely represented herself to be the wife of Private B. Mason of the Grenadier Guards. She was afterwards married to Private W. Ollerenshaw of the same regiment, and then continued to draw two sets of separation allowances. When called upon by the military authorities to produce her marriage certificate she altered the year from 1914 to 1913, and as the "wife" of Mason she represented that her certificate had been destroyed.

On being arrested by Detective-Sergeants Stephens defendant stated that she had lived with Mason as his wife for five years down to August 5th last. When he rejoined the colours he told his officers that she was his wife, and separation allowance was paid to her down to March 5th. In January, 1914, she became acquainted with Ollerenshaw, and on the outbreak of the war he also represented to his officers that she was his wife, and consequently she received a further separation allowance. She married Ollerenshaw on September 16th last, and under pressure from him altered the date in her certificate to make it appear that they were married in the previous year. "I would not have done it had it not been for the pressure of my husband. He told me that he had informed his officers that he was a married man, and they were pressing him for his marriage certificate, and that unless I altered it to show that we were married before the beginning of August he was likely to get into trouble. I am in constant communication with my husband and Mason, who are both serving at the front. I spent most of the money in sending parcels to them weekly. All this has come out through my sending a parcel one week to Mason and not to my husband. He got to know, and reported the matter to his commanding officers. He knew perfectly well all the time that I was drawing separation allowance as the wife of Mason. When I got married to Ollerenshaw I would gladly have given up the allowance for Mason but having once started it I did not know how to stop it without getting him and myself into trouble. I would not have married Ollerenshaw had he not known that I was drawing separation allowance as Mason's wife, and he threatened to expose me, and made me marry him."

The Magistrate said it was obvious that both men were the defendant's accomplices and might have urged her to do what she did. But the offence was a serious one and the defendant had rendered herself liable to penal servitude for life. He sentenced her to six months imprisonment in the second division.—Glasgow Herald.

Americans Should Have Passports

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 24. — While American citizens generally are being advised to carry passports when they go abroad, the State Department reiterated to-day to many inquirers hat the Canadian authorities do not require passports of Americans entering Canada.

"Nevertheless," the Department advises, "it is deemed advisable for naturalized American citizens going to Canada, particularly those born in countries now at war with Great Britain, to provide themselves with passports in order to be in a position readily to establish their identity and citizenship, thereby avoiding possible delay and inconvenience.

With the on-rush of summer travel the department is busied with advice of this character.

German and Austrian maid servants in the domestic service of American citizens, the department understands, may be granted special permission to accompany their employers into Canada. The employers are advised to apply through the Chief Comissioner of Dominion Police or the Superintendent of Immigration, or through the American Consul-General at Ottawa for permission to enter Canada.

The application should state the time and place of crossing the frontier, and the employer is required to express his willingness to vouch for the good behaviour of the servants during their stay in Canada.

MUNITIONS ON GERMAN SHIP THAT SAILED BEFORE WAR.

NAPLES, June 22. — The German steamer Bayern, interned since August, has been unloaded by the Italian authorities. Hidden under goods of no particular importance were field guns, machine guns and aeroplanes.

None of this material was mentioned in the ship's papers.

The Bayern sailed from Hamburg before the opening of hostilities between Austria and Serbia, and put into Naples for safety.

Pte. Saunders Getting on Well

Peterboro' Boy in the Red Cross Hospital at Netley

Miss Lily Saunders, 177 Sherbrooke Street, has received the following letter from her brother, Pte. Harold Saunders of the 57th detachment, 2nd Battalion, who was wounded at St. Julien:

Hut 32,
British Red Cross Hospital,
Netley, Hants, England.

Dear Lily,—I was very pleased to receive your letter to-day; also one from Eva, and the two parcels, which were given to the visitors of the Canadian Red Cross. I was very pleased to hear all are well. I am getting on fine, myself, and hope to be quite well again, soon. I must say we had a high old time at Ypres and got cut up pretty badly, but they did not get through.

We are in a fine place here with two Japanese nurses who are "photo crazy". I am sending you some of the results. Our hut is about three hundred yards from the sea, and I have been down to the Isle of Wight on the little pleasure steamer. Tell mother I believe I have had nearly all of the Baptist ministers in England down to see me.

I have got my bullet and will send it on to you as soon as possible. I wrote up to the Paymaster for some money and he sent me down five pounds; so you see I am well off for money.

I am afraid I have no more news at present, so I will close, with love, from your affectionate brother,

HAROLD.

Mrs. Saunders has also received the following communication from the Canadian Red Cross Society:

"I beg to inform you that No. 7681, H. W. Saunders, 2nd Canadians, is now at the British Red Cross Hospital, Nesley, England. Our visitor, who went up to see him a few days ago, reports that he has had another small operation on his leg to remove some khaki cloth, which was in the leg. She is glad to say he is up again now and walking around.

Yours truly,

ERIKA BOVEY,
For Canadian Red Cross Commissioner.

MEMBERSHIP IS CONTESTED

LONDON, June 24.— Efforts were successfully launched in court yesterday to drive from positions of trust British citizens of German birth. The attack was directed against Sir Edgar Speyer and Sir Ernest Cassel, two of Great Britain's financiers.

On application of counsel acting in behalf of Sir George McGill, the King's Bench granted a rule nisi calling upon Speyer and Cassel to show by what authority they are members of the Privy Council.

In presenting his application, McGill's attorney argues that neither men had ever been lawfully members of the Council, because neither was born of English parents or within the United Kingdom, according to the statute of William III. Despite the general feeling of antipathy to all Germans, the invoking of the statute to drive the financiers from public life caused a sensation in official circles. Both have reiterated their loyalty to England.

Sir Edgar Speyer, in a letter to Premier Asquith, on May 17, last, resigned his Privy Councillorship, and requested also that his baronetcy be revoked. Replying to Sir Edgar's letter of resignation, Premier Asquith chaarcterized as "baseless and malignant" the imputations made upon Sir Edgar's "loyalty to the British Crown."

The Premier also said that the King was not prepared to withdraw the honours.

Sir Edgar was born in 1862 and was educated at Frankfort-on-the-Main. He is the head of the banking firm of Speyer Brothers of London.

Sir Ernest Cassel was born in Cologne in 1852. He was confidential adviser in the late King Edward.

Lots of Hard Fighting Says Pte. H. Wyatt

Peterboro' Boy With 14th Battalion, Sends Interesting Letter

Mr. Jos. L. Wyatt, East City, who has three sons on active service, two with the 14th Battalion, 1st Canadian Division and the third with the 50th Battalion at Barrifield, has received an interesting letter from his son, Pte. Howard Wyatt of the 14th. Mr. Wyatt has also learned that his nephew, Fred Wyatt of the Engineers, has been awarded a distinguished conduct medal and promoted to sergeant for gallant action under fire.

Pte. Howard Wyatt writes:

May 30th, 1915.

Dear Mother and Father,— Just a few lines to let you know I am still alive and well and hope you are the same. We are out of the trenches again, but are liable to go back to-night. Some say that we are going out for a month's rest. I hope it is true.

We have been into some hard fighting again and have lost a lot of men. All of the officers of our company (No. 1 Co., 14th Batt) are either killed or wounded. Our major got killed. He was the best officer we had. I hated to see him go. We advanced 800 yards on the Germans in daylight and that is how we lost so many this time.

There are not many of the old fellows left. We see some awful sights where we are now. When we took this trench we were tripping over the dead and they were cut up awfully—heads off, legs off, and mutilated all ways. These were mostly Germans. We do not mind it so much though, for you have to sleep beside them in some places. We cannot get a chance to bury the dead and if the enemy see us they shoot even if we are bringing in their wounded. There are some of the wounded lying out on the field for five days and you can't get them in. But we are gradually chasing them back. They do not seem to have any trenches up here, but when you advance on them they have machine guns concealed in barns.

We do not know how long it will last, but I hope it will not go another winter, although I am not fed up with it yet. I don't mind plugging away at them, although there are a lot of fellows nervous. The Germans sure do put a lot of big shells at us, but we all have a chance. Gordon was in the thick of it, too, at both places, and he seems to be getting fat on the job. Sometimes we get lots of sleep and that suits him, but when we are in the trenches we get none.

I saw a Peterborough paper and it had a few of the names of those who had fallen, and I suppose they have them all by now.

There are lots of German souvenirs around, but the war is too young yet to carry them around.

Hoping you are all well, and be sure and write soon. Good-bye.

White Woman Barely Escaped Being an Indian

OMAHA, Neb., June 23—If Mrs. Josephine Carroll had become a little Indian papoose as she was slated to have been, one of Omaha's most enthusiastic charity workers and night school instructors would be missing to-day.

Mrs. Carroll was once slated to be a papoose. A squaw so wished her when her parents were not looking The squaw kidnapped the child a little more than half a century ago, when Omaha was a buffalo pasture.

There was a rescue. But it never got into the papers. There were no papers to print thrilling adventures that occurred around the Missouri River bluffs in those days. The mother, Mrs. John Godola, walked right out of the house, stopped the squaw and took the child away from her. If it were to-day, the movies would have a thriller on the screen about it. But that was before Edison or any one else had thought of making pictures walk and talk; also, those were the days when experiences with the Indians were many and grotesque. A mere kidnapping did not attract much attention.

Mrs. Carroll's mother lived at what is now Thirteenth and Farnum streets. At that time it was neiher Thirceenth nor Farnam. It was just a pplace in the hills, prairie and timber. The present Mrs. Carroll was about three years of age. Her mother employed a young Indian squaw as a domestic. All was fine, but she domestic didn't work. She liked to play with the baby, however. The baby tok a great liking to the brown maid. One day the brown maid and the baby's mother fell out. Straightway the servant was dismissed. Being fired was a somewhat novel experience to this brown maiden. She knew principally that she was expected to leave the permises, and that her pay, whatever that may have been, was to stop.

When the childish prattle was no longer heard, the moter rused out just in time to see the squaw disappearing over the hill with the child. There was a race. It was a race of the white and red and the child was brought back.

GIRL STUDENT FOILS PARENTS, WEDS MAN OF 60

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 23.—Foiling the plan of her parents to separate her from her aged lover, who was recently divorced in a sensational suit in which her name was mentioned, Miss Frances Elizabeth Wood aged nineteen, a student of Combs's Conservatory of Music, Philadelphia, eloped from that city with Dr. Joann M. Blose, sixty, a prominent music teacher of Washington. The couple were married in New York, and are now on their honeymoon, according to a letter which the bride wrote to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wood. The couple were married by the bridegroom's brother, an Episcopalian clergyman.

The elopement surprised and grieved the parents of the girl, who were not aware that her lover had gone to Philadelphia to see her. While expressing disappointment at the news, they make no comment as to whether or not they will extend forgiveness.

Dr. Blose is one of the leading musicians of Western Pennsylvania. He is a graduate of German and American universities and holder of a doctor's degree from the University of Berlin. A few months ago he divorced his first wife.

Dr. Blose has taught music to most of Washington's prominent young people, has been director of several leading church choirs and more recently taught in the East Washington High School. Miss Wood, as a pupil in this school, is said to have fallen in love with him.

She was sent to Philadelphia to forget the music teacher, but the letter to her mother tells of her quietly leaving the school, jjoining Dr. Blose and speeding to New York, where they were married.

Mrs. Blose is herself a talented musician, and in connection with her studies in the East Washington School took a course of private lessons from Dr. Blose. The latter instituted the divorce proceedings against his first wife through love for the school girl. The first Mrs. Blose did not defend the suit.

BRITONS' GARB WON BY FRENCH

BERLIN, June 22. —Gambling is the greatest vice in the prison camps in Germany, according to Ambassador Gerard. Because the men are permitted only limited amounts of money they wager their next most valuable property, which is their clothes. From investigations which the ambassador made he found that the French prisoners were usually the luckiest, while the British invariably lost everything.

Gerard Gets Instance.

An instance of this came to the ambassador recently. He sent to all the British soldiers in the Zoosen prison camp new shirts, trousers, shoes, and socks. Some he furnished and some were supplied by the British government.

A week later the captain of the British prisoners wrote the ambassador that the Englishmen had worn out their clothes and needed new suits immediately. Gerard sent an investigator to the camp. He reported that the French prisoners were wearing the new clothes he sent the British, while the latter were clothed in the worn out French uniforms.

French Win Big Stakes.

Upon inquiring the investigator learned that the French soldiers had won big stakes in the last gambling match conducted sub rosa because the German government forbids all gambling.

The ambassador is understood to have put the matter of supplying new uniforms up to the British government.

FRANCE BURNS ABSINTHE LEAVES.

PONTARLIER, Fance, June 22. — One hundred tons of leaves used in the manufacture of absinthe have been burned publicly here by order of the government, in accordance with the legislation suppressing the manufacture of absinthe.

A PLEA FOR THE COMPLETION OF THE TRENT CANAL

Dear Sir,—I have read your speech on the War Budget in the House of Commons, Ottawa February 24th, 1915, and am glad our Finance Minister, Mr. White, is managing the war tax so wisely.

I would be glad if you could help the work on the Trent Valley Canal to its completion in this time of war. Idle men might be set to work on T. V. C. and benefit all round. We have good iron ore at Marmora and we want cheap coal at Peterborough to make pig iron, and we want to build iron ships at Peterborough if we can, and I believe we might on the banks of this canal.

I believe that when this canal is completed there will be large factories dotted north and south from our city on its banks.

Wheat and other heavy truck from the Northwest would find their way both in and out on this excellent waterway. I might write sheet after sheet on this grand subject, but must close.

Yours truly,
JOHN BELL.

Peterborough, April 1st, 1915.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE GREAT RECRUITING CAMPAIGN IN ENGLAND—Whether conscription ought to replace voluntary enlistment is still the subject of controversy. Those in favour of the voluntary system are still largely in the majority, though recognizing that the system is still on trial. The picture shows one of the meetings taken to promote recruiting. Monster parades keep before the eyes of young men the fact that their King and country need them. The battalion shown is marching from the Mansion House, London, to the headquarters of the H. A. C.

STREET CAR SERVICE FOR McDONNEL STREET

Radial Railway Company Propose to Lay Tracks on McDonnel Street From George to Park Streets—Announcement Causes a Flurry in Municipal Circles—City Council Have Heated Discussion Over Paving Question—Another Meeting in Prospect.

Last night's meeting of the City Council was anything but a love feast. The meeting was barely under way before the tocsin sounded and the more timid of the civic legislators ducked for cover. One lone ratepayer, doubtless attracted by the sound of revelry by night, ventured into the meeting about the time Ald. Green, chairman of the Board of Works, retired in apparent disgust. He was not seen again until the motion to adjourn was put a third time and passed at nine-forty-five. The net result of the meeting was the adoption of two by-laws, one awarding the Standard Paving Company a contract for approximately fifteen thousand yards of asphaltic concrete pavement and a similar by-law awarding a like amount to the Warren Paving Company of Toronto. The Mayor had no sooner attached his signature to the second by-law than Ald. Green rose to inform the Council of the Radial Railway Company's proposed intention to construct a street car line on McDonnel street from George to Park streets in event of the city paving that particular thoroughfare.

Hostilities Commence.

The fireworks started when Ald. Stratton voiced his disapproval of the manner in which the by-laws were "railroaded" through, claiming that had the Council known of the street railway company's intention they would have had an opportunity of providing for a permanent pavement on McDonnel street to the exclusion of a number of streets named in the by-laws. As matters stood, the Council would feel compelled by necessity to pave McDonnel street in addition to the streets named. This would mean that instead of laying a minimum of thirty thousand yards of street paving, as approved by a majority of the aldermen, over forty thousand yards would be constructed with a consequent increase in the cost. Ald. Stratton urged the Council to reconsider its action and provide for street paving on McDonnel street to the exclusion of a number of other streets.

Mayor Buller thought it would be good business to wait until the general manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company appeared before the Council as promised and the whole scheme would be laid before the aldermen.

Demanded a Limit.

This Ald. Stratton characterized as a scheme to increase the original contract for street paving from thirty to forty thousand yards as the railway company would hardly extend their tracks unless they were satisfied as to the Council's intentions to pave McDonnel street. The street not being included in the by-laws it would be necessary to make it an addition to the original contract. He favoured the construction of permanent paving on McDonnel street providing some other streets were cut off so as to keep the contracts within the minimum of thirty thousand square yards.

In reply Ald. Green said that only such streets as were in need of permanent pavement had been included in the by-laws and he did not know of any that could be sacrificed. In his opinion the by-laws had been drafted in accordance with the spirit manifested by the Council and claimed that Ald. Stratton in objecting to it, failed to use the good "judgment with which he was endowed."

Ald. Stratton reiterated his original statement, claiming that the by-laws had been railroaded through in the hope that the Council would agree to pave McDonnel street as an addition to the original contract on the "mere statement that the railway company would lay their tracks there."

Ald. Duffus did not believe it was fair to those of the Council who had voted for a minimum of thirty thousand square yards of paving to cause the contract to be increased to over forty thousand square yards which would be the case if McDonnel street was paved.

Ald. Evans was of a similar opinion. He thought that the original minimum of thirty thousand square yards should be adhered to.

Wanted By-law Repealed.

Ald. Stratton moved that one of the contracts as represented by the by-law be repealed and that provision be made for the construction of a permanent pavement on McDonnel street and that a sufficient number of other streets provided for in the by-law be excluded so as to keep the total contract within the thirty thousand yard limit.

This prompted Ald. Green to ask Ald. Stratton if he would name the streets to be cut off. Ald. Stratton declined, claiming that he was not there to act alone on a matter that the whole Council should deal with. His interest was to have the paving contracts kept within the limits prescribed by a majority of the whole Council at a previous meeting.

Ald. Green insisted on reading the list for Ald. Stratton's benefit and demanding the latter's attention. Ald. Stratton appealed to the chair for protection from what he characterized as personal questions on the part of Ald. Green. This resulted in a few verbal fireworks which concluded by Ald. Green remarking to Ald. Stratton, "Don't you think you can bulldoze me; it can't be done."

Ald. Stratton agreed to withdraw his motion providing the Mayor would assure the Council that the original contract of thirty thousand square yards of paving would not be exceeded without first consulting the Council. This assurance was readily granted and the storm subsided, but not before Ald. Green had made his way below, where he remained until after the meeting.

"There is nothing to worry about," said Mayor Buller in addressing Ald. Stratton. Everything is being done in a regular way. You are the only one that has attempted to delay progress in connection with this matter."

Concrete Paving.

The Council was in no mood to discuss concrete paving following the controversy over the by-laws. At a previous meeting it was generally understood that McDonnel street would be selected for at least three or four blocks of concrete pavement, for the reason that it is a main thoroughfare and off the route of the street railway. The Council, as a body, is of the opinion that concrete should be first tried out as an experiment on one of the main thoroughfares where street car lines will not have to be contended with. The prospect of McDonnel street being provided with street railway service eliminates the street so far as concrete pavement is concerned, and the Council last night could not agree to any other street that would be suitable for such a purpose. One of the aldermen suggested that concrete be used around the block surrounding St. Peter's Cathedral. Ald. Edgar pointed out that concrete was a noisy pavement and should not be wished on any church irrespective of denomination.

Was Laid Over.

Ald. Stratton and a number of the aldermen were of the opinion that the Council was deviating from its proper course when they proposed to defer the question of concrete paving. He questioned the wisdom of the Council in leaving McDonnel street out of the list of streets to be paved for the mere reason that the Manager of the Street Railway Company had verbally expressed the Company's intention to lay tracks on McDonnel street. He thought that the Council should have something more definite.

Mayor Buller assured the aldermen that a communication would be placed before the Council at an early date.

As City Engineer Parsons was out of the city it was decided to defer action until his return when expert advice will be sought respecting a suitable street for an experimental strip of concrete pavement.

Bugler H. Lloyd Was Wounded

He is a Grandson of Mr. Mark Spenceley and Formerly Resided This City

A grandson of Mr. Mark Spenceley has been wounded and is now in No. 1 Woodlands Hospital, Wigan, Eng. He is Bugler Harry Lloyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lloyd, Toronto, and formerly a resident of Peterborough, having lived on Stewart street. While here he was a member of the 57th Regiment Band. He enlisted with the 48th Highlanders, Toronto.

In a letter to his mother, he writes as follows:

"Just a line, hoping that you are well and happy. The gas is awful stuff, especially when you are wounded, too. I expect to be here some time. I have been in six different hospitals all down the line. At last I am settled in a beautiful place in England.

"It is grand to be in bed again, and away from that hell that is in France. I got buried in a trench for 8 hours, and when they dug us out four were dead and three wounded, including myself, by one German shell. But never mind. God is good."

Reward Offered For Deserters

Lindsay Men Forsake the 39th Battalion

LINDSAY, June 24.—For some time reports have been in circulation to the effect that a number of men had deserted from the 39th Battalion at Belleville.

Lieut.-Colonel Preston, C. O. 39th Battalion, is prepared to hand out drastic punishment to these men and forwarded circulars to all points in the district giving descriptions of the deserters.

Yesterday Chief Short received a communication from the Colonel containing a description of two soldiers, and offering a reward for their arrest. The men are Privates John Jennings and William Murphy. Jennings is 26 years of age, single, height 5 ft. 7 in., complexion fair, brown hair and blue eyes.

Murphy is 35 years of age, single, height 5 ft. 6 1-2 in., dark complexion, black hair and brown eyes.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic," is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

Canadian Artillery Fired 900 Shells a Day at Ypres

Driver Dorris Tells of the Fatal Wounding of Gunner O'Toole and Conveys Information That Should Bring Comfort to Relatives of the Deceased---Upholds the Canadian Artillery.

Driver Ambrose Dorris, one of the Peterborough boys with the 4th Battery wrote the following letter to his brother, Albert M. Dorris, 201 1-2 Lewis street:

Belgium, June 5, 1915.

Dear Brother,—Received your welcome letter all O.K. to-day. I was very much pleased to receive it. Well dear brother, the Canadians sure did have some heavy losses, but believe me they certainly did some fighting. Their fighting of the 22nd up to the 26th of April has never been accomplished by any other soldiers in the history of any war, and I dare say never will be. We stayed in action there seventeen days and we were the luckiest battery up there. We fired as many as nine hundred shells in a day. We averaged about six or seven hundred shells a day while we were there and believe me that is going some. Bert, it was real hell for us all the time. There were all kinds of shells bursting around us. They seemed to hand us a bunch of "Jack Johnsons," a few "tram cars," a few "whistling Willies" and a few "coal boxes." After letting us have these different shells, they would then shower us for hours with high explosives.

Well, dear brother, it would be some sight to our friends in Peterborough just to see the quickness of us getting into our dug-outs or falling on our faces and hands just where we stood when we would hear one coming. The only safety we have when they are coming like that is to do as I have stated. We have strict orders from our officers to fall flat as we hear the first sound of one coming. Of course you know yourself that is the only safety we have. A shell to hit you when you fall flat has to light right on top of you to do any serious harm. If it lights on top of a person he would never know what hit him. But it is only one out of a hundred shells that would light directly on top of a person while he is lying flat. While he is lying flat on the ground any shell at all could light and burst a few inches on either sides or ends of him and nine out of ten would not even receive a scratch. When a shell bursts the pieces fly upwards and in all directions.

I see once more in a late issue of the Examiner that our infantry recaptured four of our guns. Well, Bert, the Canadian artillery have not as yet, lost even one gun, let alone four. We havent a 4.7 gun in the Canadian contingent. They were four English guns with English soldiers serving them, not Canadians. Well, dear brother, poor "Happy" O'Toole is gone. Believe me it was certainly some shock to the battery. He was one of the most valuable men in the battery and was certainly well liked by every man in the battery. The day he was wounded, he was with another Peterborough fellow by the name of White. They were both attached to our telephone staff. However, the two of them had been out inspecting the telephone line between our guns and the observation station. They had just returned to the guns and reported everything O. K. when a shell came. White, hearing it first, dropped on his hands and face. Poor "Happy" dropped on top of White, receiving the most and more serious wounds. White just received two small wounds in the back. He is all well again and doing duty, while Happy was very painfully wounded. Please tell "Happy's" brother. I was kneeling right with him in church. We went there together and made our Easter duty. He had also received Holy Communion once or twice a very short time before making his Easter duty. He also served mass for the priest at Copp's farm, Salisbury Plain. I received apers from you dated May 15th, one full week's papers. I also received your tobacco some time ago and I am sure very thankful to you. I sent Jerome a small parcel of souvenirs which I hope he received. I am putting a small flower in this envelope for Muriel. I got it within a few yards of the German trenches. Good-bye,

Your loving brother,

Food Prices Are Going Up Steadily Throughout Germany--Cost is Doubled

LONDON, June 23.—The newspaper reader can gather a very mixed idea as to the real conditions of life in Germany if he reads the various accounts given by neutrals who from time to time come away and give an account of their political experiences.

The following prices are taken from the official Deutscher Reichsanzeiger and Statistiche Korrespondenz in the case of Berlin, and the weights given, according to consumption data, derived from German sources.

Retail food prices in Berlin in March were up 50 per cent., compared with twelve months previously. On potatoes the rise was as much as 180 per cent., on split peas 200 per cent. Other big increases in retail prices were: Lentils, 173 per cent.; baricot beans, 132 per cent., and rice, 120 per cent.

The rise in prices of necessaries in more common demand were: Rye bread, up 74.1 per cent.; lard, 72 per cent.; eggs, 71.4 per cent.; rye flour, 60 per cent. Bacon, as in England, was the dearest meat, with a 58.2 per cent. increase. The increase in the price of pork was 43.9 per cent.; of mutton, 10.7 per cent.; of beef, 8 per cent.

Veal showed a decrease in price of 1.9 per cent. Other low percentages of increase were: Sugar, 8 per cent.; coffee, 6.3 per cent.; milk, 9.1 per cent. Butter, however, costs 17.9 per cent. more. Compared with retail prices of provisions in Beruin during July, 1914, the increase on twenty articles of food was 40 per cent. in March, 1915. Since February, 1915, the level of food prices had risen 5.1 per cent.

Stock of Corn Taken Over.

On January 15, 1915, an order was issued dealing with wheat and flour. Millers were prohibited from delivering wheat flour except in a blend of which 30 per cent. consisted of rye flour, and in the making of wheat bread this blend of flour might be further replaced to the extent of 20 per cent. of its weight by potato preparation. From January 25, 1915, the stock of corn was taken over by the Government.

The official records of food supplies and retail prices in Berlin give the impression that though nowhere near starvation the masses of the people are compelled to hoard their resources with great frugality. Actual distress is kept at arm's length by State, municipal and individual prudence and economy. The tendency of prices will apparently still be upward until the new harvest is in sight.

Vienna is a worse case than Berlin. The monthly economic reports issued by the burgomaster are perfectly frank. In April these candidly admitted that there was scarcely anything of a gratifying character to be reported with regard to the organization for safeguarding the public food supply.

Supplies in the cattle market were said to have been greater in March than in normal times, but "a grievous rise of prices" is reported. Supplies of milk, eggs and pork were short. In March, 1914, the Vienna market received 6,800,000 eggs, whereas in March, 1915, 4,000,000 less were received. All round, food prices were steadily rising. Beef and pork were two cents and four cents per pound dearer respectively in April than they had been in March. On April 17, 1915, as compared with the end of July, 1914, the following increases in prices had taken place: Lentils, 163.3 per cent.; butter, 121.4 per cent.; rice, 116.7 per cent.; eggs, 115.2 per cent.; pork, 103.4 per cent.; beef, forequarter, 91.2 per cent.; hind quarter, 49 per cent.; milk, 28.6 per cent.; beef suet, 27.6 per cent., and sugar, 6.7 per cent. In striking contrast with Germany there seems to have been little anxiety about the potato supply.

In the Vienna markets on March 24 potatoes were retailed at 6 3-4d. per seven pounds, as against 7 1-4d. at the end of July, 1914. This was practically the one advantage that Vienna had over Berlin after nine months of war.

Money For Canadian West

While considered by some local grain authorities as rather over-optimistic, the following analysis of the western Canadian grain crop situation is of interest. It was made by the General Manager of a large Montreal milling company, who has just returned from the west. He said in part:

"Take 11,000,000 acres as last year's area seeded to wheat and apply to it an average yield of fourteen bushels to the acre and a total crop of 154,000,000 bushels is the result. At an average of $1.10 to the farmer, this would give a valuation of about $170,000,000 to last year's wheat crop. The acreage this year is estimated to be 12,500,000, and present prospects are for a very high yield. Allowing an average of twenty bushels to the acre which is not unreasonable, a crop of 250,000000 bushels is the result. Wheat is now being bought for October delivery at about 90 cents to the farmer. If this average held, as against last year's verge of $1.10, the crop would bring $225,000,000 to the farmer, or $55,000,000 more than last year. Even at 80 cents a bushel the crop would bring him $200,000,000 or $30,000,000 more than a year ago."

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles--Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

City Engineer Parsons, who is away on leave of absence, is expected home on Monday. His mission while away is to appear before the Examining Board in the State of Michigan with a view of qualifying for a diploma, over which so much controversy has arisen locally.

Operation Postponed.

The operation which City Treasurer Adams was to have undergone for eye trouble, has been postponed. An examination revealed the fact that conditions were not suitable at present for the treatment proposed.

Street Paving.

Both the Standard and Warren paving companies have representatives in the city who are supervising the preliminaries which will commence at an early date.

Will Attend Opening.

Members of the City Council will attend the opening of the new Salvation Army Sunday school which will be opened in Browntown this evening. Ald. G. W. Green will occupy the chair.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Mr. William H. Harrison, a leading merchant of Brockville, and Mayor for two years, died suddenly on Monday night of heart failure.

Will Raise $100,000.

The county of Grey will be called on to raise more than $100,000 to meet country expenditures. Mr. Fred Rutherford has been appointed county clerk in succession to his father, who resigned.

Inspector Appointed.

The Police Commissioners of Hamilton appointed Sergt. Cruickshank inspector of the east end division of the city.

Tender Accepted.

The tender of Messrs. Grier and Lethbridge for the Hydro-Electric transformer station at Owen Sound, has been accepted.

Bar Receipts Decrease.

License Inspector Sturdy, of Hamilton, states that the bar receipts in that city have fallen off fifty per cent. since the war started.

RECIPE TO STOP DANDRUFF

This Home Made Mixture Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids Its Growth.

To a half pint of water add:
Bay Rum . . ..1 oz.
Orlex Compound . . ..a small box
Glycerine . . ..½ oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, and relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not dye, it acts upon the hair roots, and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

Blind Youth Is Successful Harvard Pupil

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23. — A blind boy, twenty years of age, is approaching a successful end of his freshman year at Harvard. He is W. C. Plunkett of Roxbury, who entered the university last September with honours, and who has stood the pace in academic work at Cambridge.

The success that Plunkett has met in his first year, which is the most trying even to students in possession of all their faculties, has given him courage in his hope that he will be able to go all the way through college and earn a degree.

A typewriter of peculiar construction has enabled Harvard's blind boy to maintain a high standing in all his classes. At Harvard where professors of national reputation deliver lectures, one of the paramount tasks of the students is that of writing notes on the classroom lectures. The sightless student is unable to take notes with pen and ink like the rest o fthe undergraduates, but a typewriter which marks the paper on the roll with Braille point characters enables him to take down the lectures and preserve them in such a manner that he can read them with his fingers, nt thus be as well prepared to recite as the other students.

Plunkett is now a familiar figure in the college yard, and his daily walks about university territory have enabled him to know the lay of the land perfectly. With the aid of a cane he can now make his way from the freshman dormitory, where he lives, to the Harvard yard unassisted. He is often accompanied by his roommate, Carl A. Mendum. The other members of the freshman class do all that they can to aid Plunkett in his work.

The second important task of collegians is to read books in conjunction with the lectures that are given by the professors, and friends of the blind student take turns in reading aloud the weekly assignments in reading, which usually run up to 200 or 300 pages in all the studies. Plunkett listens to the students and takes notes on the typewriter of the most important parts.

Plunkett is a scholarship man at Harvard. His entrance examinations were of such high quality that he was awarded the class of 1904 scholarsip on entering, and his work during the first year at Harvard has been of such calibre as to insure his winning other scholarships. He was graduated from Roxbury Latin School with honours.

Interview Causes A Sensation

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, June 24.—An interview with the Pope published in La Liberte created a tremendous sensation, and Rome despatches to-day hint that as a result the Holy See may be transferred from Rome to Spain. In the interview the Pope criticized the Italian Government and suggested that while the relations of the Holy See were being considered, relations in Rome were not to the Pope's satisfaction.

Throughout there was a decided German colour to the interview, which has aroused a storm of protest throughout France and Italy. Rome despatches admit the interview, but state that there were many inaccuracies in the wording which gave a different meaning to the Pope's words.

Birds Singing Between Trenches

From a Private in the Black Watch.

The trenches are decidedly "cushy" —(soldier's word for comfortable), and the parapets pleasantly high and solid. The Germans are some 350 yards off.

During the day one "deccoes" (spies) at them through a periscope; at night sentries must take the risk of looking over the top. Of course, you can't afford to hold up a periscope for long in any one place, for even at 350 yards a crack shot could hit it.

I have seen a periscope shot from a man's hand and shattered after he had held it up only one minute. The snipers train their rifles on any spot where it is seen. The periscope is certainly a great boon. It saves thousands of lives every month.

You would laugh at the names of the places here. I'm writing this in "Lovers' Lane" — why it is called so I don't know perhaps the Boches have a "ate Avenue" over the way. In "Artillery Road," further up the trench, a notice reads, "Pedestrians, please keep to the right." "Rotten Row," "Bond Street," "Buckingham Palace," "Rotten Row," "Bond Street," "Buckingham Palace," "Rotten Row," "Bond Street," "Buckingham Palace,"

Austrians Are on the Offensive But the Italians Still Gain

BRITISH WORKMEN ARE RALLYING TO THE FACTORIES

First Battalion Said To Have Lost 500 Men In Recent Fighting

British Workers Rallying by Thousands to Factories--Britain Declines to Relax Rules Regarding Searching Neutrals for Contraband of War.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, June 25.—It is reported here that the First Battalion, mostly from Western Ontario, lost five hundred men, including twelve officers killed.

DUNKIRK, June 25.—German long range guns hurled twenty-six tons of explosives into this town causing much damage and killing several people.

LONDON, June 25.—British workers are rallying by thousands to factories in response to Lloyd George's call.

LONDON, June 25.—Britain declines to relax rules regarding searching neutrals for contraband of war.

ROME, June 25.—Austrians have assumed the offensive at several points, but Italians are still gaining.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 25.—For the first time in history an aeroplane has sunk a submarine. German airmen bombarded a Russian submarine in the Baltic near Gotland Island and it went to the bottom.

ROME, June 25.—Fort Hensel, one of the principal works of the Austrian fortress of Malborget, has been destroyed by Italian shell fire, General Cadorna reported to-day.

He also announced the capture of the Austrian town of Giorna, north of Piava.

LONDON, June 25.—The Norwegian vessel Truma, of 1,567 tons, has been submarined.

ATHENS, June 25.—Turkish casualties thus far in the fighting on Gallipoli Peninsula is estimated at 143,000.

A Mythilene despatch to-day said that in three days of fierce fighting on the Peninsula the Allies carried several enemy trenches, the second French division bearing the brunt of the attack.

LONDON, June 25.—The Norwegian steamer Bergensfjord with Dr. Dernberg aboard was permitted to leave England after a brief examination.

GENEVA, June 25.—Two more German specialists have arrived at Constantinople to treat the Sultan of Turkey.

ROME, June 25.—Bulgaria, Roumania and Greece will confer at Sofia as to entering the war with the Allies.

PARIS, June 25.—Germans reinforced made terrific assaults all along the line last night. The result was not decisive.

LONDON, June 25.—The United States tanker Pioneer and several other neutral steamers are being held at Kirkwall to search for contraband.

Britain's Denial That She Has Harmed American rade Will Not Do

United States Will Take Issue With Assertions in the British Note---Will Not Accept Denial

Special Cable to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Britain's denial that she has harmed American trade will not be accepted by the United States. Issue will be taken with assertions in the British note. In addition it is stated here that the reply evades the main point, the right of neutral nations to carry on their trade with each other unmolested by any belligerent. It is said that Secretary of State Lansing will begin preparing a reply note early next week.

The present intention is to have the note ready for President Wilson when he returns from his vacation trip. The German reply will be here by that time, and if it is satisfactory, as it is hoped, the President will turn attention to matters in dispute with Britain and her Allies. A delegation of New York importers is to confer with Secretary Lansing to-morrow. They will explain in detail how their business has been hampered by British and French warships ,which have diverted practically all vessels from neutral nations into British sea ports.

LONDON, June 25.—It was announced in the Commons to-day that fifty-six persons were killed and 196 injured in fourteen air raids by the Germans on English towns.

LIVERPOOL, June 25.—Report here says a German submarine was rammed and sunk by a British destroyer in the Irish Sea yesterday.

Says Russians Fear a War In the Balkans

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, (by wireless telegraphy to Sayville, N.Y., June 25.—The Overseas News Agency yesterday gave out the following:

"The German Minister at Sofia, Bulgaria, who has arrived at Berlin to confer with the Foreign Office concerning the latest proposals of the quadruple entente to Bulgaria, returns soon. The press of the allied countries expresses disappointment at conditions in the Balkans. A revival of the Balkan alliance seems impossible on account of the various quarrels between Serbia and Bulgaria about Macedonia, Serbia and Roumania about the Banat territory in Southern Hungary, Serbia and Greece about Albania. Russian diplomatists even fear a new Balkan war if satisfaction by the quadruple Entente of the demands of one or two of the Balkan nations incites the others.

"Warning is given in official circles against over-estimating reports of domestic troubles in Russia. In these quarters the convention is expressed that Russia, if willing, is capable of continuing the war for several months. Rumours of impending peace negotiations and the arrival of Russian mediators are utterly unfounded.

"Clemens Delbrueck, Minister of the Interior, presided over a conference of nearly one hundred officials representing the Imperial government and the governments of several of the Federated States, at which there was discussed a general economic plan for procuring full supplies of food, fodder and raw material for Germany next year."

Warm Weather Is in Prospect

The weather man promises a taste of summer weather within a few days, but it will not be the brand we used to get, when the family took turns in the bath tub to cool off. The west reports warm temperatures from Vancouver to Winnipeg.

To settle all arguments about the cause of the cool spell, the weather man says that it is not due to the heavy cannonading in Europe, but to a heavy storm that swept the Atlantic, and drew in the cold winds from the ice fields of the Hudson Bay.

The area of low pressure near the Atlantic coast has remained stationary, but is filling up, and the winds are now moderate along the coast and in the Gulf.

Crop Conditions In the West

"Telegraphic crop reports received by the department of agriculture from various parts of Saskatchewan show that generally favourable conditions exist.

In those parts where the extremely high winds of a few weeks ago caused a certain amount of damage to the young grain, the grain has recovered with little re-seeding.

Beneficial showers have fallen during the week, and while the weather remains cool and cloudy the grain is making satisfactory growth. At most places the crops, averaging from six to twelve inches in height.

There is reason to believe that the grain crops have been considerably damaged by cutworms. The present report refers to damaged crops in Kindersley, Saskatoon, Shaunavon, Wolseley and Aneroid districts, and it was stated that the cutworm was active in the northern district. A ten hours' rain in the Melfort district at the week-end will no doubt cause an improvement of conditions, as the rain fall there was previously very limited.

From the reports received it would seem that the growing of fodder corn is receiving more attention this year than previously, owing largely, no doubt, to the encouragement given by bankers' associations.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

TURKS' STRONGHOLD TAKEN AFTER MONTHS OF FIGHTING

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, June 25.—The following official communication on the operations in the Dardanelles was issued by the War Office last night:

"Yesterday the expeditionary corps in the Orient attacked the Turkish lines on two-thirds of the front. After an artillery preparation the infantry sallied from the trenches with superb spirit. Our left, in a single bound, carried two lines of the enemy's trenches, and these they held notwithstanding violent and numerous counter-attacks.

"To the right, on more difficult ground, the struggle continued throughout the day on the ruins of the Turkish works which had been razed by the Turkish artillery. The enemy, bringing up without cessation fresh troops, had succeeded in retaking these entrenchments when a battalion of the foreign legion and a battalion of Zouaves in a bayonet assault carried the position in ten minutes.

"This brilliant charge decided the issue and finished for the day the efforts of the Turks to regain the ground lost.

"In a counter-offensive on our right this morning the enemy was decimated without having achieved any gain.

"Summing up, the day ended with success along the whole line, despite the desperate nature of the struggle. We took some prisoners, among whom were several officers.

"The battle ship Saint Louis has effectively bombarded the batteries on the Asiatic side. At our left the British army gave us efficacious support. Everything confirms that the enemy's losses were very heavy.

"The important point is that we have occupied the ground which commands the head of the ravine of Kereves Dere, which the Turks had defended with the utmost determination for several months, using all their resources to hold it."

SUCCESS OF THE ITALIANS IN FIRST MONTH OF CAMPAIGN

ROME, via Chiasso, to Paris, June 25.—One of the chief generals in the Italian War Office summarizes the first month of the Italian campaign against Austria about as follows:

"One month ago the Italians invaded Austrian territory, uprooted the yellow and black poles bearing the Austrian eagle and occupied the enemy positions along a front of 500 miles.

"An Austrian squadron bombarded the Italian coast on the Adriatic and Austrian aeroplanes dropped eleven bombs on Venice.

"During this month the Italians overran the whole of Friuli. The capture of Tolmino and Gorizia, the two Austrian strongholds, is considered imminent, which would open the way to Triest; while in the Alpine region in the Province of Trent they have conquered peaks and passes, from which the picked Austro-Hungarian troops have been unable to dislodge them.

"Austrian activity has been chiefly displayed in bombarding the Italian Adriatic towns."

NOTHING OF IMPORTANCE, SAYS VIENNA.

VIENNA, via Berlin wireless, June 24.—The War Office, in a review of the results of the first month of the Austro-Italian war, declared to-day that Italy has failed to accomplish anything of importance.

"Our troops in the southwest maintain their positions on or near the frontier," it was stated.

In a Pennsylvania railroad town the trainmen are called to duty by flashing their names and other information on the screens of motion picture theatres.

Russians Are Not Seeking Peace

Special Cable to The Examiner:

FRANKFORT, via London, June 25.—The Frankfurter Zeitung publishes an inspired article from Berlin denying positively rumours which are being circulated in certain quarters of Berlin that negotiations are under way looking to a separate peace with Russia.

According to these rumours Russian emissaries of high birth have been in Berlin and the headquarters at the front. These reports even mentioned the conditions under which it was said Russia wished to make peace.

The Berlin correspondent of the Zeitung says he is in a position to state there is not a word of truth in these reports; that no Russian emissaries of any sort have been to Berlin, and that no attempts have been made to get in touch with German official circles for the initiation of such negotiations.

The same positive denial is given to rumours of peace proceedings which were circulated following the recent peace conference of the International Congress of Women at The Hague.

Rates For Parcels Sent to Soldiers

Friends of soldiers who want to send parcels to their men at the front are sometimes in doubt as to the postal charges which will be made. For the benefit of inquiries, The Herald has obtained from the general post office the rates, which on parcels up to eleven pounds, are as follows:

One pound, 32 cents; two pounds, 40 cents; three pounds, 48 cents; four pounds, 64 cents; five pounds, 72 cents; six pounds, 80 cents; seven pounds, 88 cents; eight pounds, $1.02; nine pounds, $1.10; ten pounds, $1.18; eleven pounds, $1.26. That is the postal charge for the first pound is 32 cents, and for each pound or fraction of a pound more, from 8 to 16 cents additional.

THIRST QUENCHERS

Many Satisfying Drinks Made From Montserrat Lime Juice

Within the pale, yellow peel of a fresh cultivated Lime is one of the most fascinating juices that ever tempted the palate of thirsty souls.

On a blistering hot day, when the whole body is relaxed with heat, half a wineglass of Montserrat Lime Juice a little sugar and broken ice in a glass of water, makes a summer drink that will linger in the memory.

Good wine cannot be made from wild grapes, neither can a wholesome palatable juice be pressed from wild Limes.

Montserrat Lime Juice is made from cultivated Limes, and the juice is wholesome, refreshing and palatable.

All leading druggists and grocers have Montserrat.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

We didn't have much news to exchange as nothin' much had happened up our way and he had heard of what had from Kate and the hermit; and he had been playin' hide an' seek with the goats all winter, so he hadn't picked up any gossip. I left 'em shortly and went back to get ready for that early spring the old hermit was hurrahin' for.

I had the boys cut our stuff clean and bunch the stragglers, so that when the other outfits started to round-up, they wouldn't have any bother. We put our brand on a couple o' hundred head o' dogies which had drifted in from the Lord knows where, but we didn't even brand fall calves if they were still on speakin' terms with their mammies and their mammies were wearin' any sort of a brand. The little band of outlaw bulls had wintered through better than anybody, unless it was that sacred hump-backed cow, and by this time the boys all thought the world o' those bulls. They used to shoot at their ears or their horns or their tails just to keep 'em stirred up and still feelin' part o' the family, but they wouldn't have killed one for a new hat.

I reported to Jim that we'd only have about eighteen hundred head to market that summer, but all clean, well-bred stock, and that we intended to sell about three hundred head o' hosses. I didn't want to waste any time on Dodge City that year so I piruted around to see if I couldn't locate some other fellers who'd help to fill out a regular trail herd.

Bradin was in purty good fettle, as he had gained by the norther. Some of his own stuff had drifted beyond recall, but a lot more had stuck on his range, and most of it was wearin' brands no one seemed to know. His theory was that they were brands worked over by rustlers and had been rangin' up in the Strip, but he didn't aim to worry none about what Fate had handed over to him. He had a few hundred to sell, and agreed to raise over a thousand head and eight riders, among his neighbours, we to furnish all the extra hosses, the chuck-waggon, and the foreman.

Spring did open up early sure enough and a high old time they had on the round-ups for stuff was scattered worse 'n ya'd believe, but after everybody that had any excuse to had cut our stuff, we were still better than seven hundred head to the good. We got away early with the drive, Phil McLaughlin goin' as trail foreman and Jim as hoss wrangler. He had cut the hosses he intended to sell into one of the big corrals, and had rode 'em out a time or two, so that by the time they reached Dodge they'd be purty well gentled.

Jim had been doin' some letter writin' durin' the winter and had high hopes of makin' a clean-up on the hosses. Red, Shorty and Flames stayed back with me and we had plenty to do to keep our stuff straight, as several herds were brought up along a trail which ran within a mile of the ranch house, and they didn't use any harshness to keep stragglers from joinin' on.

Flames went into business on his own book that spring. He'd mix in with a 'trail outfit and would spin 'em a tale about the sacred cow bein' escaped from a circus, and havin' a hundred dollars reward offered for her at Dodge, but that he hadn't ever then he'd sell his interest in her for five dollars. She had got so by this time that she liked to have a little fun with humans, and she let herself be thrown into herd as peacible as an old hen, and would trail along in a dreamy way until she reached a certain spot a few miles above our north line. Here she would give a couple of grunts, throw up her tail, and head due west, crossin' Red Deer Crick like a flash of ligtnin' and fetchin' up at our place a couple of days later. This was no doubt wicked, but at a place like the Lion Head the' wasn't much fun for a boy like Flames unless he could get someone else in a mess at the same time. During the winter we had hog-tied him mornin's so that Isaac could get some hayrn' into him; and now Flames was tryin' to get even.

He managed to get twenty or thirty colts penned up in the little corral one evenin' and at supper he told Isaac a tale about 'em bein' locoed. Isaac was interested in a minute and Red joined in, as usual, addin' what he could think up about the way a locoed hoss suffered, until Isaac could not eat. They told him that once a locoed hoss got down he never could get up alone, and that those ponies probably would be gettin' down very shortly after dusk unless some one ketp 'em stirred up. He tried to get them to do it but they said that if they arrived too soon the locoed ponies was like to trample 'em, and so they wouldn't have a thing to do with it.

Flames lipped out after supper and Isaac went down in the dusk to the corral which had a swing gate set between two high posts with a crosspiece from one to the other. Flames was up on the crosspiece with about a dozen lame Joneses—forked sticks, you know—and when Isaac came in sight, Flames let the gate swing and the colts started out. He dropped a lame Jones straddle of each one's neck as it passed through and those colts were locoed for true. They pitched and sunfished and swapped ends and floundered around there regardless, and Isaac was in the midst of it all. He wasn't injured none, but he never did get over tellin' about the fearful agony those pore dumb brutes were in. He couldn't see, anything extra, and this was a big help to Flames in a lot of his pranks.

Soon after Jim had started on the drive, Old Baldy Hagus came over to see about puttin' out the grain-crop, and I set him at it pronto. He had busted up some new ground the fall before, but I had him put in the stubble ground, too, for that straw had been mighty handy durin' the norther and we might just as well have a lot of it.

Baldy was still sore about gettin' shot through his Bible and he'd set a whole day and complain about it if he could get anyone to listen to him. "I didn't kick none," he would say solemn, "when they shot me on the saddle horn, nor yet when they plunked me on the silver watch, 'cause I was still worldly at those times; but hanged if it didn't rile me when they plugged me through the Bible. I was a redeemed sinner then if ever there was one and they had a right to let me alone. It's a downright outrage and if I ever learn who did it, I'll get even with 'em if it takes the balance of my mortal life."

"I should 'a' thought you'd 'a' felt more resentful about gettin' shot in the watch, Baldy," sez I.

"Well," sez he, takin' out the timepiece and lookin' at it reproachful, "afternoons I do. She keeps just as good time from six to twelve as anybody's watch, but afternoons—well, truth to tell it's afternoons that she keeps the time for she won't give none of it down from seven minutes after twelve to eleven minutes past six. Just as soon as I see her bogged down at seven minutes after twelve, I've got to back her around to six and then do a lot of computin'. It's a darned bother! I just know how I'm goin' to lose a lot of time this season, and when you're losin' time on the work o' five boys it runs into money fast."

Baldy was an ideal boss and he had as fine a lot o' workin' sons as any thoughtful parent could wish. He'd get the boys lined out to suit him, an' then he'd plant himself comfortable with the watch propped up where he could see it without movin', and then he'd light his pipe and search out the injuries he had received from bein' a target. I went within hailin' distance of him one time and he bawled out: "Hey, the Projical Son got shot square in the belly!"

"Who?" sez I, ridin' up to him.

"The Projical Son," sez he, holdin' out the page which tells about the Projical Son fillin' his belly with the husks on which the swine were feedin' and sure enough, the belly was shot plumb out.

"Baldy," sez I, "what are swine?"

"They're hogs," sez he, "just ordinary, common, pet hogs."

"Well," sez I, "that's what I allus thought. Now, when I was a lad back in Indiana, corn wasn't none too good for our hogs, and if the Projical Son has been delegated to make 'em eat husks instead, why the Projical Son's old man would have been just one fatted calf ahead, 'cause all the hogs ever I was acquainted with were set in their ways and ready to swaller anything but an insult, while the Projical Son allus struck me as a soft kind of individual who'd 'a' done better at stickin' around home sayin' papa and mamma, then in dashin' out into new territory seekin' his fortunes.'"

"I could have explained it all to ya a couple o' months ago," sez Baldy, mournful, "but now, I don't even know where I'm at myself. Seth was shot," sez he, turnin' the pages and pointin' with his finger. "Abraham was shot four times. Even Samson was grazed, but only in fine print at the head of a chapter. And worst of all, there was a hole shot plump through the Ark. I allus felt a drawin' to Samson for the way he took it out on his wife's relations on account of her hurrahin' him into gettin' his hair cut, but when you stop to think it over, the Ark was the importantest thing in history. Why it takes my breath away to think of the fix we'd every last one be in if the' actually had been a regular hole shot through the real Ark Mercy!"

Baldy brooded over this constant, and sometimes he'd get so worked up he'd let his sons toil twenty minutes over time; and it wasn't long before we could all see that his religion had been as bad shot up as his Bible.

Next time I saw Kate, I teased her consid'able about havin' a lover with goat whiskers until finally after gettin' me to promise not to tell, she took out a small photygraph, and showed it to me.

Wine may improve with age but blame few photygraphs do. This was of a male human in his teens—you couldn't rightly call him a boy 'cause he looked too solemn and oppressed. His hair was long and scooped up into a wave, and it must have had glue in it to make it stick in that shape. He had on lots of collar and necktie, but his clothes were the hit o' the bill. Somebody must have made those clothes on purpose, but hanged if I could see why anyone else should have chose to wear 'em; an' yet through it all you could see that this was Tom Smith when he was a two year old, and just beginnin' to arch his neck a little when he nickered.

The Point of Contact
YEARS AGO, retail buyers met retail sellers at the counter. To-day they meet first in the columns of the newspaper The advertising is the vital point of contact. There, may be seen what is wanted, how, when, and where, it may be purchased.
EACH MORNING, when the shopping expedition for the day is planned, the EXAMINER is consulted in thousands of homes. Its advertising pages, with descriptions of goods and prices, is a never failing guide to the ladies of Peterboro.
PRACTICALLY all the shopping is done at the breakfast and tea table, when the list is made out. This is the sensible way.
The Examiner
gives better all days there.

ROMANCES AND SIDELIGHTS OF THE WAR FLASHED BY CABLE

Princess Follows Husband to Front as a Private

Romance of War Is Revealed When Girl Is Decorated with St. George's Cross After Heroic Exploit in Which She Saves Four Russian Companies.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
London, June 19.

A delightful love story of the war, and something more, which reads like a chapter from mediaeval romance, a story of a beautiful young princess who followed her lover to the fighting line in soldier's attire and performed such deeds of valor as won for her the highest military award that Russia has to give is told by the Warsaw correspondent of the Outre Rossi.

Considerable attention has been attracted in the streets of Warsaw, he writes, by a young wounded Russian officer on crutches, accompanied by a still younger private with one arm in a sling and wearing a St. George's Cross, the V. C. of Russia. The comeliness, the deep lashes of the big dark eyes and the delicate color of the skin were too striking in the case of the latter to deceive the eye of even a casual passer-by regarding the real sex of the young private, and the true story of the youthful St. George hero soon became the talk of the town.

The officer was a young student who joined the Russian army as a volunteer. The private was a daughter of a princely landowner in the Caucasus bearing one of the noble names. When they first met both were going by the same train to Warsaw, he to join his regiment, and she to stop with some friends. Nothing was further from her mind than to go to the front; but Cupid, the upsetter of calculations, also took it into his head to travel by the Warsaw express.

They fell in love with one another at sight, became engaged, and, after two days—the length of the railway journey—went to the first Orthodox Greek Church to be married. A kindly priest readily performed a hurried war wedding. From the church straight to the firing line. On the way the girl managed to obtain a soldier's kit, and assumed the name of Laurenty. Her appeal addressed to the officer commanding to allow her to remain in the trenches was so eloquent that the officer pretended not to have recognised her sex.

She soon obtained her baptism of war. The position where she and her husband were stationed was one of the most critical on the River Rawka, and subjected to continual German attacks. After one particularly severe encounter all the officers of her husband's and neighboring companies were put hors de combat. Her husband, though only a lieutenant, found himself in temporary command of four companies, with his wife—his lieutenant.

When the battle raged at its highest the husband sent one of his men to the front line with an order to retire. The German guns had found their mark and were mercilessly mowing down the Russians. Further delay meant complete loss of men.

The orderly came back with a message that the front line men refused to retire.

"They had their order from the late commander," he said, "rather to die than give up an inch of ground, and they are going to carry it out."

Another man was sent to bring them away, but he also failed in his mission. They had given their word to their dead commander, and they were going to keep it.

The husband sent his wife as his last trump card. "Perhaps you will be able to persuade them," he said.

She tried, but without success. The dutiful soldiers were obstinate. As she was shouting at them her "superior's" orders the enemy's shrapnel began exploding [illegible]. The Germans were crawling nearer and nearer to the front trenches.

Seeing there was not a moment to be lost, she resorted to her weightiest argument. She angrily raised her rifle and brought its butt end down with all her force on the shoulder of one and then another man. Her angry voice, full of authority, and still more forceful action had their effect. One after another the men evacuated the trenches and ran toward the back line, Laurenty remaining behind until the last man left the danger spot for a safer place. As she stood there a shrapnel splinter struck her right arm. In another ten minutes there would not have been one man left in the front trench.

When she got back to her husband's position she found him wounded in the leg. They were removed to the same hospital, and the soldier princess was soon presented to the commander in chief, and received a Cross of St. George, the warrior patron saint of Russia as well as of England.

Standing Aeroplane on Its Tail, British Aviator Fires at Zeppelin

Machine Gun Fastened to His Machine Prevents Attack While in Pursuit of Dirigible, so Airman Risks Death by Plunging Earthward and Directing His Weapon Above Him—Spectators Feared Loss of Mind.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
LONDON, June 19.

Mr. C. G. Grey, editor of the Aeronaut, writes as follows in the Daily Express:—

Within the last few days I have had the luck to run across some of our people who appened to be at Dunkirk when the Ramsgate Zeppelin was attacked by naval seaplanes. Their account of what happened elucidates several interesting points.

When the Zeppelin was first sighted from the French coast it was comparatively low down and seemed to be steering wildly and pawing from side to side as if it had been hit. Soon afterward naval aircraft were seen in pursuit.

Apparently as soon as the aeroplanes were sighted by the Zeppelin the big machine made frantic attempts to rise, but seemed to make little upward progress till it heaved overboard two big masses of stuff to lighten itself.

None of the eye-witnesses could be perfectly sure what these masses of material were. Each seemed to be about the size of a man, and some people were inclined to assume that they were overboard the bodies of men who had been hit. Others were of the opinion that they were simply cases of spare ammunition, or, perhaps, even machine guns.

Whatever it was, before the aeroplanes reached her she was already climbing rapidly, with the result that only one of the aeroplanes actually managed to get directly over the ship to drop its bombs.

The pilot of one of the other aeroplanes, which was a small and very fast single-seated biplane, carrying a machine gun, finding that he was unable to reach the height of the Zeppelin in time to get within range of her, started firing at her from below. As the machine gun was a fixture on the aeroplane and had to be aimed like the gun on Judson's "flatiron gunboat" in Mr. Kipling's famous story, by "wearing ship to suit," the only way the pilot could bring his gun to bear on the ship was by standing the aeroplane on its tail and deliberately falling backward while he was firing.

The watchers on the ground thought at first that his machine had been hit, but when they saw him recover and repeat the performance several times they came to the conclusion either that he had gone mad and was giving the crew of the Zeppelin an exhibition of fancy flying or that there was some method in his madness and he was really attacking.

Whether he actually managed to hit anything or not could not, of course, be known, but a machine gun's only chance against a Zeppelin is to put a bullet into the petrol tank or into an engine. In such a case it may with luck cause a petrol fire in one of the cars and so set the whole ship alight, or it may put the engines out of action, so that the airship is unable to make headway against the wind, but no amount of ordinary machine gun bullets would ever bring a Zeppelin down simply by perforating the gas bags.

It is pleasing to know that the one aeroplane which did get over the Zeppelin and undoubtedly did some damage to it was of that essentially English make the Avro—in fact, a sister machine to those which made the successful raid on Friedrichshafen.

Aka Baba Stands in Allies' Path to Constantinople

Mountain, with Its Long Arms Reaching from Aegean Sea to Dardanelles, Is Network of Defences from Which Fire of War Ships Has Been Unable to Drive Ottoman Forces.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
London, June 19.

Two months ago London was saying, "We will be in Constantinople by the first of May." A month ago the date was advanced to July 1. To-day ask the military observers of the situation at the straits and they say:—"We ought to get up into the Sea of Marmora around the first of August; maybe not until September."

The first bombardment of the Dardanelles forts occurred in February when an allied Franco-British fleet steamed up to the entrance and engaged the fortifications at Sedd-ul-Bahr and Kum Kaleh. When weather conditions permitted the war ships continued their activity each day up to March 18, when the most tremendous engagement between shore and floating forts since the American civil war resulted in the loss of three allied battle ships, with no perceptible impression on the Turkish defences.

Great Britain then realised the task which she and her Allies faced in opening a way for Russia to the summer seas, the world markets and the unlimited supply of ammunition so vitally necessary to the success of her armies. Following this realisation there was feverish haste in the despatch of the expeditionary army for which plans already had been made and which was intended to cooperate with the fleet in a combined land and [illegible] on the fortifications at the narrows of the straits.

To-day the allied armies are a mile and a half further toward Constantinople than they were three days after the operations began, late in April. A consideration of the military and topographical conditions will give to the readers of this article some understanding of the reasons for this seemingly slow progress.

From the coast line at the point of the peninsula the ground has a gradual slope upward, broken by little irregular hills and patches of shrubs until it culminates in quite a sharp eminence just before the village of Krithia, five miles inland, is reached. Krithia nestles on a quiet little plateau perhaps half a mile wide. The first advance of the Allies brought them nearly to the heights in front of Krithia, where the Turks made their first real stand.

Aka Baba, Turks' Gibraltar.

Rising abruptly behind Krithia is Aka Baba, 780 feet high, and the Gibraltar of Gallipoli, on whose sides now the Turks are resisting the further advance of the allied troops.

Aka Baba is just six miles from the point of the peninsula and midway between the straits and the sea. From it, two arms extend in a slight semi-circle reaching to the shore line on both sides. The mountain itself has a particularly forbidding aspect. One writer has described it as most resembling an old Chinese idol, with a great round, stupid looking head and two short, thick set shoulders and then two long arms stretching out on either side as though barring the way to some forbidden inner temple. Between these arms lies the plain across which the Allies have been charging with the utmost heroism in their efforts to storm the mountain.

Thus far the great Aka Baba idol has lost his two hands and, [illegible] up flank attacks, the armies are slowly creeping up his long arms. These hands, stretched out along the coast on either side, have been particularly susceptible to the fire from the war ships and, to continue the simile, the naval guns, combined by land operations, have cut them off at the wrists. Credit for this on shore goes to the British on the Aegean Sea side and to the French, who are holding the right of the line.

Official despatches from the front the last week have seemed to indicate a slackening of the effort on the front of the mountain and an inclination to concentrate on the wings, since a costly general assault on the centre ten days ago.

This action, details of which are just reaching me, was one of the most spectacular in the history of the war. The opening guns were fired by the French around Sedd-ul-Bahr when they began a sustained bombardment of the right arm of Aka Baba and the broken country under its summit to the right of the Krithia road. The shells, fired in salvos, swept every foot of the ground over which the French infantry was waiting to advance. At the same time the war ships in the straits took up the bombardment. They turned their guns on the upper slopes of the mountain and the Turkish trenches in the valley of the Kereves, a little river emptying into the [illegible]

French Advance Under Shrapnel Cover.

This bombardment continued for half an hour, when the French infantry advanced under cover of a rain of shrapnel, which fell with remarkable precision a uniform distance of fifty yards in front of the column. Until half-past four o'clock in the afternoon line after line of French Colonials ran forward, only to be swept back by the fire of carefully concealed Turks, who used their machine guns and rifles with deadly effect. The net gain of the day was a mile of ground on the extreme of the line, where the French obtained a footing overlooking the Kereves Valley, which they captured on Thursday of last week.

Late in the afternoon, as though controlled by an electric button, there suddenly opened from every ship afloat and from every battery ashore one of the most stupendous bombardments ever witnessed. All the battle ships and all the cruisers—of which there are nearly fifty in the Dardanelles waters—opened fire with their main and secondary batteries on both arms of Aka Baba. The great twelve inch shells of the battle ships searched every patch of shrub and every ravine in which a Turk might hide, and by carefully plotted directions found every yard of the upper slopes. Three separate zones of fire were marked out. The big guns confined their fire to the summit of the mountain and its higher reaches. The secondary batteries took up the work where the big guns left off and carried the fire to the lower slopes. Here the field pieces began to concentrate and sent a continuous spray of shrapnel and explosive shell over the ground in front of the allied trenches.

For fifteen minutes the bombardment continued, when simultaneously every gun stopped firing and a general assault of the entire army was ordered.

Cossack Prisoner Leaves Hospital Bed to Say Goodby to His Horse

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
Berlin, June 19.

Emil Szomory, correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt with the Austrian army in the Carpathians, tells of an inspection of the Russian prisoners in Okulisca. In the hospital he found many Cossacks severely wounded, but many were convalescent, thanks to their iron constitution. He stopped by the bed of a Cossack, a big, powerful man of splendid physique.

"What is your name?" asked the correspondent.

"Timofin Susin, of the village of Dom."

"Are you married or single?"

"I have a wife and five children."

"How long have you been in the war?"

"Since the summer."

He was asked about the outrages committed by the Cossacks in their invasion of Galicia.

"All those stories are lies," he replied. "We did not murder women and children. We were hungry, it is true; in this war we Cossacks have suffered from lack of food as never before. When we wanted something to eat our officers laughed at us and said, 'Go to the devil, and get it for yourself. Are not you Cossacks?'

"That is why we plundered in the villages like a lot of hungry wolves. When we had money we paid for everything, but when our money was all gone there was nothing else to do but to take what we found. Ask those who captured us and they will tell you that we had not a single hapek left. We Cossacks know that all outrages are put on our shoulders, and that is nothing new. The Russian soldiers themselves are not friendly to us at home and the Russian officers will never shake hands with the officer of a Cossack regiment. Only when they need us, when they are really hungry, then we are good enough to be sent out to get food in any circumstances."

"Would you like to be sent back to Russia now?"

"By no means," replied the Cossack quickly. "We are contented here and glad to get away from the misery that we endured. When the war is over, of course, we will go back home to our families. But I want to ask one favor," and the burly Cossack's lips trembled and he bowed his head as if in devotion.

"What is it you wish?" he was asked.

"I want the privilege of saying goodby to my horse."

There were traces of tears in his eyes.

"But how will you find your horse?"

"Oh, I can find him among a thousand. The sergeant told me that our horses also were brought back here."

The chaplain, who had heard his request, called a corporal. He asked the wounded Cossack to follow him, and though his wounds had not yet healed he arose quickly from his couch and went out. Numerous horses and carts stood in the market place, and like a child looking for its beloved toy the burly Cossack ran about, arm in sling, seeking his beloved horse. At last a cry of joy escaped him and he stood in front of an emaciated brown horse that was hitched to a cart. Timofin Susin put his arm around the animal's neck and kissed him tenderly on the nose. Out of his pocket he took a piece of bread and gave it to the horse to eat, watching it tenderly. He kissed the animal again, stroked it once more and then, kneeling before the corporal, he thanked him for the great privilege that had been accorded to him of saying goodby to his horse.

TARTARS IN THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
LONDON, June 19.—During the later Middle Ages Russia was more or less under the heel of the Mongols, and the population on the Middle and Lower Volga was entirely Finnish or Tartar. When the new Russia began to build itself up round Moscow these tribes were gradually absorbed or subdued and furnished contingents to the armies of the Tsars. This has been the case down to the present day, though now it is probable that the contingents are all classed as Cossacks. Indeed, the term "Cossack" may signify a man of almost every one of the varied races of the Russian Empire. On his expedition to Tibet Sven Hedin had an escort of four Cossacks. Two were West Siberian Russians, but the other two Buriats.

Most of the tribes along the Volga are now in course of rapid Russianizing, but the Bashkirs, near the Ural Mountains, and the Kalmuks, about the mouth of the Volga, are still largely nomadic. The Bashkirs and Kalmuks have fought in the Russian imperial ranks for centuries. In 1812 they still wore ancient suits of chain mail armor and carried bows instead of firearms.

The majority of the Kalmuks migrated from Russia in 1771 in order to escape regular Russian rule and taxation; the number remaining in their ancient seats by the Volga is about 200,000.

The Kirghiz are more than twice as numerous as the Kalmuks and Bashkirs taken together, and must form an important element in the Siberian Cossack regiments. They number nearly 3,000,000 souls, spread over Southern Siberia and Northern and Western Turkestan, besides others in the Chinese Empire. During the seventeenth century they were the ruling people in Northern Turkestan, but after 1723 their power declined. They became separated into three hordes (Horde—Turki ordu, a camp), and pressed by the great conqueror, Nadir Shah of Persia, and other foes, sought the protection of Russia. The protectorate gradually became direct rule. A curious blunder committed by the Russians was to consider their new subjects as Mahommedans and consequently to tolerate and even encourage the Mahommedan fact. Actually the Kirghiz were mostly Shamanists and might easily have been converted to Christianity.

The Fierce Exaltation of Battle Told by Frenchman

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
Paris, June 19.

"No more excitement; an astonishing calm fills us as we open fire upon the Germans who have taken cover in the houses in the outskirts of the village," writes Charles Tardieu in a recent instalment of his "Impressions of a Corporal," published in the Figaro.

"From windows, embrasures, from the cover of doorways they blaze away at us. Forty bodies are strewn across the interval between us; a few wounded men are scrambling and wriggling in the mud. Little by little we regain our breath.

"At the top of the village street debouches a company of German infantry. A hellish fire welcomes them, but still they come on, sowing their road by files. Faster and faster we pump our breech bolts. Their first ranks crumple, they tramp over them; the next rank falls, still they come on. At last their chief, a huge devil of an officer, who is waving them on, goes down. A new volley drops seven or eight more men. This time they stop, hesitate a second, then turn and run.

"'Charge!' roars the captain. 'Give them the steel!' We rush in, our two buglers, their neck veins swelling, playing us the heart stirring notes of the charge. An heroic intoxication swells through us and we run like beings possessed into the narrow street, through the hammering bullets.

"Into houses, through gardens, past open doorways the skirmishers throw themselves, to come out with dripping bayonets. No more shots—death shrieks, groans, hoarse shouts, piteous cries for mercy are mingled with the crash of falling furniture, the slamming of doors, the nasty rasp of steel on steel. And over it all the strident notes of the charge!

"From each house as it is silenced pour our men, some of them wounded. Hatless, coatless, without their packs; one man has discarded his blouse and is working with his sleeves rolled up.

"Trampling on the corpses that strew the way, leaping over obstructions, we make our way up the street, when a machine gun section appears in front of us. But before they have time to unlimber we are upon them. An instant of hard work with butt and steel and its crew are down beside their overturned piece. We pass on.

"Into a cross street we turn. A few bodies are lying there; one house is burning briskly. Spiked helmets bob over the walls as their wearers retreat through the gardens. A scattered fire is heard on all sides. At the end of the street, behind a barricade of overturned wagons and wine barrels, some of the Germans who still hold out open up on us. 'Charge bayonet!'

"We rush on, when a shuttered window bursts open and the head of Lugagne, the bugler of the Third, pops out, blowing a frantic charge. Our comrades, making the frontal attack, have won their way through.

"Sweeping everything before them, our comrades join us, shouting with the joy of battle as they scale the barricade. By groups, rallied at hazard, we search the houses. All who show fight are finished; those who surrender are rapidly hurried to the rear. At last there are no living forms but those clad in French uniforms and we arrive at the other end of the village, which is now completely cleaned out.

"Our officers, in the desk, rally their men, bringing order out of the confusion. Some three hundred prisoners, livid, trembling, are herded into the courtyard of a house, under guard of the sergeant major and twenty men. They will be well guarded.

"But what is this? Crash! Boooooom! They are opening fire with their artillery upon the village. The captain comes running.

"'Corporal, what are you loafing there for? Find the major and ask for orders!'

"I go running aimlessly. The major? Where is he? Bodies, bodies everywhere. Wounded men who whimper, haversacks, knapsacks, rifles, strewn about. Blood everywhere—on the walls, on the doors, on the paving stones. Cries, shouted orders, the plaints of the wounded. A stream of injured men looking for the surgeon.

"Somewhere a bugle blows the assemble and I rush through the wounded, who are patching themselves up as best they can, some dragging a leg, some with arms in slings.

"'The major? Where is the major?'"

'ANNOUNCE DESIGN FOR FRENCH MILITARY CROSS

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
Paris, June 19.

The design for the military cross to be distributed in France for valor in battle has been decided upon by General Florentin, Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honor.

The cross will be in polished bronze, with four arms or branches, surmounted by a crown of laurels and suspended by a double green ribbon. On the ribbon will be a clasp with the word "Citation" (honorable mention), and in cases where a soldier has been mentioned several times in the orders of the day additional clasps will be added. The appearance of the clasps will vary according to the kind of order in which the name of the recipient has been cited. For instance, a general army order, division order, brigade order or regimental order. In the centre of the cross will be the date and year when the act of bravery which merited the decoration was performed. The cross will be so made that it can also be worn in the buttonhole of a civilian coat or suit.

NEW STOCK OF FOWL FOR EAST PRUSSIANS

(SPECIAL DISPATCH.)
Berlin, June 19.

In the second invasion of East Prussia by the Russians, says the Berliner Tageblatt, nearly all the cattle and fowl were taken from the country. While the peasants were enabled to save some of their cattle by flight, they were obliged to leave their fowl behind, and as a result East Prussia suffers from a lack of chickens, ducks and geese. A relief movement has been started throughout Germany to relieve the suffering peasants of East Prussia, and from all corners of the empire chickens and geese and ducks are being sent to the stricken districts. Carloads of 2,000 chickens are constantly arriving, and the hope is expressed that East Prussia soon will have enough fowl to make up for the loss caused by the Russian invasion.

DOCTOR SAID SCIATICA RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 106 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to se me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

ONE-PIECE KIMONO AND CAP.

By Anabel Worthington.

It is not often that a kimono cut all in one piece has as trim an appearance as this one, and that trim appearance in a negligee garment is frequently very much to be desired. It is produced in this case by an inside belt to which the kimono is tacked in plaits at waist line. The plait fulness is derived from three tucks extending over each shoulder. The sleeve, cut in one with front and back, may be made full length or shorter, as preferred, the long sleeve gathered to a wristband, and the short sleeve finished with a turn-back cuff formed by rolling the lower part of the sleeve up.

There is a pattern piece for the shaped band at neck edge, and a pattern also for the cap. This is almost a square piece, with a casing for elastic which gathers the cap in and holds it to the head. When the cap is laundered the elastic can be removed and the cap laid out flat for ironing. Not only is the cap easy to make, but the kimono could be run up on the machine in a surprisingly short space of time.

If an inexpensive material is chosen, both articles will not cost seventy-five cents. Lawn is popular for the purpose, also dimity, cotton crepe and figured muslin. Any preferred trimming may be used or if desired none at all. For medium size, 7 yards of 36 inch material would be required. The pattern, No. 7,181, can be obtained in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

STARS POSSESS GREAT SPEED

The swiftest moving bodies is perhaps no longer the famous "runaway star"—the seventh magnitude Groom bridge 1830 of the constellation Ursa Major. The estimable average motion in space of "fixed" stars is about twenty-one miles per second, but the Groombridge 1830 may have had a rate as high as 200 miles and recent careful spectrographic determinations at the Mt. Wilson observatory indicate that the 9.2 magnitude star designated as O. Org 8, 14,320 may have an actual velocity in space of more than 350 miles per second.

The annual proper motion of this star is 3.76 seconds of an arc, or little more than half of that of Groombridge, 1830.

SURGICAL MAGNETS.

LONDON, June 25.—In he hospitals of France magnets have been developed that will draw fragments of shrapnel to the surface from a depth in the flesh of even six inches, and steel-jacketed bullets have been drawn out from a depth of more than two inches.

At the Inavlids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., are many as wonderful electric machines, high frequency currents, X-ray, violet rays. Then Dr. Pierce has equipped the Sanitarium with every known device to aid the sick and in the Surgical Department every instrument and appliance approved by the modern operator. The permanent cure of rupture is accomplished here without pain with local anaesthesia. Gravel is removed in many cases without pain and the patient can return home cured in a few days.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, nearly half a century ago, devised and used two prescriptions which were almost unfailing. They were made without alcohol or narcotics, extracted from roots and herbs by using pure glycerine and the ingredients are made public.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a tonic and blood purifier that cures pimples, blotches, sores, humors, eruptions and diseases of the skin.

Nothing stands as high to-day in the estimation of thousands of women as Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription—this is a soothing nervine. For girls about to enter womanhood, and for the days of middle age Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription should always be on hand. In liquid or tablets. Write Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y. Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, cloth-bound, sent free to you on receipt of 21 dimes (or stamps) to pay expense of mailing only, duty prepaid.—Adv.

TURKISH TREASURES

Constaninople Probably Hides Wonderful Libraries Centuries Unseen

Frederic Harrison, the veteran writer and philosopher, believes that in Constantinople treasures of the past will be brought to light whose very existence is at present unknown. The treasures which he and others believe to be stored away in the Turkish capital were seised by the Turks when they captured the city from the Greeks under Constantine XI. on May 29, 1453. At that time Constantinople was the very centre of the cultivation of the world. It is true that to a certain extent scholarship had decayed, but there were plenty of Greeks who read the old language and kept alive traditions of learning that even survived the fall of the city, and later blossomed forth in the Italian Renaissance.

When these scholars fled before the Turks how much did they leave behind? Certainly what they took to Italy was but a small portion of the treasures the city was known to contain, and not since that day have the Turks made any accounting of what fell into their hands. After the war, however, when learning had become fashionable in Italy, there were many expeditions financed by wealthy Italians for the recovery of treasures concealed in Constantinople. Most of them were richly rewarded by gems, art objects, statues and manuscripts. But what they recovered, too, was insignificant when compared with the original treasures of Byzantium. Brutal and cruel as were the Turks when they entered the city after their long siege, they were not Vandals.—Indeed, it is improbable that they destroyed any manuscripts, for in their ignorance of the Greek language they feared that they might deface anything containing the name of God, which in their eyes would have been an almost unforgivable sin. Some years ago Mr. Roberts Bell, at that time employed by the Turkish Tobacco Regie and later on the manager of the London Times, was given a mere glimpse at some of the huge vaults under the Mosque of St. Sophia. He saw there great piles of material covered with the dust of centuries. He was not permitted by the Turks to make a close examination, but he was convinced that he was in the presence of wonderful treasures.

In 1907 Prof. Heiberg, of Copenhagen, come across a manuscript written by Archimedes in A.D. 900. He was permitted to copy this by the Turks, but they would not let him take away the manuscript. Among the buildings in Constantinople that Frederic Harrison wants thoroughly explored is the imperial Seraglio. He believes that it will be found to contain Greek, Roman, and Byzantine [illegible] of extraordinary value.

A motorcycle invented by a Californian and driven by a storage battery and electric motor, has maintained speeds up to 25 miles an hour.

ARMY CAMP WATER

Suitable drinking water is of vital importance to an army, and this is only one of a multitude of problems that must be studied carefully by those who conduct a successful campaign. The water of a camp is a matter of great importance. Only running water is used.

In the German army the upstream water is used for drinking purposes and the downstream water for watering horses and for bathing. Suitable signs notify the men which water is safe to drink and which may be used only for bathing. In shallow or narrow streams basins are dug, or small dams built so as to form a reservoir of ample dimensions.

Stepping-stones are provided to keep the water clean, as well as board protection to prevent the banks from crumbling. Basins are dug for watering horses; troughs are provided only in case of necessity and are then propped on posts and filled by means of pumps. Pipes may be driven if water lies at a reasonable depth—in other words, not more than twenty feet. Depending upon their size, these pipes will deliver from four to twenty-two gallons of water per minute.

If water lies very ear the surface, a hole is dug and a cask, the bottom of which has been knocked out, is placed in the hole to form a basin. If the water lies at a greater depth the basin may be formed of box sections driven in one on top of the other.

TRUTH ABOUT PATRIARCHS

Scientific Analysis Has Reduced the Number of Their Years on Earth to a Reasonable Point.

How old was Methuselah? Nine hundred and sixty-one years is the age which, from our earliest youth, we have been accustomed to assign the patriarch. Scientific research abroad, however, has reduced these imposing figures to 78¾ years!

The experts point out that there has always existed a certain amount of doubt, even among orthodox believers, in the literal truth of the Bible concerning the great age to which the patriarchs attained. Many theories have been evolved to reduce the biblical records of this kind to something near the allotted span of man.

It has been surmised that, in the earliest times, the monther—the period of a moon cycle—was called a year. Thus, Adam's 930 years of life, calculating a year at 29½ days, the length of a lunar month, works out to 75¼ years. After the month year there would appear to have come a five-month year, the limit of life being derived from the fingers on one hand, it being remembered that primitive peoples always used the fingers for purposes of calculation. Then came the 12-month year.

Ground for this rearrangement is alleged to be given in the psalmist's limit of life of three-score and ten years. Furthermore, it is maintained that, between the times of Noah and of David, no such extraordinary change could have taken place as to reduce the life of man by eleven-twelfths. On the five-month-year basis Abraham's 175 years shrink to 72 and Isaac's 180 to 74.

It may be, it is also pointed out, that there intervened a six-month year, discovered by Jacob while watching Laban's flocks. Thus Jacob's 147 years work out at about 73. The 12-month year began with the Egyptians, who saw that a complete period was made up of the two "years," in one of which the days were longer than the nights, and in the other of which the nights were longer than the days.

It is a curious fact that the Christians and the Jewish years will not forever be separated, for, in due course of time, Rosh Hashona will fall at Christmas time and then catch up the Christian year. This, however, will not occur for 30,000 years.

Escaped from Germany

Lieut. LISSANT BEARDMORE

This young Canadian, whose home is in Toronto, was a member of a big opera company in Berlin when the war started. His liberty was considerably restricted at first, but when the order came to intern all colonial alien enemies, he made his escape, finally reaching England, where he enlisted. Later he was given leave of absence to visit his friends in Canada.

GALLANT FRENCH BOY

One Lad of Eleven Years Wanted to Avenge His Cousin's Wound

How keen the boys of France are to join in the war is shown by the letters which they send to the military authorities begging for permission to go to the front. The latest would-be warrior is Andre Pierrot, who has attained the age of 11. He wrote to General Plagnol, commanding the 21st District, informing him [illegible] wanted to enlist. Realizing that his age precluded him from offering himself as a volunteer, he begged to be accepted as a soldier's boy in the regiment in which his father had served. The lad added that he had a cousin, Lucien Menzel, who was a lieutenant and had been wounded by the Germans. He wanted to avenge his cousin. "My mind is fully made up," he concluded. "Since the beginning of the war I have learned to shoot, and I promise you that my shots will not fail."

The general was requested to send his reply addressed to Andre Pierrot, care of Mme. Pierrot (the boy's grandmother) at Thivet. General Plagnol replied that the boy's letter had greatly touched him. "You are only eleven years of age. You are quite small; nevertheless your heart is in the right place. Continue to assist your grandmother. Your present sentiments are a guarantee that later on you will be a valiant soldier and a good citizen. I press your little hand affectionately."

Was Troubled With Eczema.

Would Nearly Yell With Pain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Mr. R. J. Swales, Harriston, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer with eczema. I tried all kinds of salves, but they did me no good. Sometimes I would nearly yell with the pain, and would pass little white worms. I was told to get at the blood, so I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it has made a complete cure."

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, boils, pimples, eruptions, ulcers, etc., are all caused by the blood becoming impoverished, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all its impurities and by this means cure all skin and blood troubles.

This valuable preparation has been on the market for the last forty years, so you do not make any experiment when you give it a trial.

RUSSIANS WIN SUCCESSES IN GALICIA

GERMAN NIGHT ATTACKS COST THE ENEMY HEAVILY

Using Fiery Liquids and Asphyxiating Bombs Germans Drive French Out of Row of Trenches But the French Counter-Attacked and Threw Them Out---Attacks Between Augres and Sonchez are Driven Back.

BATTLE RAGED ALL DAY YESTERDAY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, (Official statement), June 25.—With the fiery liquids and asphyxiating bombs the Germans are violently attacking the French trenches on the Meuse Heights near Calonne. The battle raged all day yesterday and at midnight the enemy re-attacked in large force. The first onslaught drove the French from a row of trenches they captured from the Germans several days ago. The French troops retiring in good order when their positions were sprayed with liquid flame, immediately afterward counter-attacked, drove the enemy out of the works and they fled with shrapnel beating down upon them. At midnight the attack was resumed by large bodies of enemy troops. The French light up the ground before their positions illuminating bombs an searchlight and turned scores of machine guns on the charging columns and the Germans were caught under deadly cross-fire and retreated with heavy losses.

An official communique from the War Office this afternoon reported that two German attacks along Lorraine frontier were repulsed. "During hte night we repulsed counter-attacks between Augres and Souchez and against the Labyrinth. A violent artillery duel followed this infantry engagement and is still proceeding."

BERGEN, Norway, June 25.—The Norwegian steamer Bergensfjord, aboard which Dr. Bernhard Dernburg is a passenger arrived here late last night.

PRETORIA, South Africa, June 25.—Gen. Botha's forces have occupied the town of Kalkfetd in German Southwest Africa, without resistance.

VIENNESE ARE COMPLAINING.

GENEVA, June 25.—Conditions at Vienna are rapidly growing worse, according to private advices received here to-day. The city is surrounded by a cordon of temporary structures for housing cholera victims.

The Viennese are said to be complaining that the Hungarians now control the Government. Hungary has forbidden the exportation of wheat into Austria. Budapest enjoys the luxury of white bread, while Vienna's war bread is constantly growing darker in shade and more unpalatable.

GERMANY DEMANDS COMPENSATION.

BERLIN, via wireless, June 25.—Germany has made a formal demand upon Italy for comepnsation for damage done the property of German citizens in the recent anti-German riots at Milan.

OTTAWA, June 25.—Canadian casualties now include 1,475 killed, 5,916 wounded, 1,600 missing and 456 who are put down in the lists as prisoners.

The casualty lists received since yesterday consists largely of prisoners of war from the battalion commanded by Col. J. A. Currie. Long lists of casualties in the first battalion's latest fight are hourly expected.

ROME, June 25.—"Italy's real enemy is not Austria, but Germany," declared Giuseppe Garibaldi to-day. "If Germany wins, she will next attempt to conquer the United States and Italy and make herself ruler of the world. I have joined Italian forces because now is Italy's supreme opportunity to save herself from German domination."

HABITS OF ECONOMY.

LONDON, June 25.— Premier Asquith announced to-day that "certain steps" are being taken by the government to influence the people of England to adopt habits of economy during the remainder of the war. The recent agitation against the increased cost of living has resulted in the appointment of parliamentary committees to investigate the whole subject.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin, June 25.—Prof. Isreal, Berlin surgeon, operated on the Sultan of Turkey yesterday, removing gall stones. The Sultan's condition was pronounced satisfactory to-day.

Motor Accident Near Bailieboro

Car Turned Turtle Following Tire Blow-out—Driver Was Uninjured

A farmer by the name of Dawson, residing near Bailieboro, narrowly escaped serious injury last evening, when a car which he was driving, turned turtle. Dawson, who was driving the car, claims that he was going slow at the time and attributes the accident to a rear tire, which blew out. The accident occurred on the gravel road. Dawson went over with the car, but beyond a shaking up, was uninjured.

SAW THE BODIES OF THE CRUCIFIED CANUCK OFFICERS

Reports of German Atrocities Not Exagerated Says Maj. Nasmyth, Who Was at the Battle of St Julien and Who Was in Peterborough Yesterday

WOUNDED IN LUNG

Reports of German atrocities have not been at all exaggerated, according to the statement of Major W. W. Nasmyth, of the 10th Battalion, First Canadian Expeditionary Force, who was wounded in the fighting at St. Julien, and who has returned to Canada. Major Nasmyth was the guest of his cousin, Mrs. R. N. Parsons, wife of City Engineer Parsons, 104 Douro Street, Ashburnham, yesterday morning, having stopped here for a few hours on his way west to his home in Calgary, Alta.

Major Nasmyth received a bullet wound in the right lung just as he was leaving a trench. Where the bullet entered only a small hole about the size of an ordinary lead pencil, was made, but where it came out a great gaping wound was left. On being moved to the dressing station the Major stated that the last thing he heard before sinking into unconsciousness was, "this poor fellow will not last long." However, just here, he remarked, that the care and treatment wounded soldiers are receiving was wonderful. The heroic and untiring efforts of the doctors and the nurses was beyond praise, and not one thing was left undone to insure the comfort of the wounded men. Major Nasmyth has made a remarkable progress towards recovery, and while he has not altogether completed his convalescence he is enjoying fairly good health, and hopes after a period in Canada to return to the scene of operations. His battalion lost 730 men at the battle of St. Julien. His brother, Lieut. Nasmyth, of Port Hope, was killed in this engagement.

GERMAN ATROCITIES

Speaking of the various acts of cruelty and outrage that have been laid at the doors of the enemy, Major Nasmyth has made a remarkable prodoubtedly too true. With his own eyes he had seen the bodies of two Canadian officers who had been crucified. He also stated that it was a fact that German soldiers had bayonetted more than a score of wounded soldiers as they lay helpless in a trench.

Life in the trenches was not so bad according to the Major. If one could walk a plank fairly well, he could escape the mud and water. But no hardship seemed "so bad" to this gallant officer, who viewed with equanamity and belittling, as though it were nothing, the seriousness of his wound and the suffering that must have followed it.

"This is a young man's war," he added, "and many are the deeds of bravery that are daily enacted, many of which will never be recounted."

SAVE YOUR PAPERS AND HELP MILITARY - HOSPITAL

ITALIANS ADVANCING

Official Statement Says General Cadorna's Forces are Reinforcing Themselves in Positions Along the Isonzo.

GLOBNA OCCUPIED

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, June 25.—An Italian official statement to-day says: "Along Isonzo we are advancing gradually reinforcing ourselves in position on the right flank of the river. We thus have occupied Globno, north of Plava, and, on lower Isonzo, we have captured the edge of the plateau between Sagrada and Monfalcone."

GOT DRUNK AND LOST HIS HAT

Husky Native of Norwood also Lost His Bearing

Thomas Newell of Norwood still showed the effects of "a night out" when he appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning charged with having been drunk in a public place.

"Are you guilty?" asked His Worship.

"I guess I am," was the reply.

"I think you have more than two dollars' worth," came from the Magisterial chair.

Newell was fined $2.00, to be paid forthwith. He was able to pay his fine, but when he was ready to leave the station he was in trouble. He had lost his hat somewhere. The Sergeant came to his rescue with a black Christie which served to cover at least part of Newell's head. He was last seen making his way to an hotel to "have a wash."

WILL SEND SOCKS AND MONEY TO BOYS OF 4TH BATTERY

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. was held yesterday afternoon in the Armouries when a number of new members were enrolled.

The Knitting Committee reported that it has on hand 186 pairs of socks, 109 pairs of which have been sent to Nursing Sister Fowlds, No. 1 Stationary Canadian Hospital, 1st Canadian Contingent, Boulougne base, France. A contribution was received from Mrs. Mansell, of Cincinnati, and formerly of Peterborough.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Peterborough Cheese Board for their splendid donation of twenty-five dollars. It was decided to send one hundred pairs of socks and $20 for chocolate and cigarettes to number four battery men in France.

For the remainder of the meeting the time was devoted to making final arrangements for the garden fete to be held on Major Eastwood's grounds, 610 George St., to-morrow afternoon and evening, where home-made cooking, candy and flowers, strawberries and ice cream will be on sale. Admission to the grounds is free.

"BEST RIFLE IN THE WORLD"

This is All Major General Hughes Has to Say in Regard to the Ross Rifle About Which Some Inquiry is Being Made.

MENTIONED BY TENNANT

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, June 25.—"The best rifle in the world, that's all I have got to say, was the reply of Major General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, this morning, to an enquiry regarding the statement of Under Secretary Tennant, to the effect that certain difficultes had arisen over the Ross rifle which were now being investigated. Men who have just returned from the front state that during the muddy weather, the jamming of rifles was a common occurrence, not only with the Ross, among the Canadian force, but among the British, where the Lee Enfield rifle was used. With regard to the statement tha certain portions of the division are now armed with the Lee Enfield, it is suggested these were supplied to make up for the considerable waste sustained in the fights in which the Canadians were engaged.

Mrs. Common Is Honoured

Member of St. John's Choir Leaving the City is Presented With a Fern Bowl as a Memento.

Mrs. Common, who has long been one of the most faithful and effective members of the choir of the Anglican Church of St. John, in this city, was yesterday the recipient of a souvenir of her long connection with that body.

Mrs. Common and some of the members of her family were among those on board the Stony Lake, which had been specially chartered for the St. John's Choir Picnic. At Young's Point a call was made and there—the choir and their guests were called together for an interesting function.

The Rector, Canon Davidson, referred to the approaching departure of Mrs. Common for Quebec—in which city her husband, also a member of the choir—has secured a good position.

Mr. Devey, as choirmaster, followed, and in some very happy remarks, eulogised Mrs. Common's good and faithful work. A handsome electro and porcelain fern bowl was then presented to Mrs. Common, and three cheers were heartily given for her and her family.

LINDSAY WILL GUARANTEE BONDS

Ratepayers Endorse Proposal to Assist Woollen Company

LINDSAY, June 25.—A by-law submitted to the ratepayers to authorize the town of Lindsay to guarantee payment of a first preferential bond issue to the amount of $65,000 of the Horn Brothers' Woolen Company, Limited, was carried here yesterday by a majority of 311. At the time of the destruction by fire of the woolen factory in December last, the capacity of the concern was nearly a thousand blankets daily, and large orders were booked for army supplies. The fire was generally supposed to have been the work of German sympathizers. The work of rebuilding the factory will now be commenced at once.

RUSSIANS INFLICT HEAVY LOSSES ON ATTACKING FORCES

Enemy's Troops Which Crossed the Dneister on Wednesday Repulsed With Great Loss—40 Officers and 1700 Men Being Captured by the Russians.

BERLIN ADMITS IT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, June 25.—The Russian troops in south-east Galicia have inflicted heavy losses on the Austrian troops attempting to cross the Dniester. "In the region of Kosmierzhyn on Wednesday we stormed with the bayonet [illegible] on the mountain side," said the official statement to-day. "Our troops annihilated most of the enemy garrison, taking survivors prisoners."

"Near Rouzdwiany, we repulsed the enemy forces who crossed the Dniester Wednesday morning, capturing forty officers and 1,700 men. The War Office admitted that at certain points German troops succeded in crossing the Dniester, but declared that at other points the enemy has been thrown back across the stream in great confusion. The Russian retirement from Lemberg continues in orderly fashion, the Russians now holding a line twelve miles east of the city.

BERLIN, via wireless to Sayville, June 25.— The German War Office this afternoon admitted slight reverses for the Austro Germans in south-east Galicia, but declared that the left wing of Gen. Von Linsingen's army is advancing on Chodorow, a railway centre 22 miles south-east of Lemberg. The War Office declared that all the Anglo-French attacks in the western war theatre in the last twenty-four hours have been repulsed.

MORE DYNAMITE IS DISCOVERED IN WINDSOR

Forty Sticks Found Near the Plant of the Gramme Motor Car Company Which Has a Large War Contract

FOREIGNER'S WATCHED

Special to The Examiner.

WINDSOR, June 25. — Would be dynamiters have been again busy around this neighbourhood. At the Gramme Motor Truck Co., which has a large contract for the British government, forty sticks of dynamite were found. There is no clue as to how it got there. Other explosives have also been located in houses in the neighbourhood and the police now have under surveillance a large number of foreigners in the locality. It is also stated that there have been more discoveries of dynamite in factories in Walkerville.

THREE BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED

Two New Houses Will be Erected, One on Hilliard Street and the Other on Manning Avenue

Building permits for two new dwellings have been issued within the past week. One will be erected on Hilliard street by W. Detcher at an approximate cost of $1,200, while W. A. McEwen will construct a seven-roomed house at 56 Manning avenue at a cost of $1,800.

J. M. Fanning will erect a stable on Dublin street to cost $125.

BY-LAW WILL BE ENFORCED

Foodstuffs Exposed For Sale Outside of Stores Must be Covered up

Sanitary Inspector Spence is enforcing the by-law respecting the exposure of fruit and other foodstuffs. He claims that a number of merchants are exposing goods for sale outside of their stores without providing covered cases as required by the regulations. Foodstuffs exposed in this manner is liable to contamination through dust and other evils of a similar nature. He thinks it would be just as logical for a confectioner to expose cakes, pies, etc., outside the premises as for a fruit and vegetable merchant to expose strawberries and other commodities.

COMMITTEE WILL MEET TO-NIGHT

Ways and Means of Improving Street Lighting System Will be Considered by the Fire Water and Light Committee

The Fire Water and Light Committee of the City Council will meet this evening at eight o'clock when the committee's report respecting additional street lighting will be heard and considered. Mr. H. O. Fisk, Manager of the Utilities Commission, will be present to explain the Commission's position in regard to the matter. A short time ago the Committee made a tour of inspection throughout the city with a view of ascertaining the need for additional street lighting now that the light and power system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company has been acquired by the city. A number of places were noted where changes might be made and the present lights arranged so as to give better service. This is where they are obscured by shade trees, or are too far apart. It has also been suggested that a number of arc lights might be suspended in the middle of the road instead of from the side. Many of the aldermen are impressed with the need for a larger number of lights, but whether this need will be recognised at the present time is a matter that will be considered by the Committee.

The appropriation for street lighting amounts to approximately $13,000 this year. The estimated expenditure is placed at slightly less than $12,000. Fifty-four magnetite arc lights cost the city $80.50 each per year, arc lights $60, and incandescent lights $12. A balance of $600 is in prospect.

MR. CORKERY IS PROMOTED

Now Assistant Postmaster of Peterborough

The many friends of Mr. John Corkery, for many years connected with the local post office, are congratulating him upon his promotion to assistant postmaster of Peterborough, with a consequent increase in salary. Mr. Corkery has been a faithful servant of the public for a long period, and his promotion is a well-merited one.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, JUNE 25, 1915

ANOTHER FORWARD STEP.

"Westward the course of empire takes its way," sang British Bishop Berkley, and the idea suits the trend of religious movement in Peterborough. The militant Salvation army has gone westward—invaded Brownton—and has planted its outworks there in the form of a Sunday school, for the ingathering and uplifting of the children who attend no other Sunday school. Brownton seems in a good way to repent of the error of its ways, if plenitude of opportunity will be effective. Recently the Anglicans planted a religious centre there; the Methodists followed their example; and now we have the Salvation Army, the bersagllieri of the church militant, admirably rounding out religious opportunity and privilege. Good luck, in the name of the Lord, go with them all!

EXCUSING TREASON.

Mr. Henri Bourassa, the eloquent agitator, in his journal, Le Devoir, justifies the treason of Christian De Wet. He shows the same irreconcilable hostility to British influence on good government he has always had and had even when he was brought into Ontario in 1911 to help the flag-waving—"British-born" cause of Conservative candidates. Even then he knew no change at heart, but was willing to subordinate his "principles" for the moment to strengthen the influence of the Nationalists, the men of his kidney, in the construction of the Borden cabinet. He did not waste his time; for the flag-shooting Nationalists, who had "no use for England and the English," were given the plums of cabinet position, were made masters of the great spending departments. Mr. Bourassa, however, his blow struck for the cause of loyalty, speedily returned to his mutton, and has kept there "nibbling" industriously. In the last number of Le Devoir he justifies General De Wet in his treason, claiming that it is as proper to concede the South Africans the right to "reconquer their liberty on the first favourable occasion," as to concede the right to Belgium, or Alsace, or Poland, to shake off the yoke of their oppressors, Germany, Austria and Russia. The right in either case is not unquestioned, but the premises are not just. The Boers of South Africa did not need to "reconquerir leur liberte." They were given their liberty—British liberty, full citizenship in an Empire, built on the foundations of freedom in place of the despotic rule of a Kruger. It was the gift of British liberty expressed in terms of self-government, full and complete, to the enemies of yesterday—that conquered hostility with generosity. It is this liberty in essence and potentiality, for which half the world, against the other half, is fighting to-day. In taking the position they do, Mr. Bourassa and Le Devoir, antagonize, as in their matter, not only British liberty, but the aspirations of their French-Canadian compatriots, who, as a people are nobly sharing in the battle for the liberty they hold worthy of the gallantry they show, of the blood they are shedding, of the sacrifices they are making. Mr. Bourassa must begin to "go slow" to prepare himself for a recantation of convenience, if he expects to be called upon for service in Ontario in another election in the cause of an exclusive loyalty to British institutions.

THE WORST PAVEMENT PROBLEM.

At the last sitting of the City Council, Alderman Edgar showed a touching solicitude for the quiet of a certain Church which it would be well for all of us to keep on tap in other respects this noisy concrete pavement. In regard to laying concrete pavements on the streets surrounding St. Peter's Cathedral, Mr. Edgar objected [illegible] as it was noisy and not suitable pavement to be laid around a church building, no matter of what denomination. If concrete pavement is more noisy than the Council Chamber has been during the criss-cross discussion of the pavement question, it deserves the name of the "big noise." But, is it a fact that concrete paving is more noisy under traffic than asphalt pavement? Three years or so ago the Council laid a concrete pavement on Chambers street as an experiment. It, has however, both in fact—for it seems to justify its construction—and in other ways passed beyond the experimental stage; for the aldermen cease to regard it as an experiment, and insist on trying other experiments of the same kind. At Hunter street, the concrete pavement of Chambers street joins the asphalt. If Alderman Edgar or any other alderman can, listening with the natural ear—for the average aldermanic ear, for obtrusive reasons, may have a larger capacity for distinguishing difference in noise—if Alderman Edgar or any other alderman can with his back turned, tell by the noise when a horse or vehicle passes from the asphalt to the concrete, or vice versa, they will have achieved a triumph of differentiating audition. If there is any difference in the relative noisiness of the two forms of pavement, it would take a very delicate tonometer to indicate it. But if concrete is noisy it is only on the street; for it is not half as noisy on the tax bill as asphalt. Concrete pavement on Chambers street cost nearly a third less to lay down than asphalt; and can be done by local labour, another "noisy" quality it has; and in the matter of wearing quality, there doesn't seem to be much difference in effects, between the results of three years' traffic on Chambers' street concrete, and of three months' traffic on the asphalt surface of some other streets, which costing nearly three times as much, should show three times the durability of concrete. Coming right down to the concrete question, have the aldermen decided which, or what is the best form of pavement, economically—in point of service and cost?

AN OFFSET.

Hon. J. H. Howden, a member of the Norris government, has given a prompt denial to the charges, reflecting on the Liberal party, which have been made by 14 Conservative M.P. P.'s. The people of Canada can certainly afford to suspend judgment upon statements made by men who stood by every iniquity of the Roblin government, and sought to prevent enquiry into the "million-dollar steal." The real object of the 14 is to lessen the effect of the damaging disclosures which have already been made against the Roblin ministers, and which threaten to engulf the Hon. Robert Rogers as well.—Brantford Expositor.

COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS OF THE CANADIAN FINANCIAL SITUATION

The Hon. W. T. White has been explaining why the public expenditure of Canada is increasing, and why in a country like Canada "it always will increase." He asserts that by far the greater part of the increase in recent years has been due to the policy of wasteful extravagance of the late Government in enterprises such as the National Transcontinental, which "as a revenue-producing asset can be written off the books of the Dominion." The war seems to be regarded as the other contributing cause of importance to the extraordinary tax burden placed by Mr. White and his colleagues upon the shoulders of the Canadian people.

The Globe does not suggest that the Minister of Finance is deliberately falsifying the record, but it does affirm that in his Durham speech he made assertions which are absolutely disproved by the records compiled in his own department, and with which he ought to be acquainted. Mr. White knows that before the war was thought of the Public Accounts for the year ending March 1914 indicated on the part of the Minister and his colleagues a degree of financial recklessness without precedent in Canadian history. In the twelve months ending March, 1911, the last complete year of the Laurier Government the total expenditure of Canada chargeable to Consolidated Fund or current account was $87,774,000. Three years of Mr. White's management resulted in an increase in the running expenses of Canada to $127,384,000—an addition of forty million dollars to the annual cost of government.

Mr. White suggests that the reckless capital expenditure of the Laurier Government got him into the hole in which he flounders around. Yet his own records show that in the year ending March 1914, when these 'reckless expenditures" were practically all translated into capital charges, the interest on the debt of the Dominion had increased only from $11,535,000 in 1911 to $12,893,000 in 1914. Laurier recklessness had added in those three years $358,000 to the national expenditure in the form of interest, or less than five cents per head of the population, while the careful Minister of Finance and his colleagues had added in current expenditure forty millions, or five dollars per head of the population. No wonder that Mr. White, seeing the follies of 1912-13-14 in the light of to-day's huge demand upon the public purse, tries to put some of the blame on the shoulders of Mr. Fielding, a Finance Minister who never had a deficit.

There is no mystery at all as to the particular patch of thirsty ground on which the present Minister of Finance spilled a large part of the money collected from the people. His former business associates fared well at his hands. The Public Accounts of the year ending March, 1914, show on page 20 that in the three years of 1912-13-14 the Borden Government expended in railway subsidies—chiefly to Mackenzie and Mann for one or other of their railway building projects—24,831,200. During the entire period of the Laurier Administration from 1897 to 1911, when Canada was building railways at an unprecedented rate, the Government spent $25,139,000 on railway subsidies. In the three years during which Mr. White stood guard over the Treasury his favourite railway builders got away with more public money than they had secured in fifteen years under the reckless Fielding.

That is but one illustration of what was happening in every other department of public affairs. Mr. White told his hearers in Durham that during its term of office the Borden Government had increased the expenditure upon such services as post-offices, rural mail delivery, and parcel post. The figures for 1914, which contain only one month's operation of the parcel post system, show that in three years Mr. White and his friends had practically destroyed the Post-office surplus by wasteful administeration rather than by the improvement of the service. Between 1908 and 1911 the Postoffice, under Sir William Mulock and Mr. Lemieux, yielded a surplus of almost eight million dollars. Before the Laurier Government [illegible] a good beginning had been made in rural mail delivery, which has been extended materially since 1911, but not to such a degree as to wipe out the Postoffice surplus had the administration been in careful hands. The following table shows how in three years a Liberal Postal Department surplus of over a million had been reduced to $139,000 under Conservative rule:

Liberal Rule—	Revenue	Expenditure
1909-1910	$7,856,000	$7,215,000
1910-1911	9,145,000	7,954,000
Conservative Rule—
1911-1912	10,492,000	9,172,000
1912-1913	12,051,000	10,882,000
1913-1914	12,954,000	12,822,000

The Globe ventures the assertion that but for the war-stamp idea the Posoffice would to-day fail to balance its accounts, and would be a charge upon the taxpayers instead of a source of revenue. It will take a good many speeches from the Minister of Finance to convince the people that the thousands of new officials added to the Dominion payroll since the glorious victory of 1911 — officials whose salaries aggregate millions of dollars—were required for the efficient carrying on of the country's business. They have entered into their reward. The taxpayer provides it.—The Globe.

ROGERS AND MANITOBA.

The Toronto News believes that there is a Liberal plot to involve the Hon. Robert Rogers in the Manitoba scandals. It is the first we have heard of such a plot. Our own opinion of Rogers is that he is watching the Manitoba situation very closely, wondering whether he can mend his own party fences and whether he can involve the Liberals in the offences of the Roblin Government.

There is talk of a Dominion commission to investigate the Manitoba scandals. If the Dominion Government appointed a commission, the Hon. Robert Rogers would have a good deal to say about it. Honestly now, would you expect him to be impartial Would you expect him to consent to the appointment of commissioners who would hurt Mr. Rogers' friends in Manitoba? Is Mr. Rogers that kind of man? We have no desire to paint him as a demon. But we know of him as a politician, who will do almost anything to help his own party. So we should have very little confidence in any commission appointed by Sir Robert Borden upon the advice of his western chief, the Hon. Robt. Rogers. Manitoba ought to do its own investigating, and do it thoroughly, and so give no excuse for the interference of outside politicians.

For boring holes in large timber an electric drill has been invented that can be supplied with current by any light socket.

Notice is hereby given that a Quarterly Dividend for the three (3) months ending June 30th, 1915, at the rate of ten per cent. (10%) per annum has been declared upon the Capital Stock of this Institution, and this same will be payable at the offices of the Company in this City, on and after July 2nd, 1915.

The transfer books will be closed from the 21st to 30th June, 1915, both days inclusive.

NOT EXPECTING WAR.

When we appear at the great judgment seat of history as a nation and as a people, and this war, with its terrors, with its tortures, with its suffering is brought up against us, we can say the proof that we are innocent of this crime is that we did not prepare. We, at any rate, did not organize for that war. We had not organized great forces for the purpose of conquering Germany or Austria or trampling upon the liberties of any other nation, but the undoubtedly exculpatory fact left us the worst organized nation for war in the world. — Lloyd-George at Manchester.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Only an Idol."

WHEN the chest was hove on deck, dripping with ocean slime, corroded and mysterious, Harry Wilkerson stared at it stupidly. His mind went back down the years to that night when Thomas Gallon—scheming for his little daughter—had drawn a plan by candlelight, to the quarrel, to his own desperate flight and escape.

And now he was about to see for the first time the fatal paper—to know the secret of the wealth of the "Master Key." He forgot his surroundings.

It was Jean Darnell who recalled him to the present. She leaned over his shoulder as he knelt, and the perfume of her breathed into his nostrils.

Thomas Gallon and His Little Daughter.

He looked up, laughed and then ordered the box taken aft.

"I was dreaming," he said slowly. Then he looked at her directly, and she saw the flame in his eyes.

"Why dream when things are coming true?" she parried.

"I wonder whether they will all come true," he said moodily and followed the chest aft.

The curious sailors set the box down and waited. It was evident from their attitudes that they expected to see nothing less than great treasure. Otherwise, why this costly expedition?

But Wilkerson did not start immediately to open the chest. Its very appearance seemed to bewilder him, and his hands shook. It was Jean Darnell who stirred him to activity.

"Now you've got it," she said impatiently, "hurry and open it! The other launch is chasing us!"

Wilkerson stared around and picked up a marlinspike. He began to pry at the lock. Mrs. Darnell angrily jerked at his shoulder.

"Harry, you fool, here is the key!"

He took the article she handed him and nodded. "Sure enough," he assented, "we have the key! Funny I had forgot that."

With some difficulty he managed to clear the lock and insert the key. It turned with difficulty.

A moment later he had pried the lid back from its setting of rust and slime and they were all staring at the sodden contents.

There was no sound except the trundling of the swiftly revolving propeller and the heavy breathing of the sailors.

Suddenly Wilkerson swung round angrily and ordered everybody forward. Then he began his slow search.

Old jackets almost disintegrated by the action of water, pulpy papers and various odds and ends came to his hand. The pulp he carefully laid aside as being possibly what he was looking for.

"I'm afraid the plans are gone," Jean whispered.

"We must find them!" he snarled and went on with his task.

Halfway down he came upon a grotesque figure dripping with weedy ooze. It stiffly stared up at him as he held it.

"An idol!" laughed Mrs. Darnell.

"Some sailor's curio. Well, go on. Idols don't talk."

An hour afterward Harry Wilkerson rose to his feet and kicked the scattered contents of the chest into the scuppers.

The idol rolled away and came to a stop upright against the bulwarks, when it presented glazed, mysterious eyes.

"No plans!" muttered Wilkerson with a curse.

"Only an idol!" laughed Jean in wild derision.

Then her handsome face flamed with wrath. She turned her back contemptuously on Wilkerson and stared across the water at the launch which was pursuing them.

In the bitterness of her heart was no mingling of pity for her tool; only self contempt that she had depended on him, helped him.

When she could control herself she went forward to get out of sight of the mocking heap of rubbish that had cost so much.

Presently a sailor made excuse to come aft and peered at the pile of junk." The idol caught his eye, shall be stealthily caught it up and hid it in his shirt.

"Good in a pawnshop," he chuckled.

Thus once more the plans of the mother lode of the "Master Key" mine escaped from Wilkerson's fishing in vain.

When the launch put in to San Pedro

Mrs. Darnell did not wait for Wilkerson.

"I'm going to Los Angeles," she said. "You'll find me at the hotel—if you think it worth your while."

He looked up from his business of settling with the divers and made a gesture to detain her. He seemed to call out some inarticulate plea.

She merely smiled again and left. She paid no attention to one of the sailors who brushed by her, clutching a concealed object beneath his jacket.

This individual, once clear of the water front, quickly made his way to a pawnbroker's shop, and the idol changed hands for a small sum after much haggling.

Before Wilkerson had settled with the diver John Dorr's launch also made its landing, and the two enemies would have met except that Wilkerson had to go to bank to cash a draft.

As he slipped away he saw the other boat and laughed bitterly. Dorr was welcome to what there was in the old chest.

"There is just one thing to do," John told the broken hearted Ruth, "and that is to find out what Wilkerson did with what he got from your father's chest."

"I'm going to Los Angeles," she said.

The captain of the other boat received them with a good humored grin and in answer to their inquiries pointed to the open box and the articles scattered on the deck.

"So far as I could make out," he went on, "there wasn't anything in the old chest worth the trouble of going after. At any rate Mr. Wilkerson and the lady seemed disappointed and put out."

"Didn't they take anything?" demanded Ruth, peering curiously at the moldy sea chest.

"Not a thing, so far as I could discover," was the reply. "In fact, I heard the two of them kind of quarreling, and the lady went off by herself."

The three of them stared down at the mementos of the long past tragedy, and then the captain suddenly ejaculated, "Yes, there is one thing missing."

"What is that?" demanded John.

"An old idol. But I'm sure neither of them took it."

"But what became of it?" John continued, trying to conceal his anxiety.

"Maybe one of the men picked it up for a curio," the skipper said apologetically. "Everybody seemed to think the old thing was worthless, and you know a sailor will grab at just that kind of thing. Better ask some of the crew."

A few moments later Dorr had learned that one of the sailors had indeed taken the image and gone uptown with it, apparently to sell it.

John thanked the captain, and when he and Ruth were out of earshot he said, "That idol is what we are after, Ruth."

"But where can we find it?" she mourned.

"We must trace the sailor. Ten to one he'll try to sell it to a secondhand man. Our best plan is to look into the pawnshops, I think, Ruth," he answered.

The first places they visited gave up no information of value. The third pawnbroker looked at Dorr curiously, when he asked whether a man had been in to dispose of an idol.

"That thing seems to be wanted pretty much," he remarked. "But I bought it in good faith and sold it to a Hindu a little while after for a rug. Maybe you would like to buy a rug?"

They made it plain that rugs did not interest them and departed with the poor satisfaction of knowing that the object of their search was in the hands of an unknown wandering peddler of rugs, who was presumably an East Indian.

"We can't do any more just now," John told Ruth.

"No," was the response. "But I am going to keep an eye out for a Hindu rug seller. I don't imagine there are very many of them here, so it ought to be an easy matter to pick him up."

As they walked back to the hotel Ruth grew more cheerful. "At any rate, Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell missed it," she remarked.

"I never understood just why that woman mixed herself up in this," John said thoughtfully. "You must have got some notion, Ruth. You were with her some time."

"All she is after is money."

"Yes, I have an idea," she responded. "The last trace of all the details has it seems Mrs. Darnell knew both father and Harry Wilkerson in the old days and—and"—

"And what?"

"Well," she went on, blushing divinely, "father didn't like Jean and wouldn't have anything to do with her nor allow me to, either. She always hated father after that."

"Wilkerson is certainly in love with her," John said presently.

"I think he is," Ruth asserted. "But she doesn't care anything about him, I'm sure. All she is after is money."

Later in the evening as they discussed the events of the day John brought up the subject of Wilkerson's anxiety for the papers again and recalled the fact that old Tom Gallon had always insisted on Wilkerson's knowledge of something.

"I wonder just what it was," he went on. "If he knows just where that rich lode is he's concealed his knowledge pretty well, and the eagerness he is showing to get hold of the plans is proof that he isn't sure."

"He is spending lots of money," she sighed. "How much longer can we keep this up, John? Surely we are broke again?"

"Not so long as good old Everett sticks by us," was the response.

"But—maybe father was mistaken, and we can't pay it all back!"

"Nonsense!" he said reassuringly. "I can make the mine pay just as it stands. But I promised your father I'd see that you got all your rights, and he certainly meant for you to have the wealth hidden somewhere in the 'Master Key' mine."

"And we've lost the deeds and the key, and we haven't found the plans," she sighed.

"I'll find that Hindu and his precious idol if I have to go to India," he said promptly. "One thing—we won't have Harry Wilkerson spoiling our schemes. He'll give up now."

But Wilkerson had not given up. On his return from the bank he had learned from the launch captain of Dorr's interest in the idol, and he had promptly followed this clew, with the result that he knew as much about its whereabouts as John and Ruth did, so far as its getting into the hands of an East Indian peddler was concerned. Whether Dorr had recovered the image from him he did not know.

Robbers Get Away With Loot

NEW YORK, June 25—Robbers broke into the home of J. C. Rosenblum No. 160 West One Hundred and Thirtieth street, and carried away at least $10,000 worth of loot. Mr. Rosenbaum is a son-in-law of Sheriff Max Grifenhagen.

The Rosenblum family have been absent for some time, and Mr. Rosenblum could not be located. Mrs. Grifenhagen, wife of the Sheriff, said she had heard of the robbery, but had no details.

QUEER MARRIAGE CUSTOMS REVEALED

Presents are exchanged between the bride and bridegroom on the evening before an Armenian wedding.

Swedish brides used to receive from their friends a pig, sheep, or cow, and from the bridegroom a colt, dog, cat or goose.

The custom of sticking coins on the bridegroom's forehead is common to several Eastern races, among others to the Turcomans and Moors of West Barbary.

Among the early Germans money was given to the bride's relatives on the wedding day, but this usage was not followed if the marriage happened to be an unequal one.

Every guest at a Norwegian wedding used to bring the bride a present. In many parts a keg of butter was the usual gift, and if the marriage took place in the winter salted or frozen meat was offered.

With modern Arabians the bridegroom makes the bride presents which are sent a day or two before the nuptials. As soon as the bride reaches the bridegroom's house she makes him presents of household furniture, a spear and a tent.

In Persia the bridegroom is obliged to give a certain sum of money in addition to other presents. If he is in moderate circumstances he gives his bride two complete dresses, a ring and a mirror. He also supplies the furniture, carpets, mats, culinary utensils and other necessaries for their home.

With the Celestials the family of the bridegroom make presents to the family of the bride of various articles a few days before the day fixed for the marriage. The presents generally consist of food, a cock and hen, the leg and foot of a pig, the leg of a goat, eight small cakes of bread, eight torches, three pairs of large red candles, a quantity of vermicelli and several bunches of fire crackers.

Tungsten, which only in recent years has come into general use, was discussed exhaustively by a Spanish treatise written in 1781.

Lightning Bolt Strikes Diver

NEW YORK, June 25—Arthur Holden, high diver, stood at the top of a ninety-foot pole in Palisades Park, N. J., poised to plunge into a shallow tank of water. Suddenly the sky broke and a bolt of lightning severed a guy rope and hurled Holden into the air.

A big crowd watched his descent in terror. Holden succeeded, by extraordinary agility, in plunging into the tank. He was found stunned and his shoulder dislocated.

Crop Weather in The West Ideal

"My reports right up until this morning show that the crop prospects in the West are the best in the history of the Dominion. Weather conditions have been ideal. The wheat crop will run at least 300,000,000 bushels. Besides, there will be a splendid harvest of other grains."

Mr. George Bury, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has a reporter in each district on the prairies, and the above interview given this morning speaks volumns for the information of the East.

Mr. Bury expects Sir Thomas Shaughnessy back from England about the middle of next week, and in the meantime, he has nothing to give out regarding the war contracts.

Could Hardly Straighten Up For The Pain In Her Back.

Many women suffer from an excruciating pain in the back. They are not even able to look after the common duties of their housework, and cannot even walk at times.

The whole trouble is that the kidneys have become affected, and when the kidneys get "out of kilter" the whole system becomes deranged. On the first sign of a weak, lame, aching back you should not neglect it, for if you do, you may be sure that some serious kidney trouble will follow.

What you want is a kidney medicine for kidneys only. This you will find in Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they're made for kidneys only.

Mrs. George Clarke, Rose Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I am willing to tell you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I was suffering with a lame back, and for several days I could hardly straighten up for the pain. I had used quite a few of other kind of pills, but received no relief. Just then my sister told me about what Doan's had done for her, so I decided to try them. I used three boxes and I am completely cured. I do not hesitate to recommend them to all."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

NEW SALVATION ARMY SUNDAY SCHOOL OPENED LAST NIGHT

Branch of Temple Organization in Byersville With Ample Accomodation and Fine Prospects of Development—Ald. G. W. Green Presided.

ZEAL OF MR. R. C. BRAUND

The Salvation Army Sunday School in Byersville was opened last night with considerable eclat, and every promise of immediately assuming an important place in the religious and social affairs of the southern suburb for which it was designed.

The new building, located on the north side of Chamberlen Street, about fifty yards west of Boundary Road, is plainly finished and of simple design, but it is generous in dimensions, and is adequately equipped. A solid foundation of concrete enclosed a room and lofty basement, which will be used for supplies and also a gymasium for all the boys of the neighbourhood. It will in fact be used as a Boys' Club. The Sunday School hall comprises the ground floor, and will sound with its first services on Saturday night and on Sunday.

The Sunday School is an accompaniment of the continued growth of Byersville. Years have slipped by rapidly since this suburb began its mushroom growth. In those days the Salvation Army was busily engaged in building up the congregation of the Temple. Those were the days of "home missionary" endeavours, when ambitions were dormant. It was the upward struggle with its attendant difficulties and labours. And after a strong foundation had been slowly erected, Adjt. McElhinney arrived and proceeded to raise the structure, the most recent evidences of which are the new Sunday School at Bailey's, in North Monaghan, and the Byersville Sunday School. While it remained for the Adjutant to be the officer in charge while this work was executed, Mr. R. C. Braund, as Superintendent of the Sunday School during the past eighteen years, and to those who assisted him, are due the credit for the present numbers, organization and development of the School.

Mr. Braund has also had complete supervision of the building which he planned, and in the construction of which he also contributed his extensive experience in building erection. Mr and Mrs. John Cunningham have been placed in charge of the new Sunday School.

The formal opening was simplicity itself. Supper was served by the ladies from 6 until 8 o'clock, following which there was a programme in the hall upstairs which held a capacity crowd.

Adjt. McElhinney lead in the singing of the Doxology, following with prayer and a Scriptural passage. He then introduced Ald. Green, as the Chairman of the evening.

Ald. Green said it was a great pleasure to him to preside at the opening of the building, which should prove adequate for the work for which it was intended. It had been erected only at a cost of a great deal of time, attention and money, but it was worth while, especially when so many were noticed present with their children, who would learn nothing but good.

Mayor Buller said he was pleased to assist in the glorious cause in the south suburb of the city. The time was ripe for this movement in this end of the city. His Worship said he would have been pleased to have married Byersville to the city during his term of office, but he would have to leave it to some of the present aldermen to put their arms around it. He referred to the work of Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney since their coming to Peterborough work which could not be repaid.

G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.

"I am glad to be able to show my good will toward the Army, to Adjutant McElhiney and Mr. R. C. Braund. Once in a while I feel I would like to be back in the Council. I would send the Salvation Army Band to some of the meetings to sooth the aldermen. But although you read of verbal fights they are all happy when they get out and there is nothing more to it.

You are well equipped for your work here, but-I think it will not be many years before you have to enlarge your building. This year we are most anxious about the war. There has never been a year in which the people so co-operated with one another. If the war did nothing else but teach that lesson it will have had a good result. For the past five years there has been a mad race for money and every man for himself. We have been taught in the past year that we must help one another and only in that way can we get the best out of life. Any work given freely as a sacrifice and for others has lasting effects and with it money getting is not to be compared. No one is more ready to make such sacrifices than Adjutant McElhiney. I have known him five years and I know he is always doing good work for others and is looking for more to do.

Harold Snowden expressed his congratulations upon the successful opening of the Sunday school and commended the basement provision for a gymnasium for boys.

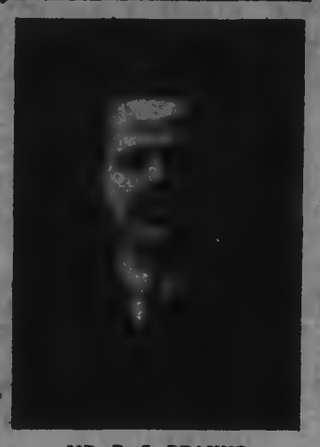
Ald. Duffus was introduced as the "apostle of Henry Ford." He said he appreciated the invitation to be present. He congratulated, in particular, Mr. Braund upon the success of his efforts, which he felt had not been light. While Canadian soldiers were writing at the front or on their way there in a great common cause it was appropriate that those who remain at home should likewise co-operate in whatever way they can, especially for good objects. The new Sunday school would prove a source of protection for the children, as they grow older. It would prepare them for after life and would help to fit them for the opportunities they would meet, teaching them principles of sobriety, industry and morality.

W. J. Byers and Ald. Saunders briefly added their congratulations and good wishes.

Chief Howard was serious for a few minutes adding his commendation and then tickled the audience with several funny stories, including the 999th Ford yarn and added the reading of "The Cremation of Sam McGee."

Bandsman Fred Gray contributed a recitation that was effectively delivered.

Ald. Edgar and Contractor J. McWilliams also spoke in the key which



MR. R. C. BRAUND

For 18 years he has been Superintendent of the Salvation Army Sunday School which has recently opened branches at Braley's and at Byersville, both in North Monaghan.

Mr. R. C. Braund.

Eighteen years ago Mr. Braund was appointed superintendent of the Salvation Army Sunday school, when its membership was only 50. To-day it is 500, with an average of 405. When he was a boy he went without Sunday school privileges until he was twelve years old, hence the work has been close to his heart.

Mr. Braund confined his remarks to the business aspect of the building. He thanked everybody who had in any way and enumerated a list of those who had contributed free work and materials. Among those mentioned were A. Hoffman, who took out the cellar, Mr. Hammond, Alf. Cummings, John Coombes, A. Puffer, nails by Campbell & Best, nails by Morgan Hardware, paint by the Higgins Hardware, John Scott one day's work, Alfred Burton, Mr. Dummitt, Reuben Moore, B. Fitchett, Kingan Hardware Co., W. J. Byers, F. Mahood, M. Langford, Fred Shambo, Tom Salvin, J. McWilliams, Wm. Payton, James Hamilton of the Peter Hamilton Co., Longford stone for foundation, Peterborough Hardware Co., between $35 and $40 worth of glass, Mr. Summan, J. French, Mindell Braund, W. Gilbert, Wm. Brownless, Coleman Bros., J. Cunningham.

Mr. Braund stated that there remained to be paid about $530.00. The tin-box collection scheme netted $177.07 and $25 also received.

Donations of Money.

It was learned to-day that some of the donors of money are R. C. Braund $100, Mrs. Hugh Waddell $50, H. A. Morrow $25, and H. J. McCannon, A. E. Saunders, W. G. Ferguson, W. J. Byers, T. Kinnear & Co., J. D. Collins, Theo. McWilliams, Wm. Crothers & Co., Kingston, John Merwin John Hopwood, Chief Howard, Richmond Studio, Jas. Currie, John McDonald Co., Toronto, Wm. Gamble, Harris Abattoir, Toronto, Geo. A. Gillespie, W. R. Turner, Ed. Huff, Canadian Oil Co., and many others.

Adjt McElhiney announced that Ald. Green had offered the bricks necessary for the brick-work, which may be commenced before winter.

The announcement was enthusiastically received.

Mrs. Lang was in charge of the supper, assisted by Mrs. Naish, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Langford, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. St. Clair, Mrs. French, Mrs. Rogers Mrs. T. Blunt and Misses Pritchard McKinley, Chard, Braund, Fitchett, Smith, Carter and Pearl Payton.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

HOLLAND IS WELL PREPARED IF SHE IS SWEPT INTO WAR

Little Dutch Kingdom's Aid to Allies Would Be of Vast Importance to the German Plans

In an article in the New York Times, John Martin, American, writes on the probability of Holland being swept into the European war. He says preparations have been made for such an event by the little Dutch kingdom. Huge imports have been made of raw and manufactured materials —at first subpected to be got into Germany—but there are stores of wheat, canned meats and other prepared food products from Britain and America at all the ports of the Zaudes Zee. She has bought ammunition also, while shoes, shirts and woollen cloth have arrived, as well as nickel, copper and gasoline, some of these latter from Canada.

Military Work Finished.

Not only has Holland prepared as far as supplies are concerned, but earthworks and trench fortifications have been constructed, along the west bank of the Meuse from Mook to Roermond, a distance of fifty miles, and on the east bank of the Meuse from Roermond to Maestricht, a distance of twenty-five miles.

Moreover, the Dutch nation has steadily, since the outbreak of the war, mobilized one section of its army after another, and has stationed them in various camps but short distances from the western German frontier and along the boundaries of northeastern Belgium.

Seemingly this has been a movement to protect Holland from invasion by Germany. But underneath all there has been a quiet and definite preparation for an aggressive movement against Germany, should opportunity offer and necessity require it.

Germany Deceived.

Germany herself was at first deceived regarding the purpose of Holland's increased importations. Germany believed that the Holland hand loved the feel of gold so much that nothing could tempt her to sacrifice her position as a supply merchant for the north of Germany.

But even Germany is realising that Holland is conserving within her own limits much of the produce which Germany expected to have passed on to her. It is for this reason that the German Admiralty gave instructions in December to the German-American friends in America to ship supplies to Bremen rather than to Rotteram and Amsterdam. It is for this same reason that the German Admiralty Office gave orders to its submarines to sink neutral supply ships coming to Holland either from Norway or Sweden or from America.

An additional fact convinced Germany that Holland was preparing for offensive action. Holland continued to call in one class of reserves after another, continued to increase her supplies of war materials at various military camps near the Northeastern German border and continued to mass her Dutch troops within striking distance of Essen, even after every statesman in Holland knew that there was no danger of a German invasion. It was self-evident that Germany had all she could do to hold her battle line in Belgium and Northeastern France.

These facts finally convinced Germany that Holland's preparations were not only of a defensive nature, but of an offensive nature also.

What Holland Can Do.

And what can Holland do?

The northern army can move east from Groningen along the railway line toward Oldenburg, Bremen and Hamburg. In this way, any German forces at Emden and Wilhelmshaven will be kept engaged so that they cannot be sent south to interfere with the intended activities of the eastern and canral armies.

The southern army can remain entrenched all the way from Bergen-op-Zoom to Endhaven, while the left wing of this army can move from behind the trenches at Maestricht and descend upon Liege both by railway and along the Meuse, thus preventing Germany from sending her troops from Belgium to interfere with the action of the central army. In this way the southern army would menace all railway communications between Liege and Germany.

The eastern army, of which a very large division is stationed at Felden, with great supply quarters at Zwolle, can move along three railway lines into Germany and also by water down the Rhine, in the direction of Munster and Wesel, and on toward the great Krupp Works at Essen, only a few miles further south and east. The Krupp Works are strongly fortified, but it is not necessary to take them. If the lines of communications between Essen and the western army are severed, that is sufficient.

One Railway Illustration.

Meanwhile the central army divisions are stationed at Arnhem, at the junction of two railway lines, and on the bank of the Rhine, at Nijmengen, and at Venloo, and Roermond. These divisions can move east and south by river and railway, and sever the railway communications between Essen and Aix-la-Chapelle. There are more than fifty miles of this railway running almost parallel to and within ten miles of the Dutch border.

While Holland is a small country, it is long and narrow; the eastern frontier bordering Germany is two hundred and thirty-six miles long. The frontier from which an advance can be made into Belgium is over sixty miles long.

The central army can move in two sections, one down the Rhine, past Wesel and Ruhrort, and the other from Arnhem to Crefeld by railroad. Both the Rhine and the railway intersect the German railway between Essen and Aix-la-Chapelle. To the movement of this central army there could be but little opposition. There is not a single German fort along the entire Dutch frontier and all the land forces of this portion of Germany have been taken to Belgium to aid in the struggle there.

If the Germans attemped to withdraw any portion of their army fighting in Belgium and France, the French, Belgium and English would have the opportunity they have long been waiting for; and if the German armies were not withdrawn to prevent the Dutch invasion, the Dutch army, in two days, even without forced marches, could cut the four railway lines running from Essen, Cologne, and Coblenz to Belgium and Luxemburg, and two million German soldiers, all of those in the western army, with the exception of those in Alsace-Lorraine, would be cut off from their sources of supplies, from their food and from their ammunition.

British Would Aid Them.

The western German army would then find itself with the English, French and Belgians in front of it and the Dutch behind it, and not only the Dutch behind it, but 700,000 English also. The massing of great numbers of English troops in the east of England during the past few months has not been for the protection of the English coast, but to be ready to aid the Dutch should Holland decide to move. From the east coast, quick transportation to Holland is possible, and then — a rapid campaign from Holland's eastern border into Germany and on toward Gremen, Hanover, and Berlin.

There would be nothing to stop them. The Germans would not dare to draw troops from their eastern frontier, as the Russians would seize the opportunity and the Cossacks would gallop into Eastern Prussia.

Could Cut Off Supplies.

Three-fourths of the western army cut off from supplies and starving would have to fight for its life both with the English, the Belgians, and the French on the west, and with the Dutch on the north and east. That portion of the German army in Alsace-Lorraine itself, unaided, would be compelled to combat one million Frenchmen.

Would it not be strange if once again this little country of the lowlands should be the deciding factor in overthrowing the doctrine of the divine right of kings?

It was the influence of a Holland general, backed by its Dutch army, that banished forever the claim of "divine right Louis" to the throne of Spain; it was Holland's influence and Dutch power that ended the reign of "divine right James" in England, and guaranteed for all time constitutional privileges to the English people; it was the Dutch who, by redeeming Holland from the control of Louis Bonaparte, made it possible for England and Germany to co-operate in overthrowing Napoleon I.

May not Holland in this great war become the determining factor in shattering forever the "divine right claim" of Wilhelm II. to dominate and to rule the world?

FOUR SONS OFF TO FRONT

Quartette of White Brothers in the 49th Battalion

There have been three or four cases of three Peterborough brothers serving the colours. Now The Examiner hears of a case of four in the sons of Mrs. Mary White, formerly of Peterborough, and more recently of Norwood and Edmonton. Her four sons, Ptes. A. R., F. S., W. J. and R. A. White, left for the front together last week with the 49th Battalion, 3rd Contingent. The first three were educated in Peterborough Business College.

A Derelict on the High Seas Contained Number of Strange Fish

A small fish which snips off the wings of flying fish was brought to New York by Purser Braun, of the Red "D" steamship Zulia, in from Venezuela and Porto Rico. He called it a "jack-knife fish" because of a sharp, spring blade on the back that could take off a man's finger or cut clean through a four-inch plug of tobacco.

When the Zulia was in latitude 33:25 north, longitude 72:15 west, on June 16 a ship's boat, bottom up, was sighted to the northeast. When men from the Zulia had righted the derelict twenty live fish were found in it which had been feeding on smaller creatures of the sea. Among them was the jack-knife fish.

The capsized boat bore the name of Edna M. Smith, a barque from St. John, N.B., that foundered in the big storm of April 1, and was brought in by the Zulia.

Saves Chum From Drowning

NEW YORK, June 25—Fourteen-year-old Lilian Dalton, of No. 368 Baltic Street, Brooklyn, yesterday, saved Marguerite McDonald from drowning in a public swimming pool at President Street and Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn. Miss Marguerite, who is sixteen and weighs twenty pounds more than the other girl, was seized with a cramp and had gone under twice when the other dived in and rescued her.

Grateful that her daughter had been restored to her, Mrs. R. McDonald, No. 20 Fourteenth Street, wrote to the Carnegie Hero Fund, naming Lillian Dalton as a worthy recipient of a medal. Mrs. McDonald has been an invalid for many years. "I do not know what the family would do without Marguerite," she said, caressing the girl's hair fondly. "It would be better for them if I should die. I myself haven't anything to reward Lillian with, but I think she is deserving of a medal or her bravery."

Miss Lilian, who is a very good swimmer, is very modest about her feat. She is a sturdy little girl with brown, curly hair and blue eyes.

"I was standing on the steps of the pool," she said, "when another girl told me Marguerite was going down. She was in the deepest part where it is nine feet or over. I just dived in and grabbed her by the back of the neck and struck out with the other hand. She almost dragged me under, but I was back of her so she couldn't struggle against me. That was all there was to it."

Believe Thaw Is Rational

NEW YORK, June 25. — Counsel for Harry Thaw in his sanity trial began the examination of the 12 jurors who in March last acquitted Thaw of conspiracy.

John T. Blackburn was the first one of the 12. Blackburn testified that all Thaw's acts in the conspiracy trial appeared to him to be the acts of a sane and rational man.

Blackburn, on cross-examination, admitted that the conspiracy jurors spent a great part of their 19 hours of deliberation in debating the question of Thaw's sanity.

John H. Holbert, a member of the second Thaw murder jury, which, in 1908, found Thaw "not guilty, but insane," was the next witness. He testified that Thaw's demeanor in the second trial impressed him as that of a rational man.

The State brought out the same disconnected note written by Thaw in the second trial, which has been displayed in every habeas corpus proceeding.

Moses Malvinski, a New York lawyer, who with his family was with Thaw last year for four weeks in a hotel at Goreham, N.H., was called.

He had ample opportunity to observe Thaw and he considered him rational.

Lawton Mackall, magazine writer, a member of the conspiracy jury, testified that he and his eleven associates believed Thaw rational.

The Right Rev. Monsignor Lake Tevers, pastor of St. James church, and chaplain of the tombs, said Thaw impressed him as a rational man.

River Drivers Had a Bath

Were Tumbled Into River When Steamer Stoney Lake Struck a Boom

An accident not arranged for on the programme occurred on the return journey of St. John's choir picnic yesterday at one of the log booms in the Otonabee. The two lumber jacks appeared to be too slow in making the opening and the 'Stoney Lake' touched the boom, sending the men head over heels into the water. The impromptu bath did not appear to be welcome, for on scrambling out the bathers shouted out threats and other things, by Capt. Dunlop, must be out for submarines when he again makes the trip.

Annual Report of O. A. College Just Issued

The fortieth annual report of the Ontario Agricultural College and Macdonald Institute, Guelph, has just been issued. The President, Dr. G. C. Creelman, gives an interesting account of his trip abroad, when he investigated agricultural conditions in Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, China, Japan, and the Philippine Islands, and came to the conclusion that Ontario is still the most attractive farming place that it is his pleasure to know. Considerable emphasis is placed upon the educational work of the district representatives in the public and high schools, and the co-operation of the Department of Education in assisting to train rural public school teachers for agricultural effort. A synopsis of the reports of the various heads of the departments to the President is also presented. These deal chiefly with the army worm, weeds, orchard work, drainage, lightning rods, field crops, and animal husbandry. This renders the report less bulky but those who desire more complete information regarding the special work of the several departments will find it issued in bulletin form from time to time. An analysis of the College roll is given together with a list of graduates of the year, and the names of those who won diplomas and certificates in the lesser courses. A financial statement of the institution is appended.

Women's Institutes.

Nearly 25,000 women, in 843 branches, make up the membership of the Women's Institutes of Ontario, the annual report of which for 1914 has just been issued. Articles in this report cover nearly every line of feminine endeavour. The efforts described or proposed relate to activities in Institutes, the Church, and community life, to Red Cross and other forms of patriotic helpfulness; and to agriculture, more especially to fruit growing, poultry raising, and bee-keeping for women. The report gives very full consideration to the home, nearly every range of domestic economy receiving attention. The study of child life is given a large place, and two addresses deal with "Children's Rights" and "Education for the Backward." "Electricity as it Relates to Women on the Farm" is the title of a practical talk by Sir Adam Beck. Considerable space is given to health topics, both of a public and an individual nature. The report reflects much credit upon the hosts of women who are helping along institute work in the Province.

FLOWERS GROW ON ICEBERGS

Flowers blooming on icebergs would certainly be a rare sight, but persons travelling in the northern portions of the Pacific and sometimes in the North Atlantic, have witnessed this strange but very beautiful spectacle.

It appears that some animals carry on their feet a growth of moss, which is deposited on the ice while it is attached to the mainland far in Polar regions. In time this decays and forms a shallow soil in which the seeds of buttercups and dandelions often find a lodging from currents of winds that doubtless caught them up in some southern clime. These take root and bloom in profusion when the great gleaming iceberg floats out to sea and is carried southward where the soft winds melts the surface and give the seed and plants the moisture they need. Such floating flower-gardens, with dazzling peaks of dark-green ice all about them, have been seen far from the home of the icebergs, which is near the Arctic Circle.

Bad Elephant Is Destroyed

NEW YORK, June 25—Gunda, five-ton of bad bull elephant, was put to death at the Bronx Park zoo. Carl E. Akeley, big game expert, was executioner. He shot Gunda through the brain with a bullet less than an inch long and weighing less than an ounce Director Hornaday said it was the neatest piece of elephant killing on record.

Gunda's death was instant and painless. Mr. Akeley came into Gunda's cell with a light sporting rifle. The great animal was securely chained. One shot, which entered Gunda's head at the only vulnerable point, midway between his eye and ear, sent him to the happy hunting ground without so much as a quiver of the trunk or a twitch of the tail.

A long record of disorderly conduct and assault with intent to kill convinced Zoo officials Gunda should be killed.

For the last five years each Summer has brought on spells of eratic frenzy which made Gunda highly dangerous.

In 1913 he attacked Keeper Walter Thuman and all but killed him. Keeper Dick Richards, at the risk of his life, prodded Gunda away with a pitch fork and saved Thuman, but Thuman will carry the scars of Gunda's tusks to his grave.

Gunda was twenty years old and was brought to the Zoo from India in 1904. He always had been ugly. For a time he was docile enough to be ridden by visitors, but seven years ago he was put in solitary confinement on account of his bad temper. Neither keeper nor another elephant has been safe in his company since. His skin and skeleton will be mounted and set up in the American Museum of Natural History by Mr. Akeley.

Twenty men passed all yesterday carving Gunda into large steaks and chops, which will be fed to the animals in the Zoo. Some of Gunda's anatomy has been taken by the College of Physicians and Surgeons for studies in pachyderm geology.

Will Regulate Coal Prices

LONDON, June 25.—Details of a Government regulation of coal prices will be announced next week, according to the Daily Mail's political correspondent. The correspondent announces that the efforts of Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, to induce the various parties interested to come to a voluntary agreement on the question of the price and the supply of coal have failed, and that Mr. Runciman will make an announcement on the subject in the House of Commons, indicating that the Government intends to take strong action.

In connection with the Munitions bill, the correspondent says it is stated that the officials of the Miners' Federation are unanimously opposed to the coal miners being included in its provisions.

Where to Write To Peterborough's Soldier Heroes

Addresses of Local Boys Who Are Wounded, Ill or Prisoners

In order that their friends and citizens generally may have an opportunity of writing to the Peterborough soldier boys who are wounded, or ill in hospital or prisoners, the Examiner will publish a list daily giving the names and addresses, where the information is available. Relatives can help by letting the Examiner know the addresses as soon as possible:

Victor, Sergt. Peter, 2nd Battalion, 1st Canadian Division, Hampstead Military Hospital, London N. W., England, (wounded).

SURGICAL SUPPLIES IS THE CHIEF NEED

Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe Still Requires a Large Quantity—What the Peterboro' Progressive Club is Doing.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I write to correct a mistake in regard to the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital at Shorncliffe. It has been stated that it is fully equipped and not in any need of supplies. That only refers to comforts, such as scarfs, caps and heavy clothes, which have now been sorted and packed away, ready for the winter, should they be needed again.

Many of te supplies are kept at Dr. Aromur's house and there are some in a room in the basement of the Westminster Palace Hotel in London, where also the Red Cross have some rooms.

There are two hospitals at Shorncliffe. One is called "The Canadian Military Hospital, Shorncliffe Camp" with Col. W. Scott as O. C., where our men who are in training, are taken when they are on the sick list, and the other is "The Queen's Canadian Military Hospital,' where men are cared for when they come from the firing line. The latter, as you know, is one of the hospitals for which we work. The new wing of this hospital is to be opened this month; with 125 more beds. There are many of our men who, when wounded, ask to be taken to this hospital; they say they are willing to lie on the floor if only they can go there. Many letters are also received from mothers pleading that their sons be cared for in this hospital, but unfortunately, owing to the shortness of funds, for further equipment, many have to be refused.

I had a letter from Mrs. Clegg who is now living at Folkestone, about four miles from Shorncliffe. She and Col. Clegg paid a visit to the hospital and had a chat with Dr. Armour, who asked her to thank the "Peterborough Progressive Club" for the supplies we had sent them. He was delighted with everything and said they were invaluable and saved them a lot of money. Since then I have heard personally from Dr. Armour, who says that their chief need at present is surgical supplies. The men are sent into the hospitals with such dreadful wounds that the dressings have to be changed many times a day, so that they need dressings and dressings, and then more dressings, and you can imagine what a large quantity is needed even for one hospital. Dr. Armour also says that the beds must be kept up, which means sheets. Theer are a great many surgical cases in the hospitals and they require many changes of sheets. I am sure the people of Peterborough and the surrounding country will be interested in hearing how the money was spent, which was raised last year for the hospital ship. It amounted, I believe, to £55,000 or about $275,000. As there was no pressing need for a hospital ship $120,000 was given to the War Office and the remainder to the Admiralty. By the suggestion of Lady Perley the War Office used its share for the purchase of ambulances and the remainder for rent for two permanent nurses' residences in England. Many who are interested in the Queen's Canadian Military Hospital regret very much that some of the money might not have been used for that institution, where the demand for more accommodation is great.

I have often been asked if our Club belongs to the Red Cross Society, and I answer 'No!' we thought we would rather be independent. We have sent, and are still sending, many dollars' worth of supplies to help in the Red Cross work. We have many willing workers, who spend many hours each week at the Armouries, making supplies for the hospital, and we would be very glad if any who care to come would visit us there on Wednesday afternoons and see all the work that has been done. It is often a matter of anxiety to the Club to know where the money is coming from to carry on our work, and I want the people of Peterborough to realise the necessity of supporting this cause. Lately I have asked some friends to give me a small amount each month, from 25 cents and up. Several have responded and that sum coming in is the only fund that we can count on as a sure thing, but it is quite insufficient to think we should be obliged to ask for money for a cause of this kind. Everyone knows how much our men are suffering and the great need there is of surgical supplies, and it seems to me that all who can give a trifle each month should come forward and offer a donation which would be much appreciated, not only by our Club, but by the men for whom we are working. Mr. Kent, the druggist, has kindly allowed us to use his store as a depository, and any money left there for the "Peterborough Progressive Club" will be handed over to us.

Yours truly,
Henriette Stuart Peck.

CLOSING OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Several Thousand Pupils Released To-day For Summer Vacation

To-day will see the closing of all the Public Schools in the city for the summer vacation. For two months at least several thousand boys and girls will forsake the restraining influence of tutorial discipline, and will seek to direct their energies in other channels. A large number of the schools report successful terms, and an exceptionally good proportion of the Fourth Book pupils passed for entrance into the High Schools.

Many Quit School for Good.

The greater part of the fourth book pupils and many of the third, who leave school to-day, leave it for the last time and will enter into the industrial, commercial or professional life of the country. Most of these have to forego further educational training for economical reasons; the wants of the home demand a larger income, and they have to begin to get money to help to keep their younger brothers and sisters. Quite a large percentage of boys will go into the ranks of industry from a sheer love of mechanics.

Stoney Lake Breezes

New Floating Bridge—Boats Very Busy—Cottages Filling Up Despite the Cold Weather

The Str. Stoney Lake passed up through Stoney Lake on Saturday bound for Lake Simcoe, where she was to carry excursions from Bolsover and Jackson's Point.

The Hon. L. H. Graham of New York has opened his cottage for the season.

Mr. J. W. McKinney spent Wednesday in Peterborough.

Mrs. Dr. Goldsmith and son George have arrived at "Forest Nook" for the summer.

"Flower City Camp," the summer home of Mr. Vincen of Rochester, N. Y., is now occupied.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edmand and son Charles and Miss Ruth Zimmerman, motored from Toronto to Kawartha Park on Tuesday.

Mr. Sid Hunter of Lakefield, is holidaying at Sandy Point.

The beautiful picnic ground at Sandy Point has been fenced in, evidently with the intention of keeping people off the grass.

Mr. James Stubbs spent Thursday in Peterborough.

Mr. Goulnlock is having a couple of fireplaces added to the equipment at "Sand Haven."

Mr. Choate, the genial proprietor of the McCracken's Landing store, is getting things into ship-shape for the rush.

Nearly all the permanent wharves are now above water. One very noticeable fault which most wharves possess is the lowness of their approaches. This renders the wharf proper quite useless for some weeks longer than necessary. For example the prize-package concrete structure at Kawartha Park though out of water for nearly a month has been of absolutely no use until a few days ago owing to the lowness of its approach.

Stoney Lake might, with considerable propriety, be called "The Lake of Leaning Flag Poles." The next time you come up on a steamer take notice to this peculiarity. It is safe to say you could count on your two hands the poles that stand straight up.

Pigeon Lake has its floating bridge, Chemong Lake has its floating bridge, and so has Stoney Lake. Not to be outdone by the rest of Kawarthadom, Mr. Pickens, the professional entertainer at McCracken's Landing, has constructed a floating bridge after his own design, and surmounted it with a high railing to safely convey the Victoria House guests from the shore to the government wharf without necessitating their going around by the road. This may be handy for the guests but it forever renders useless the only shelter that the wharf affords, but Mr. Pickens has promised to keep a bridge tender in constant attendance whose duty it will be to swing the bridge whenever he gets a signal of two whistles from a vessel seeking shelter behind the arm of the wharf.

Mrs. J. W. Carey and Mrs. Brown returned to Peterborough this week, after a pleasant holiday at "Portree."

The steamer "Manita" starts her regular up-the-canal trips July 1st.

The steamer "Islands" for the next week or ten days will tow logs for the McDonald Lumber Co.

Mr. John McSorry, of Niagara Falls, is the guest of Mr. Crawford Grier, at "Woodongo."

Z. A. Lash's Explanation of Burning of Telegrams by G. N. W.

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, June 25. — In a long statement issued this morning, President Z. A. Lash, K.C., of the Great Northwest Tel. Co., in justification of the burning of telegrams at Winnipeg, which telegrams were later demanded by the Royal Commission, says the order to burn the telegrams was made as a protection to those who had entrusted their business to the company's care. President Lash says the company has always considered it its duty to keep inviolate the confidence entrusted to it by those who use its telegraphs.

WINDSOR ARMOURIES MENACED BY DYNAMITE—Two hundred Canadian soldiers were asleep in the Armouries when the guard accidently discovered 26 sticks of dynamite and a partly burned fuse at the south end of the structure. A German spy is blamed for the attempt. At Walkerville, a few miles away, a factory working on a contract for British Army clothing was partially destroyed by dynamite.

A FORMER PETERBOROUGH BOY'S EXPERIENCE AT THE FRONT

Pte. William Stanley King Was One of Fifteen to Lead an Attack by Throwing Bombs—Wounded in Action —British Win at Close Quarters.

To be chosen as one of 15 to lead an attack by throwing bombs was the experience of Pte. Wm. Stanley King, formerly of the King Art Company of Peterborough. Pte. Wm. King enlisted in Saskatoon at the outbreak of the war. His brother, George F. King, who used to be associated with him in business, both in Peterborough and later in Saskatoon, received a letter from him, which tells of the capture of a German trench, as follows:

"I am in the best of health, but at present I am at No. 2 Canadian General Hospital with a small shrapnel wound on the back of my left hand. It is not as bad as I have often had in working on machines at home, but of course it has to be properly attended to, and for that purpose I am here. By the time you receive this I will be back with my company again. As I wrote you last week we were standing ready to move off at any time, but doing our parade as usual. Friday afternoon after being paid, five of us in my company were told to report at once at battalion headquarters and in full marching order. There we were joined by five men from each of the other three companies in the battalion, and we marched to brigade headquarters, where a detail from the other three battalions in the brigade were waiting.

"We were given a short address as being chosen for this work, and were informed that we were to take part in an attack that night as hand grenade and bomb throwers. So away we went without any supper about eight miles to the firing line, where the 10th Battalion of Canadians had taken the first line of German trenches the previous night. On Friday night we were to take a German communication trench. Our artillery shelled it for three hours, and at 8:30 we advanced. The grenade throwers first and B Company of the 16th Battalion followed us.

Germans Fled.

The Germans played their machine guns on us till we got close to the trench, and then they 'beat it.' As soon as the grenade htrowers got into a portion of the trench we advanced up the trench to the right, throwing our bombs ahead of us and clearing out the traverse in front as we went. We did not have much opposition as when a bomb burst in one of the traverses it didn't leave anyone in much of a position to fight. Therefore we had no trouble in taking the remainder of the trench As we did not have enough men to hold the whole trench we had to barricade some distance from the end to prevent the Germans from advancing down it and in turn driving us back.

"We took our turn in staying on watch and throwing an occasional bomb on the trench to warn the Germans that we were still there.

Captured an Officer

"Saturday morning three of us went scouting up the unoccupied part and captured a German officer. If he had been armed, we would not have paid any attention to his cries for mercy, but would have finished him on the spot, but we sent him up the trench in charge of one of the boys. As he proceeded up the trench he saluted all the boys in turn. We heard later that we had done well to take him prisoner as we got some valuable information from him at headquarters.

"About seven o'clock that morning I went to the left of the trenches to get some grub and the Germans came down one of their smaller communication trenches and tried to drive us out. We beat them back, however, with machine gun fire, rapid fire, and bombs. They then started to shell us out, and how they did shell! It was dreadful, the number of our boys they got. They shelled us for about three hours, and some officer passed the word to retire, but he was not in charge and before very many of us got out the senior officer stopped the men from coming and sent word for those who had done so to return, as we had to hold the trench at all cost. We came back, and were in time to keep the Germans from taking any part of the trench.

The Dauntless Three.

"We were a short time quiet and that we heard that the Germans were attacking us on the right. An officer came down looking for bomb throwers, on the double, so I called to a couple of the first brigade men to come on, and away up to the right we went. We were just in time, too, as the Germans came down the trench in very large numbers with a big bunch of bomb-throwers leading.

"There were just three of us at one time that understood the bombs, and we kept running up about twenty yards from the barricade throwing our bombs and running back. I can tell you our practice in throwing baseball came in useful then. All afternoon they kept trying to drive us out but we kept them back. All this time a platoon of the 10th Battalion was lining the front parapet keeping up a rapid fire. This was about three o'clock. The lieutenant in charge gave orders for the men to retire, but stated that the bomb-throwers would stay and cover their retirement and that the machine guns would cover ours. So for about ten minutes there were just three of us left at that end of the trench. We made up our minds that we would hold the trench as long as we had bombs.

"Before we finished them the riflemen were all sent back with orders to hold the trench at all costs and we did. There were a lot of them lost in the attempt. However the Germans were going back and our reinforcements were coming in, and I came away wounded. They were going to make another attempt that night to take some more trenches.

Germans Well Supplied.

"The Germans can't face the British when it comes to close fighting. We read a lot in the papers that the Germans were running short of shells but we soldiers know differently. They waste more than our artillery but make plenty of hits. It looks to us as if it were British shells that are scarce.

"It was remarkable how quickly they attend the wounded. Once they reach the first dressing station they are dressed and sent in motor ambulances a few miles to a hospital, and if reuired the wounds are dressed again and the men taken still further away. Everyone seems to be willing to help and comfort you. Of course the shifts vary according to the seriousness of the case. A patient whom it is fatal to move is left at the first hospital, but others are cleared right away to make room for others who will follow. I consider myself extremely lucky to have struck a Canadian hospital. The doctor in charge of my ward is Dr. McLeod from New Edinburgh, Ottawa. We know several people in common.

"Don't worry about me as I am enjoying life as I never did before. I know that I am doing the right thing now, and the Lord is watching over me.

A REVENUE OF $500 FOR THE CITY

That is the Amount a Local Junk Dealer Would Pay for Privilege of Collecting Refuse of Commercial Value at the Incinerator.

A local junk dealer has verbally signified his intention of paying the city $500 a year for the privilege of collecting all the rags and other refuse of commercial value that finds its way into the incinerator.

Sanitary Inspector Spence, who was the recipient of this information, proposes to introduce the matter at the next meeting of the Property Committee. It may be possible that the Incinerator might become revenue producing as the public market is at the present time. The latter will produce a revenue of $760 for the year.

It is claimed that the man who formerly operated the Incinerator frequently disposed off rags, etc., at a price that made the work remunerative. In addition to this there is the value of a number of hides that are taken from horses and cattle which are consumed at the incinerator from time to time.

At the present time it costs the city fourteen dollars a week for labour with which to operate the plant. In the past it has cost more than that. The present holder of the position has agreed to do the work for the above named sum each week without extra cost to the city should additional labour be required.

BIG CROWD ASSURED FOR TO-MORROW'S GAMES

Classics vs. East Citys....2 p.m.
Thistles vs. Empires.....4 p.m.

This is the programme for to-morrow's double-header in the City Baseball League, and it looks like one of the best bills of the season. East City claim they have chased the jinx and will show it by beating the Classics to-morrow. If they do it will be the first time out of three starts that they have been able to lower the colours of Manager Vic Fowler's team into the dust. The Empires will give the Thistles a battle royal in the second game.

The standing is as follows:

HASTINGS WON FROM MILLBROOK

Peterboro Lacrosse Club must Beat Campbellford Here to Stay in Running

In Millbrook yesterday, Hastings won from Millbrook by 11 to 1 in a hard game. Hastings had the experience, being nearly all old players, while Millbrook had a bunch of youngsters who are coming strong, but lack the ability to get goals. Ed. Dillon was referee and kept the game well in hand.

	Won.	Lost.
Campbellford	2	0
Hastings	2	1
Peterborough	1	1
Millbrook	0	3

Peterborough to stay in the running must win from Campbellford here on the 1st of July, and if they play the lacrosse they are playing at practice they should have no trouble. They will practice to-night at Riverside, to-morrow afternoon at Central park and Monday and Tuesday night at the Oval, and every player is requested to be out.

GOLF

Those players for the Stratton Trophy who have not yet handed in their cards, are reminded that they only have until the 20th of June, inclusive, to play the first round. After that date the draw for the second round will be made.

All cards must be handed in to Mrs. Head.

C. H. PENNEFATHER, Captain.

The Captain's Prize.

The captain's prize is to be played under match conditions. In the medal round the players are allowed to pick their ball out of a difficult place and count 2 extra strokes, but in match play the ball may not be touched, it must be played out.

All stymies are to be played. A ball is not stymed unless it is six inches or more from the other ball.

The first draw to be played by Saturday night is as follows:

Miss H. Denison vs. Mrs. H. Thompson; Mrs. Matthews vs. Miss B. Cameron; Miss Collins vs. Miss Dumble; Miss N. Davidson vs. Mrs. Knight; Mrs. Goodwill vs. Mrs. W. H. Hill; Mrs. Trebilcock vs. Miss A. Hill; Miss Ola Cavanah vs. Mrs. N. Hatton; Miss J. Hill vs. Mrs. Suckling; Miss M. Eastwood vs. Mrs. Aylmer; Miss R. Cavanah vs. Miss E. Morrow.

Thursday afternoon the finals in the Stratton trophy was won by Mrs. Aylmer Miss N. Hatton being runner-up. The scores were:

On first 9 holes—Mrs. Aylmer 53, Miss Hatton 61.

On second 9 holes—Mrs. Aylmer 52, Miss Hatton 59.

Total—Mrs. Aylmer 105, Miss Hatton 120.

Mrs. Aylmer allowed Miss Hatten a handicap of 11, leaving Mrs. Aylmer 4 strokes up.

The medal round was won by Miss Amy Hill.

J. HARSTONE, Captain.

LAWN BOWLING

Every afternoon and evening, the members enjoy the pleasure of a game on their green on Brock Street. The green is so conveniently situated, the members can enjoy a game, and still be within call.

The members all seem to be highly pleased with the fine condition of the green.

The green committee has amply proved its skill and executive ability, the results they obtained reflects great credit upon them. And all the members are delighted to give expression to their appreciation.

There are some peculiar circumstances in connection with our green committee, including the chairman, secretary and every member of the committee. They find no trouble in combing their hair. There is not a hair on the whole committee. And not one of them is married, so you cannot blame their non-existing better halves for pulling it out.

Every man is an enthusiastic fisherman, hunter and all-round good sport and also strange to say every man won a curling match last winter and when they skip bowling rink it is "woe betide the other fellow."

It is expected that the "Fob Matches" will begin next week.
